The usual loyal toasts having been honoured, Mr. John Murray stated that the present gathering must be regarded rather as a family party than a formal banquet. He proposed the toast of 'Albemarle Street,' and in a speech full of interesting reminiscences went back to the old trade-sale dinners, and the attempt which he himself made after his father's death to revive these gatherings. Albemarle Street was ingrained in his brother and himself; they had grown to it, and it had engaged all their interests and energies. Albemarle Street was the primary motive of that gathering because the house was something more than the mere members of it at any given time, and he hoped that it would be continued for a very long time to come. When he first came to Albemarle Street the staff numbered nine, and now they numbered considerably over thirty. It fell to the lot of his brother and himself after their father's death to reorganise the house, and of course the very fidelity and comradeship of those who worked for them made it difficult. When he told them that the firm had this year played its first cricket match, and beaten Messrs. Longman's team, they would understand how complete the reorganisation was. Albemarle Street had many traditions and old associations to keep up, and there were things which a new house could do but which an old house could not, for the principle of noblesse oblige obtained amongst them.

Mr. G. W. Prothero acknowledged the toast on behalf of the editorial staff. He said that when he first entered the house he felt like a member of a happy family, and this family feeling was due to the principles on which Mr. Murray had carried on the business. They would all agree that during the present régime the traditions and prestige of the house had been kept up to as high a level as they had ever seen. They felt they belonged not only to a great and honourable profession, but to a house which represented all that was high and most inspiring in the profession.

Mr. L. H. Bliss replied for the commercial side of the firm, and remarked that John Murray V. should realise when he came to take the reins from his father what he owed to his father and uncle.

Mr. R. Prothero, in proposing the health of John Murray V., said it was twenty-one years ago that his first article appeared in the Quarterly Review, and so he and John Murray V. came of age in the same year (laughter). That was probably the unconscious reason why Mr. Murray selected him to propose the toast, but the conscious reason for the selection was that he was a friend of twenty-one years' standing. He was proud to know that the name of Murray stood higher in the world of letters than it did even ten years ago. The name of Murray was one which was bound up with a noble chapter in the history of human thought. It recalled great traditions and an historic past; it was associated with names of men whose works and lives the country could not afford to let die. For the English-speaking race all over the world it meant a reputation long established and unsullied by unfair or dishonourable dealing. It was a name which stood as a guarantee for rectitude and uprightness in all the relations that a publisher could bear to his authors or the public. No house, however, could live by traditions only, and it would be the duty of John Murray V., like his predecessors before him, to adapt himself to modern needs without swerving a hair's breadth from the ancient standard of honour. It was in a crisis that John Murray V. would feel the inestimable value of the strength and inspiration which he will derive from the possession of a great inheritance. That John Murray V. might have the courage and enterprise, the health and the strength to maintain the great traditions of the house and, if possible, to enhance them, was the fervent wish of every one who was present that night.

JOHN MURRAY V.

The toast was enthusiastically received.

Mr. John Murray V. said that he was there under false pretences, as he really came of age on June 12, in circumstances which he hoped would not be repeated. He was then in the examination schools at Oxford, under Mr. Fletcher, who, though he looked so happy and pleasant to-night, was then subjecting him to torture. He continued that in years to come, when he had worked in Albemarle Street, he would have much more to say about it. He felt that this dinner was more or less his business christening, and he was glad that there were so many of what he might call his business godfathers present. In years to come he would be brought into close business contact with those present, and he trusted, if ever their relations became strained, they would all remember that night.

Mr. H. Newbolt submitted the health of Mr. Hallam Murray, Mr. A. R. Tritton that of the ladies, and other toasts followed.

Young Mr. Murray, who is an officer in the Scottish Troop of Horse, took a second in the Honours School of Modern History at Oxford last term. We are sure all readers of the P.C. will join us in wishing him a happy and prosperous career.

BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

The general meeting of the members of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, to be held on Thursday evening, October 19, is a very important one, as it is called for the purpose of considering the proposed complete amendment of the rules. Place, 56 Old Bailey. Time, 7.15.

THEFTS FROM PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

We regret to see from the report of Mr. Frank Pacy, Chief Librarian of the City of Westminster Public Libraries, that while the losses by default of borrowers from the libraries generally have been trivial, the reference library of St. Martin's has been very badly used, 320 volumes having been stolen and 313 rendered imperfect and otherwise damaged. This is apparently since the late Librarian of St. Martin's Library in January last reported that forty-five volumes, many of them valuable books, had been stolen. It is not surprising to find that 'in face of this experience the committee have felt compelled to recommend the council to withdraw a privilege which has been so grossly abused, and arrangements have been made for more frequent checkings of the stock of books in the future.'

This is the worst instance of abuse of the Free Library that we remember since a famous American case, in which most valuable and scarce works were stolen and sold again to the library; which is on a par with the experiences of an angler who put up a notice that he wanted some more live trout for his water—the poachers came in the night, netted his preserves, and quietly sold the angler his own fish.

Mention the 'P. C.'—Our Readers who order books, &c. they see mentioned or advertised in the Publishers' Circular will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

SKETCHES FROM THE DIARY OF A COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER OF THE MIDDLE OF LAST CENTURY.*

SHE who lives daily subject to such annoyance, almost without enjoying the pure breath of heaven, and hardly ever emerging beyond the threshold of the inn—whose unintermitting occupation, distending the muscles, increasing the size of the ankle and width of the foot, while ascending and descending a flight of steps from the kitchen to the travellers' room and bar, and back again into the kitchen to inhale the sickening repetition of the steaming, oft-cooked soups and joints, and the more foul tongue of the coarse and vulgar cook—claims at least our respect. She is seldom dejected, however; and her neat and cleanly appearance and invariable good humour constantly cheer us; for although her once rosy-tinged and healthy looking cheek is now blanched, and has long lost its colour in our service, it has not lost its power to charm. Yet although her spirit may be willing, her flesh is evidently weak, and indicates not only unceasing labour by day, but wearing, wearying fatigue by night. Until after the ''witching hour,' she is enveloped in smoke; the air of the room—the only air she breathes—is impregnated with the effluvia of principee, Dutch-cut, and Havannah, till she is all but smoke-dried. Well, therefore, does she deserve our sympathy, and well does she merit her hardly-earned pittance of threepence per meal, or sixpence per diem. Yet she is playful, without descending to immodesty; and there is a pardonable trifling gaiety in her manner, and humorous tendency in her words and actions, mingled with so much good sense, that the most licentious are kept at a proper and respectful distance, and totally disarmed by her decorous firmness and becoming confidence. She is ever alive, nothwithstanding, to our inclinations and desires, and almost before the wish has been expressed she cheerfully supplies our wants.

Such is one specimen of a worthy and respected waitress; and if all are not equally so, let the commercial body take the condemnation to themselves; for a trifling, frivolous bearing, and a looseness of expression have frequently produced a laxity of morals much to be condemned, but which I am happy to find, from the perpetual onward movement, is giving place to a much more correct, moral, and desirable state of things.

A MEMBER OF THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS— MR. OBADIAH BEAVER.

To-day I have had a renewed opportunity of witnessing the quiet, inoffensive, and unostentatious demeanour of a member of the Society of Friends, who numbers with our body. His correctness of deportment, mild, but manly and gentlemanly bearing, plainness of speech, quaintness of manner, and genuine propriety, are well worth emulating, and eminently deserving of notice, were it only for the sake of example. They happily demonstrate, that morality, and even piety, are not incompatible with an active commercial occupation; for our 'friend' pursues the even tenor of his way with indefatigable industry and assiduity, and with a consistency fully equal to his exertions; one decided unanimity of purpose and action governing all his business transactions, and controlling his physical and intellectual man. He endeavours to steal through the world unobserved, yet not unobserving; rendering full justice to his own situation and the merits and deserts of others, yet studying to conceal his own: and, so far as prominence of position is concerned, contented to be a figure of no effect, or satisfied with steering in the middle but most respected way, desirous, 'while living in Rome, to comply with the usages of Romans,' and conforming, with readiness and ease, to the customs and practices of the road. For he is ever alive to the interests, comforts, and happiness of his associates, and is never more happy than when able to contribute to their well-being.

In argument our 'friend' is in possession of a modest assurance: firm and decisive, but not overbearing; confident, without being rude or impudent. Aided by unostentatious eloquence and truth, and language distinguished by brevity, point, and force, he never fails to prove attractive, impressive, instructive, and persuasive. Aware of the fallibility of our nature, he refrains from frankly and fearlessly asserting his own sentiments, so far even as might be consistent in carrying out his own views. He wisely rather acquiesces in and assents to those avowed by others, when not hostile to the cause of truth; deeming it imprudent to be litigious where men are fixed in principle and intention, and acknowledging, in its fullest extent, a toleration of all that appertains to personal as well as civil and religious liberty. His coolness and apparent unconcern render him infinitely preferable to a busybody; for he steadily pursues his avocation, and seemingly regardless of surrounding objects, without giving offence and without raising enemies. A certain degree of outward seriousness in his looks and actions imparts dignity to his manners. Yet vivacity has the ascendancy in his conversation; and wit, restrained within proper limits and seasoned with a due respect for the feelings of his associates, renders him at once companionable, friendly, and generally acceptable. Nothing, however, allows him to excuse or extenuate the least breach of morality, or suffers him to assent to, or acquiesce in, anything frivolous, personal, or criminal, even if uttered for mere diversion or amusement. His disapproval is evinced by his holding himself aloof, or not taking any notice of the offensive effusion; knowing it to be useless formidably to oppose, or endeavour to correct, where men of many minds and every shade of temperament congregate, and possess equal authority; men who are—at least in their own estimation—accountable only to themselves and to Him who seeth as men see not, and who exerciseth the power to reprove, chastise, and reward.

A WESTMORLAND STORY.

'THE Fothergills of Ravenstonedale' is the title of a book which Mr. Heinemann announces for the 17th inst. It tells of a family of gentlemen farmers in Westmorland, all of whom were distinguished in various ways. Much of the book consists of quaint and interesting letters, dating from 1722 to 1769, written chiefly by George Fothergill, describing the undergraduate life at Oxford of that period. Mrs. McLaughlin edits the book, which is illustrated with portraits.

TRADE NOTES AND CHANGES.

MESSRS. JAMES WILLING, JUN., LTD., newspaper advertisement contractors, have removed their West End branch from Piccadilly to 73 Knightsbridge, London, S.W.

MR. T. A. NEWTON, who was for some twenty years with Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co.—for twelve as their town and south-coast representative—and later with Messrs. Riviere as manager, has been appointed sub-postmaster of the Coldharbour Lane, S.E., Post-office. Mr. Newton was well-known in both the town and country trade. For many years a director of the Booksellers Provident and also the Retreat. For Messrs. Riviere he travelled the United Kingdom, Channel Islands, and Continent. His connection with American buyers was also very widespread. He has recently joined Messrs. Finch & Co., Limited, as advisory in their production department, in which position he will continue to act.

Letters to the Editor

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.]

VALUE OF THE 'PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR' TO SUBSCRIBERS AND ADVERTISERS.

DEAR SIR,—I was very much interested in reading your editorial article to-day, and venture to take the liberty of supporting what you say in reference to publishers who, while availing themselves of your free announcement columns, rarely or never pay for an advertisement. I could name publishing firms whose advertisements I have often looked for in your pages, and in vain; and I can assure those firms that the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR is invaluable and largely used, not only by booksellers, but by librarians. I go to the P.C. because it has the biggest and latest announcements of new books, and often, having noticed a new book published, desire to find out more about it without waiting weeks and weeks for the reviews of the more sedate literary journals. If the book is not in your advertising columns, it means a hunt through other journals, sometimes resulting in a fruitless and annoying waste of time. In our library we spend something like £500 per annum on new books (and ours is not a very large town), and we like our books hot from the press. I am now compiling two lists of books for our autumn additions—one list from your announcement columns of books actually published—and another from your advertisement pages of books announced. I am sincerely glad that 'The English Catalogue' is to be continued; it is invaluable.

I hope your appeal to publishers to advertise will meet with a ready response.

Just one more point—you invite suggestions; would it be at all practicable to print two separate lists of publications of the week—one of new books and the other of new editions, reprints, &c.? Possibly there are difficulties in the way that I am not aware of. With compliments,

I am, yours very truly,
A Yorkshire Librarian.

[We are much obliged to our correspondent, who is, we see, librarian and curator of a public library in an important Yorkshire town. The suggestion he makes shall be considered, but we fear there are great difficulties in the way.—Ed.]

'THE SUCCESSFUL BOOKSELLER.'

Gentlemen,—You will be pleased to hear that we have had a very gratifying response to the advertisement of our forthcoming work entitled 'The Successful Bookseller,' which appeared in your issue last week. In fact, we are more than gratified with the result, and as the strictly-limited edition is being rapidly exhausted, those who desire to secure copies should apply at once. Yours faithfully,

The Successful Bookseller Co.

LONG-WINDED CUSTOMERS.

Sir,—I have noticed correspondence in the Publishers' Circular for some weeks re defaulters in sending books, after being paid for, and I think you may allow me to say a word on another side. I send you a postcard, dated August 22, from one of your largest advertisers. I, after sending the book, mentioned the fact to another bookseller, and imagine my surprise when he said 'It will take you two years to get the money.' I waited a month, and then asked for payment, with the result as mentioned by my informant —viz. I should get no answer. My contention is that there is very little difference in not getting the money at all and having to wait two years, or even six months. I buy books purposely, in many cases, to sell to advertisers in the Publishers' Circular, and, of course, I have to pay cash for same. This does not seem to be taken into account by the firm in question, and (to a lesser extent) by some others, and you would be doing a favour to me and others if you woul express an opinion as to purchasers of this kind, and also mention what you consider a fair time to elapse before expecting payment.—Yours very truly, J. Smith.

[The only way to deal with people who want two years', or even three months' credit on a cash transaction is to refuse to supply except for cash.—Ed.]

PARTICULARS ABOUT A TRANSLATOR WANTED.

Dear Sir,—A friend who has a copy of Alexander Greave's New Testament, 'The Gospel of God's Anointed, the Glory of Israel,' &c., A.D. 1827, is desirous of learning something about him, as he was a tradesman in Fetter Lane and a learned man. I was inquiring of the librarian of the C.M.S., and he suggested my writing to you as likely to afford me some information.—I am, dear sir, yours truly, W. A. Wace.

HENRY RUSSELL'S SONGS.

Sir,—Can you tell me whether the songs of Henry Russell (1813–90) have been published in a collected form, and by whom?

I am, Your obedient servant.
211 High Holborn. John F. Bullock.

[A collection was published years ago by Mr. C. Sheard, Musical Bouquet office, Holborn. It included the most popular of his songs, with portraits, illustrations, &c. We know of no other.—Ed.]

FALSE WRITTEN REFERENCES.

Sir,—May I have space in your widely circulated journal to insert a letter of caution to your readers against a method of obtaining references, for clerkships &c., which has come to my notice, and which, if pursued without check or warning, may prove of considerable danger to the commercial community? The modus operandi is much as follows:

A had probably lost his character or belongs to a questionable class, and is desirous of gaining admission to a business house. He has, at some time previous to the application, visited a private hotel or boarding house at a certain number in a street of some town or city—usually at some distance from the place where the situation is applied for, so that the probability of a personal application is remote; he there represents himself to be a member of some firm who may have letters addressed there in the firm's name, and requests that any letters coming there so addressed should be handed or forwarded to him. In applying, therefore, for a situation he gives this firm as a reference; for example, Messrs. Brown & Co., merchants, 4 Third Street, Nottingham, or F. B. Green, accountant and auditor. Any letter or letters thus addressed are promptly handed or forwarded to him by the unsuspecting landlord. A, having already provided himself with well-printed note headings or memo. forms of Brown & Co. or F. B. Green, with equal promptitude dictates to some second person or changes his handwriting for the purpose, a highly satisfactory and even eulogistic testimonial, which he contrives to get reposted at Nottingham, and which so completely fits the wants of the advertiser that, to the exclusion of all deserving and honourable candidates, A is quickly installed in the situation and the confidence of his new employers. Nothing very remarkable occurs in his career until the crisis arrives and serious defalcations are discovered, but not before A has entirely disappeared and is still alive to play his pranks elsewhere; and then, when too late, his employers find out that Brown & Co. or F. B. Green was only a fiction, and the 'excellent testimonial' the concoction of A.

In the present day of advanced knowledge, but not always of advanced morals, there is nothing more easy than to have an address almost anywhere, and equally so to obtain printed headings; hence the urgent necessity, in the important matter of references, to be absolutely certain of their bona fides, and especially that the addresses from whence they profess to hail cannot possibly be other than the correct names and addresses of the firms or persons, and penned by the principals, represented upon the letters in question.

Faithfully yours,
T. Thatcher.

Notices of Books

From Mr. J. W. Arrowsmith.—'Our Joshua: Radical, Octogenarian, Celebrity, and Pup-Breeder; according to Me, his Wife,' edited by Theodora Wilson Wilson. There is humour of a sort in this volume of the 'Bristol Library,' but we doubt whether it is sufficiently cosmopolitan to attract a large number of readers. In the northern counties, however, the brochure should command a fair success, since it deals with local phases of thought and expression which to the initiated should prove amusing.

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—'Southwark Cathedral, formerly the Collegiate Church of St. Saviour, otherwise St. Mary overie: a Short History and Description of the Fabric, with some Account of the College and the See,' by George Worley. Within small compass the author has been able to condense an interesting and reliable history of the old church at Southwark, with a description of its architectural distinctions, internal and external. The volume is profusely and well illustrated.

From Messrs. Bemrose & Sons, Ltd.—'The Confessional,' by the Rev. Frederick Meyrick M.A. This is a pamphlet that may confidently be recommended to those who are opposed to the introduction of auricular confession in the Church of England. The author deals with his subject from an historical view point, a source of inquiry which in his opinion 'proves that the purest and noblest ages of the Church were entirely free from the benumbing influence of auricular confession and absolution, which—perfectly unknown for six centuries—was laid as a yoke upon the neck of Christians in the thirteenth century by the most arrogant of the Popes of Rome.'

From the same.—'The Harmony of the Proper Psalms for the Fasts and Festivals of the Church Year: a Devotional Exposition,' by Melville Scott, M.A. The point of view from which the Proper Psalms are regarded in this volume is their adaptability to Christian worship. Each Psalm appointed for Christmas Day, Ash Wednesday, Good Friday, Easter Day, Ascension Day, and Whit Sunday is given in full, the text being followed by an analysis and, in most cases, a few concise remarks on its suitability for the occasion.

From the Caxton Press, Ltd.—'The Bodie Book,' by Walford Bodie. The author of this book is now well known to the public from his demonstrations on the music-hall platform, and in this little volume he has set out something of the details of his system and of the reasons that underlie it. No one that has read Reichenbach, Wallace, Braid, or any other of the authoritative books on hypnotism, can doubt that it can do all that Bodie claims for it in connection with his cures; no one can nowadays disbelieve in bloodless surgery—nor that there is some healing power in high-voltage electricity; and it is by a combination of these that Bodie claims to effect his cures—aided, or rather guided and impressed, however, by personal magnetism. To those who have studied the subject of hypnotism—and it is to this that the greater part of the book is devoted—there is nothing new, but much that is interesting; those who have not yet seriously considered it will find much food for thought and a desire to know more of this uncanny science. Dr. Bodie has the showman's instinct very fully developed; but we regret the startling cover in which he has thought best to clothe his book, as tending to scare the thoughtful reader from opening it. We have seen Dr. Bodie on the platform and can appreciate the studied self-restraint which he has exercised in dealing with his opponents. The book is written for the million, and, apart from its serious side, there are many interesting experiences and experiments.

From Messrs. James Duffy & Co., Ltd., Dublin.—'The M'Hardy-Flint Elocutionist for School and Platform: Poetic, Dramatic, and Humorous Selections,' edited by Mary M'Hardy-Flint. The contents of this volume, culled from the works of Shakespeare, Charles Dickens, Tennyson, Longfellow, and others, not forgetting the fair editress, are for the most part selected with wise discrimination, and a point in their favour is their variety.

From Mr. Henry Frowde.—'The Poetical Works of Percy Bysshe Shelley.' Oxford Edition. Edited with Notes by Thomas Hutchinson, M.A. This edition contains all Shelley's ascertained poems and fragments of verse that have hitherto appeared in print, and the text is the result of a fresh collation of the early editions, and some of the MSS. which have recently become available. The work is well printed, and the notes adequate; it is a marvel of cheapness, and deserves, and will no doubt obtain, a ready sale.

From Mr. L. Upcott Gill.—'Practical Ventriloquism and its Sister Arts: a Revelation in Vocal Phonetics,' by Robert Ganthony. This book reminds us a little of the conjurer's explanation how his tricks are performed (which probably leaves the listener as mystified as when he began); but so far as ventriloquism can be taught by printed instructions it may be regarded as a reliable guide. For those who have mastered the rudiments of the art there are some useful suggestions in regard to the management of their 'business,' and these are enforced by numerous illustrations.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—'The Inner Chamber and the Inner Life,' by the Rev. Andrew Murray, D.D. Dr. Murray lays great stress upon the importance of private communion with God—a period spent in the solitude of one's own room when the heart is laid bare before the Almighty. It is the lack of secret prayer, he points out, the neglect of that hidden life, 'rooted in Christ,' 'rooted and grounded in love,' that explains the feebleness of the Christian life to resist the world and its failure to bring forth fruit abundantly. All the essays of this little volume go to enforce this central idea, and the author discourses with eloquent earnestness on the need of quiet and retirement, the true spirit of prayer, the devotional reading of the Bible, and other subjects closely bound up with the Christian life.

From Mr. John Long.—'Jane Shore,' by J. E. Preston Muddock. The history of Jane Shore is, perhaps, little known to readers of the present day in any detail, and this page from history, retold by an able writer, makes a fascinating story. As a picture of the times, with London and the Tower in the foreground, it would alone be interesting; as a character-sketch of King Edward IV., Warwick the King-maker, and Richard, it helps to interpret and recall history; but principally it will appeal as a good story of the woman who rose from a merchant's wife to being a king's mistress, and fell again to poverty if not to a premature death.

From the same.—'The Opal Serpent,' by Fergus Hume. Without any great distinction or literary ability, Mr. Hume continues to give us thrilling stories of crime, mystery, and detection. Here we have a horrible murder, the dead man's lips being fastened together by the opal serpent brooch, and after a long hunt and many clues we find the murderer in possibly the least suspected character. Some irritating misprints in the earlier part of the book are annoying, and the author would do well to read his proofs more carefully. To have to re-read a passage to find the author's meaning does not help a story of this kind.

From Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son.—'A First History of England,' by C. Linklater Thomson. Part VI., 1689–1820. Miss Thomson evidently finds that as she progresses with her history the difficulties of compilation increase. Her material, in other words, becomes greater, and the necessity for condensation and selection more pressing. But she grapples with her difficulties most valiantly, and the same pleasant, readable style and clearness of narrative are happily apparent as in previous volumes of this history. There are numerous illustrations.

From Messrs. Methuen & Co.—'Oxford,' described by Robert Peel and H. C. Minchin, with one hundred illustrations in colour. This volume, though no doubt useful in directing the reader's attention to the more important architectural distinctions of Oxford, has nothing of the ordinary character of a guide book. Its purpose, as stated in the Preface, is to set forth the chief beauties of the university and city as they have appeared to several artists, with such a running commentary as may explain the pictures, and may indicate whatever is most interesting in connection with the scenes which they represent. Six of the illustrations are derived from Ackerman's 'Oxford,' but the remainder are reproduced from paintings by living artists, the chief contributor being Mr. W. Matthison, and the others Mrs. C. R. Walton, Mr. Walter S. S. Tyrwhitt, Mr. Bayzant, and Miss E. S. Cheesewright. The joint efforts of authors and artists have resulted in a very attractive volume.

From Mr. John Murray.—'The Beautiful Lady,' by Booth Tarkington. The author of that popular dramatic romance, 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' has in the novel now before us presented his readers with a study of a Neapolitan gentleman of reduced circumstances, by name Signor Ansolini, who in his misfortunes hires himself to the manager of a Parisian theatre as a public advertisement of an original type. In this discredited occupation Ansolini, however, one day, while sitting at one of the small tables under the awning of the Café de la Paix, has the good luck to obtain the commiseration of Alice Landry, a tender-hearted American lady, and subsequently through the friendly patronage of two wealthy countrymen and acquaintances, a competence in the future is assured to him. The novel contains some good characterisation in addition to a fresh and most interesting plot, and it is effectively illustrated.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—'Captain Maroon, by Robert Stuart. This stirring story of Georgian times concerneth the adventures of David Trehern, of the Moat Farm, on the west coast of Cornwall, who is a tenant farmer on the estate of Sir Frederick Poltherick and his twin-brother James. There is little love lost betwixt these brothers, owing to the latter's recognised intimacy with well-known smugglers on that coast. At length the ill-will existing between the two culminates in a desperate quarrel and the murder of Frederick. Trehern's friendship for the smooth-tongued James makes him conceal the fratricide and aids his subsequent escaped from justice. As some recompense for Trehern's generous solicitude, Poltherick helps him by a crafty and preconcerted plan in the difficult task of securing Elizabeth Truscott for wife, and a bargain is likewise struck whereby Trehern is falsely made the unwilling abettor in nefarious transactions. The remaining portion of the book relates to piratical cruises undertaken by Poltherick under the assumed name of Captain Maroon. Among his daring exploits is the capture of the 'Queen Mab,' containing much treasure in the shape of jewels, the murder of the crew, and sinking of the vessel. The dastardly doings of this bold sea-rover and blustering buccaneer are eventually brought to an end by the seizure of his storm-stricken ship by one of the King's frigates, and he speedily meets a well-merited doom. Trehern thus gets the desired 'quittance of the oath.' Such are the main incidents of a straightforward book of adventure that is well worth reading.

From George Newnes, Ltd.—'Puvis de Chavannes.' Reading the highly appreciative Introduction which M. Arsène Alexandre has supplied to this volume of 'Newnes's Art Library,' one cannot but think that if Puvis de Chavannes was somewhat misunderstood during his lifetime the pendulum has now swung to the other side and there is a danger of his work being over-estimated. Such expressions as 'his genius appears upon the horizon of art like a mountain peak towering above the clouds and mist,' though of a fine sound, are surely a little misplaced. However, a fair opportunity is afforded the public of judging of the artist's talent by the sixty-four illustrations included in this volume, most of which are reproduced from the original paintings with great skill, though the effect of the colouring, of course, is lost.

From the Religious Tract Society.—'Heroes and Pioneers: Lives of Great Leaders in Thought and Action.' Edited by W. Grinton Berry, M.A. In the preparation of this book the editor's sole aim was to provide heroic stories of men whose celebrated achievements 'as pioneers in science and exploration, in reform and philanthropy,' were also combined with the graces of the Christian character. Such a distinction was in their case gained only 'along the path of duty—their constant companions were Toil, Sacrifice, and Faith.' The illustrious examples set before us by the varied contributors to the volume comprise, among others, General Gordon, the Hero of Khartoum; Michael Faraday, the Pioneer of Electrical Science; 'Rob Roy' Macgregor, the Founder of the Shoeblack Brigade; Sir Henry Havelock, the Hero of the Indian Mutiny; Sir Isaac Newton, the Discoverer of Gravitation; and the Earl of Shaftesbury, the Friend of the Poor. The publishers have worthily seconded the efforts of the editor in producing a well-printed and illustrated book, the perusal of which will serve as a tonic to much that is deleterious in many publications for the young in these trivial days.

From the Walter Scott Publishing Co.—'The Other Woman,' by L. T. Meade. In this novel Mrs. Meade penetrates more deeply beneath the surface of human life than is her wont. Her story runs on the following lines. Lucy Hamilton, a young orphan girl of lofty ideals and refined disposition, is wooed by a distinguished novelist, one Mark Stanhope, whose works are chiefly marked by a tinge of the improper. A week after marriage she discovers that he has had a child by another woman, and she impulsively leaves him, taking refuge in an hotel at Wiesbaden. Here she is followed by her passionately loving husband, and though at first she resists, fate in the persons of two meddlesome, evil-minded ladies forces her back to his arms. Unknown to her husband she befriends his old love, who has become partially demented, and she secretly visits her and the little boy in their lodgings at Bayswater. Then one day Mark discovers this fact and a scene is the result. Lucy urges that the other woman in the sight of God, if not legally, is his real wife, and for the second time she leaves him—this time so maddened by her conduct that he cares little what happens to him. Probably the reader will not require to be told that the other woman after sufficiently recovering her reason to comprehend the true bearings of the situation dies, and that Mark and his wife after a lapse of some years are reconciled. But that the boy should be taken to live with them is a little difficult to conceive

From the same.—'First French Course,' by Jacques Coquelin, B-ès-L. (The National Study of Modern Languages—Coquelin's French Series.') The purpose of the series of works of which this new French Grammar is the initial volume is to combine two antagonistic methods of acquiring a knowledge of the French language—namely, those respectively grounded on translation and conversation. The teacher is enabled to lead his pupils, step by step, into the new language, affording them an opportunity of hearing it and speaking it from the opening lesson. The manual, so far as we can judge, is constructed on very practical lines, and its clearness and simplicity, to say nothing of the arrangement of the subjects, fully entitle it to the favourable consideration of those engaged in tuition.

From Messrs. Seeley & Co., Ltd.—'The Romance of Modern Electricity,' by Charles R. Gibson; 'The Romance of Modern Mechanism,' by Archibald Williams. These two volumes belong to a series known as 'The Library of Romance,' whereof the chief object is to describe in non-technical language the wonders of modern science and exploration. Each volume is attractively bound in blue, scarlet, and gold, and has many illustrations. They are well adapted for gift-books.

From the same.—'The Last of the White Coats: a Story of Cavaliers and Roundheads,' by C. L. Whitham. Mr. Whitham has taken an eventful period of English history as a background for his story, and it may generally be said that he has made excellent use of his opportunities. It is a significant fact that in the majority of fiction written around this period the sympathies of the reader are invited for the Royalist cause, and so it is in the present case. Certainly all the Gisborne family, whom the story so closely concerns, were not ranged on the side of the Stuarts; but the only one of Roundhead proclivities was but a half-hearted adherent of the cause and early disappears from the narrative, while the boys Oliver and Hugh, as courageous a pair of young Royalists as ever drew sword, are prominent figures throughout. The story being full of incident and of no great profundity in the matter of plot, may be confidently relied upon to interest young people, and towards this end the coloured illustrations of Oscar Wilson will powerfully contribute.

From Messrs. Skeffington & Son.—'Walking Circumspectly, and other Sermons,' by the Rev. J. A. Beaumont, M.A. When we have said that these discourses enforce many wholesome religious truths, expounded with clearness and occasional eloquence, we have fairly set down everything that need be urged in their favour. The author's prefatory note shows some appreciation of a position in regard to sermon publishing which must be apparent to every unbiassed reader. Among other volumes received from Messrs. Skeffington which effectively deal with religious subjects are 'It Ringeth to Evensong—Thoughts for Advancing Years,' by the Rev. Alfred G. Mortimer, D.D.; 'The Human Nature of the Saints,' by George Hodges; 'The Eternal King and His Kingdom—Lessons and Catechisings for the Children of the Church,' by the Rev. R. E. Johnston M.A.; 'Helps for the Catechist and Aids to Teaching—Forty Instructions and Homilies,' by the Rev. E. B. Conder, M.A.; and 'A Manual of the Collects from the Book of Common Prayer,' by the Rev. T. Bullock Hardern, D.C.L., LL.D.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—'Back to Sunny Seas,' by Frank T. Bullen, F.R.G.S. We can scarcely say this is the best book Mr. Bullen has yet written, but at least it exhibits to an appreciable extent the unstudied, outspoken attributes of style and expression which, combined with a sense of conviction, have raised him to his present popularity with readers. It is impossible not to feel, when accompanying the author in his cruise in sunny seas, that one is in the society of a man who loves an ocean life, whose sympathies are broad and intensely human, and whose keen observation of men and manners possesses no tinge of ill-nature; the frank, open disposition of the sailor is apparent throughout. The book, which has coloured illustrations by A. S. Forrest, R.I., will be found a most delightful after-dinner companion.

From the Sunday School Union.—'The Sunday School Hymnary: a Twentieth Century Hymnal for Young People,' words and music edited by Carey Bonner. The claim made by the publishers that this is a volume based on a thorough knowledge of modern requirements in regard to Sunday School work will, we think, be generally recognised. The book, extending over a matter of some six hundred pages, is divided into four parts, respectively containing hymns that may intelligently be sung by infants and little children, hymns for the general school, hymns for senior scholars, and hymns especially suitable for teachers. The work of selection, based on a desire only to include those hymns which young people can sing with sincerity—omitting, therefore, the weakly sentimental and those involving doctrinal issues—has been performed with the skill which we would expect from the Rev. Carey Bonner's long experience with Church music and his reputation as a composer. A useful feature of the work may be noted in the numerous indices, and great care has evidently been taken with the music, several of the tunes being transposed in order to keep them within the compass of the young voice. The book as a whole is distinctly creditable, and should meet with a great success.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'The Motor Cracksman,' by Charles Carey. Mr. Carey very entertainingly relates the case of an actress in New York who, for the purposes of advertisement, arranged that her jewels (hired for the occasion) should be stolen while she was staying at the house of a lady of social celebrity. Unhappily, matters did not turn out exactly as foreseen, and a number of rather exciting events ensue. The author very adroitly manages to keep up the mystery of the robbery until the conclusion, and the man upon whom a faint suspicion will surely arise in the reader's mind is found to be entirely innocent.

NEW EDITIONS, &c.—Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons have issued 'Adam Bede' in their admirable Sixpenny Classics, and in its new form the book should have a wide sale.—'Epping Forest,' by Edward North Buxton, has now reached a seventh edition, revised. In addition to matter more closely connected with the subject, the volume contains chapters on forest management, the geology of the district, prehistoric man and the ancient fauna, entomology, pond life, and fungi of the forest. It is published by Mr. Edward Stanford.—One of the latest additions to 'The New Pocket Library,' published by Mr. John Lane, is a volume containing 'The Young Duke,' 'The Rise of Iskander,' and 'The Infernal Marriage,' by the Earl of Beaconsfield, with an Introduction by the Earl of Iddesleigh.—We have received from Mr. W. B. Clive (University Tutorial Press, Ltd.) a copy of the third edition, rewritten and enlarged, of 'Second Stage Inorganic Chemistry (Theoretical),' by G. H. Bailey, D.Sc., edited by William Briggs, LL.D., M.A.—a highly efficient manual which may be confidently recommended to the notice of teachers.—Messrs. Gale & Polden have issued a new edition of 'Catch Questions in Infantry Training.' The little book has been revised and corrected in accordance with the latest infantry training.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

BUSINESS FOR SALE

BY PRIVATE TENDER.

BRYCE & MURRAY, LIMITED.

IN LIQUIDATION.

The Liquidator is prepared to receive OFFERS for the GOODWILL and STOCK-IN-TRADE of Messrs. BRYCE & MURRAY, Limited, Booksellers, Stationers, and Librarians, 129 Buchanan Street, Glasgow.

The business has been established for over sixty years, and is one of the most extensive in the West of Scotland. The stock is valued at about £9,000. This is an unusually favourable opportunity of acquiring a fully equipped and long-established business, with wide and valuable connection.

The Library has upwards of 810 subscribers.

Offers may be made for the whole business, or for the bookselling and library departments separately, and further information may be had on application to the Liquidator, JOSEPH PATRICH, C.A., 203 West George Street, Glasgow.

AYESHA. 6s.
AYESHA. 6s.

THE RETURN OF 'SHE.'

By H. RIDER HAGGARD.

With 32 Full-page Illustrations.

By MAURICE GREIFFENHAGEN.

The WORLD: '"Ayesha" is more beautiful than "She."'

The BYSTANDER: 'One of the weirdest and most thrilling stories ever written. The reader who sets out to follow the fortunes of the seekers of "She" should take care that he has no important work on at the time, for he will not lay the book down until he has read it from cover to cover.'

The DAILY GRAPHIC: 'It can and does do what no other writer now living can do; it can create for us a fairy-world of passion and romance so vivid as to be almost real. To this end it is helped by Mr. Greiffenhagen's brilliantly clever illustrations.'

A MAKER OF HISTORY. 6s.

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM.

BLACK AND WHITE: 'As a writer of sensational stories, Mr. Oppenheim will bear comparison, not only with himself, but with the most ingenious of his contemporaries. Indeed, in my opinion, he is the most admirable inventor and solver of mysteries now writing in England. In "A Maker of History" his many talents have full play.'

The DAILY EXPRESS: 'Mr. Oppenheim is one of my favourites. His mysteries are so ingenious. He has the knack of realising his situations so clearly that one feels that his characters have reality. And, in addition, he has unusual power of narration. The whole story is wonderfully plausible. I always enjoy Mr. Oppenheim, but I never enjoyed him more than in "A Maker of History."'

THE PILLAR OF LIGHT. 6s.

By LOUIS TRACY.

THE EVENING STANDARD: '"The Pillar of Light," by Louis Tracy, is so admirable, so living, so breathlessly exciting a book. The magnificent realism of the lighthouse and its perils, the intense conviction of the author, brings the very scene he pictures before the reader's eyes with hardly a line of detached description; the interest of the terrible dilemma of the cut-off inhabitants of the Pillar are worthy of praise from the most jaded reader.'

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE GARDEN OF LIES' &c.

TOMMY CARTERET. 6s.

By JUSTUS MILES FORMAN.

The BIRMINGHAM POST: 'Rarely do we get a novel of such high quality and powerful dramatic interest as this.'

The LEEDS MERCURY: 'The story is more than exciting, and it is so intense in its dramatic power that the reader is carried out of himself, and lives with the persons delineated. "Tommy Cartaret" is a novel quite out of the ordinary, and the best Mr. Forman has given us.'

VERY SUCCESSFUL FICTION.

THE NELSON CENTENARY

THE BOY'S BOOK OF THE YEAR

By the late SIR W. LAIRD CLOWES and ALAN H. BURGOYNE.

Trafalgar Re-fought
TRAFALGAR RE-FOUGHT

TRAFALGAR RE-FOUGHT

A New Book about the Navy.

6/- With Coloured Plates and other Illustrations. Cloth extra, gilt top. 6/-

This should be THE book of the year for all interested in modern Naval Tactics. Sir William Clowes projected and edited important Naval publications, and was widely known as a Special Correspondent and brilliant writer on all questions relating to the Navy; and in association with Alan H. Burgoyne has written this magnificent work. The authors imagine Trafalgar as it would be if refought under steam, and with the steel-clad ships, the tremendous weapons, and murderous possibilities of to-day. All the knowledge of two of the foremost naval experts has been concentrated on the book, which forms a story the climax of which will be read with breathless interest.

NELSON'S 'READING.'

Influence of Shakespeare.

To-day, October 21, being 'Nelson Day,' when we are all reading and talking about Nelson, we thought it would be interesting to consider what books he read and how they influenced his life; and the curious part of it is that in none of the 'Lives' which have been published during the last hundred years can we find any reference to what Nelson read. Even in Captain Mahan's 'Life,' which sums up practically all we know about him, there is no reference to this question, no entry in the index such as 'Favourite Authors,' 'Nelson's Library,' or similar item. And yet we know that he had books at Merton, for he refers to them; when poor Lady Hamilton's effects were sold to pay her debts, they must have been sold. What became of Nelson's books?

Failing to find any published references to them, we went through the whole of Nelson's Letters given in Pettigrew's interesting 'Memoirs' to see if Nelson made any references to books, and although our hero appears always to have been writing when not fighting, we fail to find any author mentioned by name and only two quoted. Shakespeare was, of course, known to Nelson, no one could doubt that, and the first thing to look for was any reference to Henry the Fifth's gloriously patriotic speech to his 'warriors' (Nelson loved the word) on the morning of Agincourt. Our readers all know it, but it has a special interest on this Nelson Day—if it was not the very passage which set his soul on fire and carried him from victory to victory through a hundred fights to glorious death, then how is it we 'read his fame unparalleled' patterned by that the poet here makes Henry claim:

Morning of Agincourt.

Earl of Westmoreland—
'O! that we now had here
But one ten thousand of those men in England
That do no work to-day.'

King Henry V.—
'What's he that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair cousin:
If we are mark'd to die, we are enow
To do our country loss; and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more.
By Jove! I am not covetous for gold,

. . . . . .

But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.

. . . . . .

This day is call'd the feast of Crispian:
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,
But we in it shall be remembered;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers.'

It was interesting to find that almost the only reference to any author made by Nelson is to this passage from Shakespeare. Writing to Lady Hamilton when chasing the French fleet, and just before he captured Le Généreux on February 18, 1800, he says, 'I feel anxious to get up with these ships, and shall be unhappy not to take them myself, for my first great happiness is to serve my gracious King and country, and I am envious only of glory; for if it be a sin to covert glory, I am the most offending soul alive.'

On another occasion, referring to King Henry's words, he says of his beloved captains:

'We are a happy band of brothers.'

Then, at the very height of the battle of Copenhagen, it is clear this grand passage from Shakespeare was in his mind. Turning to Colonel Stewart, he said:

'It is warm work, and this day may be the last to any of us at a moment,' and then, stopping short at the gangway, he added with emotion, 'but, mark you, I would not be elsewhere for thousands.' This was just before he put his telescope to his blind eye and 'really could not see' his chief's signal to stop fighting.

At the council of war before that battle which he himself described later as 'the most hard fought battle, and the most complete victory, as far as my reading goes, that ever was fought and obtained by the Navy of this country'—at that council someone referred to the numbers of the foe, when Nelson, 'mortified at everything which savoured of alarm or irresolution, said sharply, "The more the better . . . I wish there were twice as many."' Surely the very spirit of King Henry. Then, again, just before his death in victory at Trafalgar it is clear that this same passage was in his mind. Writing to Lady Hamilton the letter which was after his death found on his desk, Nelson says:

'Happy will they be who are present, and disappointed will those be who are absent.'

Or, as glorious Henry said:

'And gentlemen in England now abed
Shall think themselves accursed they were not here,
And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.'

Nelson, on an anniversary of the battle of Cape St. Vincent, refers to it as the battle of Saint Valentine's Day.

In another letter Nelson says, writing to his wife:

'If England to herself is not true, our funded debt must fall, and with it who can tell what.'

To look through Nelson's letters to see if he referred to Shakespeare, and especially to that passage in 'Henry the Fifth,' and to find that at the greatest moments of his life it was animating his soul, was delightful—if others have noted this happy conjunction, we know not where. The only other quotation we found is characteristic of Nelson. Writing shortly before his victory at Copenhagen to Lady Hamilton, he says:

'I am not in very good spirits, and except that our country demands all our services and abilities to bring about an honourable peace, nothing should prevent my being the bearer of my own letter. But, my dear friend, I know you are so true and loyal an Englishwoman, that you would hate those who would not stand forth in defence of our King, Laws, Religion, and all that which is dear to us. It is your sex that makes us go forth, and seem to tell us "None but the brave deserve the fair."'

Our fair countrywomen should remember Nelson's praise to-day. As Captain Mahan finely says: 'In Nelson, through all, and over all, the love of glory and the sense of honour continued to the last to reign supreme.'

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Mr. Murray will shortly publish a book, entitled 'The Triumphs of Petrarch,' which will constitute an entirely new departure in artistic typography. The English edition will be limited to 100 numbered copies, printed on Italian handmade paper, and 10 printed on parchment. Every detail in the production of the book has been most scrupulously looked to; the type, especially made for this volume, has been shaped after the letters used by the most accomplished scribes of the fifteenth century. The paper has been especially manufactured in Italy, after an old Italian formula, being the closest approach to the ancient handmade paper yet found. The work will be bound in leather, blind-stamped with a beautiful fourteenth-century design, inlaid with bosses of antique bronze bearing the Medici emblem. A full-page facsimile of an original illuminated page, and initials executed by Attilio Formilli of Florence, complete the beauties of one of the finest productions of the book creator's art yet realised. Never before has Petrarch had so fine a setting for his work.

Sir John M. Clark, Bart., who takes such great interest in the Edinburgh Assistant Booksellers' Association, will preside on October 26, when Mr. Richard Cameron, F.S.A.Scot., gives the first lecture of the session, entitled 'Books, Libraries, and Literature in Days of Old.' All members of the book trade are invited to attend the meeting, which will be held in the Hall of the Protestant Institute, George IV. Bridge, at 8.30.

Mr. Lane will publish, on October 26, a new album of drawings by Charles Dana Gibson, entitled 'Our Neighbours.' In this new collection of drawings we find not only the Gibson girl, but her relatives both near and distant. There are her country cousins, her horse-racing brothers with prodigal tendencies, her material-minded father with ideas about the dignity of labour, and her spinster aunts with pronounced views upon matrimony. Mr. Gibson grows more catholic, yet he is still true to his first love, 'The Gibson Girl.'

In connection with the Trafalgar Centenary, Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., are re-issuing a 6*d.* edition of the late R. D. Blackmore's 'Springhaven,' a tale of the great war. This book contains many incidents in connection with the wars of Napoleon and Nelson.

Just as we are going to press we have received from Messrs. Nelson & Sons a copy of 'Trafalgar Re-fought,' by the late Sir W. Laird Clowes, which we hope to notice next week.

Mr. Edward Arnold published this week a work by Lieutenant Albert B. Armitage, R.N.R., who was Second in Command of the 'Discovery' during the recent National Antarctic Expedition, entitled 'Two Years in the Antarctic,' with a Preface by Dr. Nansen and numerous illustrations by Dr. S. A. Wilson, artist to the expedition, including over fifty in the text.

Mr. Murray's forthcoming publications include 'Transvaal Problems,' by Lionel Phillips; 'The War in the Far East,' by the Military Correspondent of the Times, fully illustrated; 'The Life and Letters of Lord Herbert of Lea'; the 'Memoirs of Jehan, Sire de Joinville'; 'Things Indian,' by William Crooke; 'The Empire and the Century'; a 'Life of Isabella Bird (Mrs. Bishop)'; &c.

'The English Dialect Grammar,' which formed part of the 'English Dialect Dictionary,' is about to be issued in a convenient crown 8vo. form. As Professor Joseph Wright's great work, 'The English Dialect Dictionary,' is now completed, it is to be offered to the public, through the booksellers, on the instalment plan—i.e., the whole six volumes will be delivered on payment of a portion of the published price, the balance to be paid monthly. This offer will only hold good until the end of the year, and until that time the Grammar will also be procurable at a reduced price. Particulars can be obtained from any bookseller, or on application to Mr. Henry Frowde at the Oxford University Press Warehouse, London.

Mr. Alston Rivers will publish, on October 27, Dr. H. R. Mill's important work on Antarctic Exploration, entitled 'The Siege of the South Pole.' The volume is the fifth in 'The Story of Exploration' series, edited by J. Scott Keltie, LL.D., Secretary, Royal Geographical Society.

The Annual Festival of the Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution, at which Sir Horace Marshall is to preside, will be held on the 31st inst., at De Keyser's Hotel, Blackfriars. Among those who have accepted invitations to be present are the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress, the Sheriffs of the City of London with their ladies, the Chinese Minister, Lord Burnham, the Hon. H. L. W. Lawson, Sir George Hayter Chubb, General Sir Alfred Turner and Lady Turner, Sir Joseph Lawrence, M.P., and Lady Lawrence, Sir Clarence Smith, Mrs. Craigie, Sir John Macdonell, C.B., Mr. Cecil Harmsworth, Mr. Linley Sambourne, &c.

The instalment of the Bancroft 'Letters and Diaries' in the November Scribner's is of very great historical and personal interest. It deals with the years 1847–49, when the author was United States Minister to Great Britain, and made frequent visits to Paris. There are some remarkable extracts from personal conversations with Louis Philippe, and descriptions of the exciting events of 'the year of revolutions,' 1848.

Lord Goschen has edited a number of his 'Essays and Addresses on Economic Questions,' covering the period 1865–1893, in a volume just published by Mr. Edward Arnold.

The seventeenth edition of Dr. J. Paterson Smyth's 'How we Got our Bible' is now ready, published by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., making the total printing of 89,000 copies.

A new book by the Rev. E. J. Hardy, author of 'How to be Happy though Married,' is always sure of a welcome from a large public. Mr. Hardy has been spending some years as Chaplain to the Forces in Hong Kong, and the outcome of his observations of things Chinese is a volume entitled 'John Chinaman at Home,' just published by Mr. Fisher Unwin.

In the Westminster Gazette Mr. Francis Brown, as 'The Office Boy,' has for some time past been amusing the readers by a series of cartoons, and now Messrs. Methuen are to issue 'The Doings of Arthur' in a popular form.

Mr. James E. Commin, 230 High Street, Exeter, has some works on that ever interesting mystery, Stonehenge, in his catalogue, No. 217.

The Book Monthly for September contained a very readable and sensible article on 'The German Book Trade' by Mr. Bruno Conrad. He calls it 'A Study of its Organisation and Methods in Contrast with ours.' He tells us that German publishers are of opinion that 'underselling spoils the business but does not increase trade,' on the other hand, he says, with some truth, 'the English bookseller gives his discount to the public to compete with his colleagues, and to earn his living he must sell other articles.'

Miss G. E. Mitton has written a new book, 'Jane Austen and her England.' This is not only a biography, but it also describes the society whose picture Miss Austen has painted for all time. The book has a treble interest, inasmuch as it gives a life and study of Jane Austen, a picture of her times, and a vindication of her superb gifts of observation. There are many portraits and illustrations in the book, which Messrs. Methuen are publishing.

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., will be publishing in the course of a few days a new work by E. A. Posselt, the well-known authority on textile manufacture, entitled 'From Fibre to Fabric,' being a treatise giving a thorough description of the properties and supply of the fibres, as well as the various processes dealing with wool, cotton, silk, woven and knit goods; the volume will be fully illustrated and the price 36*s.* net.

The same firm have also nearly ready a book by Dr. Josiah Oldfield, entitled 'Myrrh and Amaranth.' This book is written under two heads—namely, 'Brother Pain and his Crown' and 'Sister Drudgery and her Roses'—and will be found specially valuable as a gift book to those who are suffering long in pain and others who are dissatisfied with their lot in life.

A new and revised edition, with considerable additions, of Mr. A. M. S. Methuen's 'Peace or War in South Africa,' which was first published in 1901, will be published at once under the title of 'The Tragedy of South Africa.' The book is now a complete narrative of the events of the years 1899–1902.

'Young Germany,' which is the title of the sixth and last volume of Dr. Brandes's great work, 'Main Currents in Nineteenth Century Literature,' has just been published by Mr. Heinemann.

Mr. Heinemann publishes a beautiful and interesting work on 'The Cathedral Cities of England,' by George Gilbert, illustrated with sixty reproductions of water-colour drawings by W. W. Collins, R.I.

Messrs. Egerton & Co., 115 Strand, send us a very neat shilling edition of 'The Fifty Best Solos' from the oratorios of Handel, Mendelssohn, and Haydn, with an index to each solo. The music is clearly printed and so, as a rule, are the words—p. 94 being an exception. Consecrated by years, some of the wording would otherwise hardly pass muster at the present day, and the sublime occasionally touches the ridiculous when the singer has to divide a word, like 'hammer' for instance: which has quite a Baconian ring about it.

> 'Is not his word like a fire, and like a ham . . . mer, a ham . . . mer,' &c.,

There are many who would attain social success and are on the wrong track. To these Miss Emily Holy's book 'The Secret of Popularity' will appeal. There are chapters on conversation, correspondence, friendship, on the woman who is admired by men, on the way to be a popular neighbour, a welcome guest, a successful hostess, a happy traveller, a favourite in the home circle, and a gracious mistress. Messrs. Methuen published the book on the 19th.

The publication of records of prices obtained for books at auction is knocking much of the bottom out of the romance of secondhand bookselling. There was a time when one might light on a big bargain in a secondhand bookseller's catalogue. Now even our German friends are not likely to undervalue a rare English book; e.g., in Catalogue No. 37 of Mr. J. Halle, bookseller, Munich, we noticed an uncut copy of Boydell's 'Thames,' the 1794 edition, with the coloured plates, priced at 350 marks=£17 10*s.* A glance at Mr. Karslake's 'Book Auction Records,' Vol. 2, shows that two or three copies of the same book in good condition have been sold here lately under £10.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton announce for immediate publication 'Captains All,' by W. W. Jacobs, illustrated by Mr. Will Owen.

'Modern Photography for Amateurs,' by J. E. Fearn (L. Upcott Gill). That the above book has reached a fifth edition proves abundantly that the demand for it is by no means decreasing. Amateur photographers, and in fact all who use a camera, will find the book of the greatest service.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish on October 26 three new novels—viz. 'The Difficult Way,' by Mrs. Percy Dearmer; 'French Nan,' by Agnes and Egerton Castle; and 'The First Mrs. Mollivar,' by Edith Ayrton Zangwill.

'Modern Germany: her Political and Economic Problems, her Policy, her Ambitions, and the Causes of her Success,' by O. Eltzbacher, is the title of a timely book to be published shortly by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.

A new and revised edition of Mr. Baring-Gould's 'Songs of the West' has just been published. It is under the musical editorship of Mr. Cecil J. Sharp (Principal of the Hampstead Conservatoire).

PRESENTATION TO MR. C. F. CLAY.

On Friday last the members of the staff of the Cambridge University Press Warehouse met to present to Mr. C. F. Clay, on the occasion of his marriage, a silver centre-piece, as a token of the esteem in which he is held. Mr. Ireland read the address which accompanied the gift, and Mr. Clay, in responding, spoke of the happy relations which existed between himself and the staff, and expressed the hope that all would for many years to come be associated with him in the work of the house.

DEATH OF LADY CURRIE.

Lady Currie, who died at Harrogate, of heart disease, on Friday last week, was author of many books and magazine articles. Her pen name was Violet Fane. Her works include 'From Dawn to Noon,' 1872; 'Denzil Place,' 1875; 'Queen of Fairies,' 1876; 'Anthony Babbington,' 1876; 'Edwin and Angelina,' 1878; 'Collected Verses,' 1880; 'Sophy, or Adventures of a Savage,' 1881; 'Through Love and War,' 1888; 'Helen Davenant,' 1888; 'Autumn Songs,' 1889; 'Memoirs of Marguerite de Valois, Queen of Navarre,' 1892; 'Under Cross and Crescent,' 1895; 'Betwixt Two Seas,' 1900; 'Two Moods of a Man,' 1901. Most of these books were in verse, but some were prose novels, and one volume of 1878 was a series of amusing 'Papers by V.,' which had appeared in Edmund Yates's World. While Lord Currie was Ambassador in Italy, Lady Currie contributed both prose and verse to The Italian Review, a magazine published at 69 Piazza delle Terme, Rome. Her father, Charles Montgomerie Lamb, as Knight of the White Rose, rode in the rain-marred Eglinton Tournament. Tosti set to music Violet Fane's poem 'For Ever and For Ever.' In her verses headed 'Victoria' (July 1891) she spoke of the late Queen as:

'From a throne
On this poor planet, wafted to a shore

'WORDS AND DEEDS OF NELSON.'

On October 17 we received from Mr. Henry Frowde a very attractively produced brochure in navy-blue cover entitled, 'Words and Deeds of Nelson.' It is compiled by 'W. M. C.,' and contains a chronological record of Nelson's career, and of the international events which occurred during his lifetime; a history of H.M.S. Victory, and all the more memorable sayings of Nelson. The price is 3*d*., or 20*s*. per hundred for gratuitous distribution. We are glad to see that Mr. Martin Sutton, Mayor of Reading, has ordered 10,000 copies of this little work about Nelson for presentation to children attending the borough elementary schools in Reading; we hope he got the youngsters a holiday on Nelson Day (to-day).

THE CHRIST OF ENGLISH POETRY.

The Dean of Ely's Hulsean Lectures, which, perhaps because of the unusual character of their subject-matter as University sermons, created so much interest in Cambridge last winter, are to be published this autumn by Messrs. Dent & Co. under the title 'The Christ of English Poetry.' In his four lectures Dr. Stubbs deals with four periods of the national life as represented by the four poets Cynewulf, Langland, Shakespeare, and Browning, and sketches the varied witness which has been borne by the poets of England, no less than by its theologians, to the Person of Jesus Christ and the Spirit of His Religion.

THE ILLUSTRATED LIFE OF KATE GREENAWAY.

The Life of Kate Greenaway, by M. H. Spielmann and G. S. Layard promises to be a volume of no ordinary interest. In the earlier autobiographical chapters it presents what is perhaps one of the most remarkable studies of a child's mind to be found in English literature. Her long and intimate friendship with Professor Ruskin, and the letters written each to each, provide chapters of singular charm and brightness. Some fifty of Ruskin's most characteristic letters, hitherto unpublished, reveal the author at his liveliest and best—frequently amusing and playful, sometimes pathetic, always interesting. The illustrations—a leading feature of the book—are profuse as well as various; and, with the exception of a very few, they have hitherto been unpublished and are therefore unknown to the public. The coloured plates include reproductions in facsimile of her most successful water-colour paintings of children, flowers, and landscapes, as well as of the scenes of her childhood executed by herself. Dozens of pen and pencil sketches—many of them originally decorating her letters to Ruskin and her friends—embellish the pages of the book; and portraits, views, facsimiles of letters and poems, make up the list. Messrs. Adam & Charles Black have the volume almost ready for publication, and it will be published simultaneously in America by Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons.

THE TIMES BOOK CLUB.

We are glad to see that the Bookseller of October 16 supports the policy we have advocated in the P.C. of October 14 and previously as to the necessity of joint action on the part of publishers and booksellers in this matter.

Our contemporary says:

The 'Times' Book Club.—The astonishing offer of the Times to enable its subscribers 'to read the newest books without buying them, or paying a circulating library for the use of them,' and further to buy on special terms any books that seem worth buying after reading, has necessarily aroused much apprehension in the bookselling trade generally. Indeed, if the scheme goes forward as its authors intend, the ordinary retail bookseller is likely in many cases to find his occupation gone. Subscribers to the Times may purchase books in class B. 'clean and uninjured copies virtually as good as new, their condition indicating that they have been in circulation for about a month,' the exterior undefaced by any label, at a discount of 35 per cent. off the published price of ordinary books and of 20 per cent. off 'net' books. If the promise that the books are 'clean and uninjured' is kept, it is clear that with these terms the bookseller cannot compete. Moreover the danger which thus threatens the 'net' system, under which it is understood that books shall not be sold at a less price till after a year from publication, is too obvious to need pointing out. Indeed, the whole scheme is so unprecedented in its conception, and so far-reaching in its consequences, that some united action on the part of both booksellers and publishers is imperative. By the co-operation of the Associated Booksellers and the Publishers' Association, the recognised representatives of the allied trades are, we are glad to know, thrashing the matter out together, and they will no doubt be able to devise some method of safeguarding their interests. At least they should ensure the safety of the 'net' system, which experience has shown to be so beneficial, and which is manifestly endangered if the scheme of the Times is carried out in its entirety as announced. It is, as we have before pointed out, very unfortunate that the new departure was not fully discussed in all its bearings by the recognised representatives of the allied trades at the outset. We may, however, hope that even now it is not too late for effective joint action. In a situation so critical combined action is more than ever imperative. The managers of the Times openly announce that they are prepared to spend £100,000 to carry through the undertaking, and it is clear that only by joint co-operation can defence against so formidable an enemy have any real chance of success.

A SENSATIONAL AUCTION SEASON.

It is but a few weeks since the last sale of a momentous season was held, and the short space of rest has set us recalling the sensational prices that have followed one another so quickly. There have been large prices at Christie's in the past, but they have stood out conspicuously and have been remembered as the exceptional events of the year. But during the last few months extraordinary prices have followed upon one another with such rapidity that many (says the Burlington Magazine) are in danger of being overlooked and forgotten. These have been seized upon by half-informed journalists and dealt with in newspaper articles in a way calculated to mislead the public grossly.

For all Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals send your subscriptions to Wm. Dawson & Sons, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's Buildings, London (established 1809). Catalogue gratis.

CURIOUS PHASES OF THE MODERN PRESS.

At a penny the Times would still be worthy of the steel of its keenest and deftest opponents. One of the most fearless of journals, it has rendered services to the State that cannot be overestimated. To-day the old beacon of the evening press, the Globe, shares with the Times a reputation for the reliability and importance of its foreign intelligence and its service news, in which, however, the great provincial papers, through their London correspondents, now and then give them a 'friendly lead.' One day last week I found my path obstructed by a crowd of people borrowing books from the West End library premises of the Times. The great daily seems to be competing with the booksellers equally with halfpenny rival newspapers. One is not surprised to find The Publisher's Circular voicing the protesting cry of the bookseller. 'Journalistic London' has entered upon strange and adventurous days since I wrote its history.—Joseph Hatton, in the People.

SIR BENJAMIN STONE'S PICTURES.[*]

Sir Benjamin Stone has for a great many years been engaged in securing, with the aid of his camera, a remarkable collection of photographs such as no man living possesses. This series of pictures now numbers upwards of 20,000, and the photographs illustrate important events linked with national life and history in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Sir Benjamin Stone is President of the National Photographic Record Association, and has had afforded to him exceptional and unique facilities for taking his photographs.

Among them he has secured an unsurpassed collection of pictures of festivals, ceremonies, and customs which are observed in various parts of the country; while another world-famous feature of Sir Benjamin's collection consists of those in which Parliamentary personages and Parliamentary scenes are represented. In this new and important work to be published by Messrs. Cassell & Co., a selection of these photographs will be reproduced by the most modern and perfect processes, and paper of superfine quality will be used, so as to secure the very best results. The pictures will be printed the original size ($8\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ inches) on paper $12\frac{1}{2} \times 10$ inches, and will thus give an admirable rendering of the actual photographs. The first portion of the work will deal with Sir Benjamin Stone's pictures of festivals, ceremonies, and customs; the second will be devoted to his Parliamentary photographs; and the whole, which will be accompanied with explanatory text, will form a pictorial record of extraordinary and permanent interest.

[*] Records of National Life and History reproduced from the collection of photographs made by Sir Benjamin Stone, M.P. To be published by Messrs. Cassell & Co. in fortnightly parts, 7d. net each. Part 1 ready October 26. Each part will contain 16 full-page reproductions.

THE BOOKSTALLS ON THE LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN AND GREAT WESTERN RAILWAYS.

THE greatest change in the book trade which has, perhaps, ever taken place will be the transfer shortly from Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son to Messrs. Wyman & Sons of the whole of the railway bookstalls on the London and North-Western Railway and the Great Western Railway—some 300 bookstalls. Personally, we shall miss the time-honoured name of the great Strand firm, whose admirable system has been such a great convenience to the public for over half a century.

It is impossible not to recognise the very bold nature of the step taken by Messrs. Wyman, and great interest, and not a little anxiety, is felt by booksellers generally as to what Messrs. Wyman's policy will be. Will they, for instance, give the public 3*d.* in the shilling discount on new books? We understand that, at any rate as far as the Great Western Railway goes, Messrs. Wyman also take over the railway advertising, quite a great business in itself.

NELSONIAN LITERATURE.

VALUABLE ADDITION PROMISED BY MR. MURRAY.

ALL interested in Nelson and the navy will read with great interest that Mr. John Murray has in the press a work entitled 'The Life and Letters of Thomas Masterman Hardy,' captain of the Victory [1767–1840], with some account of his comrades, Henry Digby (captain of the Apice) and Charles Bullen (captain of the Britannia), by A. M. Broadley, and R. G. Bartelot, M.A. Much interest is felt in this volume on account of its having originated in the recent discovery of some hundreds of unknown and unpublished letters, throwing fresh light not only on the life of Hardy, but on the career of Lord Nelson and the actions of his associates and contemporaries. The work is likely to prove a valuable addition to Nelsonian literature.

FOOTBALL.

AT the second annual general meeting of the William Dawson & Sons, Limited, Football Club, held at Cannon House, last Monday, the club had much pleasure in welcoming the Cambridge University Press Club, which, through the kindness of Mr. C. F. Clay, had accepted an invitation to amalgamate. Mr. C. F. Clay was unanimously elected a Vice-President, and it is hoped that with the assistance of the Cambridge University Press men, the club will have an even more successful season than last. So keen are the members that it was unanimously agreed to challenge the New Zealanders until someone pointed out that they didn't play 'Soccer'! The club will make itself known as 'St. Dunstan's.'

MENTION THE 'P. C.'—Our Readers who order books, &c. they see mentioned or advertised in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

HARVARD ADMIRED BY A FRENCH SCHOLAR.

BY the size and beauty of its buildings, scattered about, English fashion, in an immense park; by its enormous revenue; by the rich equipment of its libraries, museum, and laboratories; by the reputation of its professors, the influence of its teaching, the number of its publications, and the prestige of the great men trained in its halls or installed in its chairs, Harvard leaves on the mind of the traveller an impression almost equal to that carried away from Oxford or Heidelberg.—From In the Land of the Strenuous Life, by Abbé Felix Klein (McClurg & Co., Chicago).

NEW ZEALAND INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

IN November and December 1906 and January to April 1907 a great International Exhibition is to be held at Christchurch, Canterbury, under the auspices of the Government of New Zealand. Particulars can be had at the office of the Agent-General for New Zealand, 13 Victoria Street.

TRADE NOTES AND CHANGES.

Mr. Frederick Mudford, who for the last fifty-seven years has been in the employ of Messrs. E. Marlborough & Co., and retired from active service in September, was presented on Saturday last by his old colleagues with a timepiece, as a mark of their esteem.

A PUBLISHERS' BOWLING LEAGUE.

THE following circular has been issued by William Krause, President of the Oxford Bowling Club, of the Oxford University Press, 91 Fifth Avenue, New York, to whom communications on the subject should be addressed:—

'SIR,—We would like to find out if it is possible to form a Publishers' Bowling League of say eight or ten teams, the members of the same to be employees of publishing houses only. Such leagues now exist among jewellers, bank-clerks, and others, and there seems no good reason why the book trade, which employs so many young men, should not have one also.

Last season our club had a set of games with the men working for Messrs. Ginn & Co., and the pleasure derived from it and the friendships which resulted make us feel that it would be feasible to have a great many more of such meetings with the entire trade. The contests would serve to get the men better acquainted with those of other houses, and a great deal of sport would certainly result.

Will you not help us to the extent of pushing this matter among your fellow-employees, and letting us know at an early date what the possibilities are of your house being represented? We hope to hold a meeting in the near future composed of one man from each house to form the league, and we sincerely hope your men will be able to have a representative there.'—N.Y. Publishers' Weekly.

A SCHOOL COMMENT ON SHAKESPEARE'S 'JULIUS CÆSAR.'

[THE following remarkable appreciation of 'Julius Cæsar' is pieced together without change of phrase or spelling from several examination papers lately presented at an academy in Pennsylvania.]

Cæsar is a tradegy of blood. The piece about Shylock was almost bloody but the knife did n't reach the breast of him. Cæsar wanted to be a tyrant but he did not want any crowns on his head so he refused them in broad daylight. He grew so big that he could straddle the world which scared indeed his men who were his enemies.

They came together one night when lions were rained down without chains in the streets of Italy, and when red lightenings were running this way and that. They were all there but Brutus who was the honorablest of all the men when Cæsar lived those days. Cassium and Cascada were much in the things. Then they threw through the windows of Brutuses' orchard handing characters which made the heart of Brutus burn fierce over the dark state of the peoples' rights among the citizens of Rome.

I pitied Brutus then as he read with tears falling about how he was noble and about how Cæsar was hard on the poor. Then he called his wife and sharpened up his blade and told her not to eat any fire that day as he could not fail to win the fight. But she ate the fire after jagging herself.—From the September Atlantic.

FIGHTING THE PRICE-CUTTERS.

Mr. F. H. Johnson, 15 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., who by indomitable industry and enterprise has for ten years maintained himself in the book business against some very sharp and unfair competition, is evidently unterrified by the tactics of his underselling rivals, as the following circular to his constituents shows:—

'To Brooklyn book-buyers:

'It is an interesting commentary upon the methods and statements of the department stores, that two of the largest stores of that kind in Brooklyn have recently endeavoured to buy of me large quantities of the new books, to sell to you; because of my well-established trade connection and purchasing power.

'One store would buy $1,800 worth of books and pay me 10 per cent. profit on them; and the other store would buy of me $5,000 worth at the same price at which I will sell to you, as indicated below. Further comment is needless.

'Excepting net books which are sold at a uniform price by all reputable booksellers, I will sell you the new books at a reduction of 28 per cent. from the publishers' price. Thus a new $1.50 novel will cost you $1.08 at my store, and other books to correspond.

'This price is for a perfect book; not one that has been defaced by a rubber-stamp advertisement upon some of the printed pages, after the department store method.

'For the last ten years I have supplied the best books published to the people of the best social position in Brooklyn, and am proud to have gained their confidence.'

'LITERARY GHOSTS' IN FRANCE.

Needless to say, the literary 'ghost' is as well known in France as elsewhere. 'In this connection,' says the editor of T.P.'s Weekly, 'a pleasing anecdote is being related in Paris, which will probably be new to most of my readers, as to myself. A certain well-known feuilletonist was engaged to write a serial story for a Paris newspaper. Being a very busy man, he sub-let the contract—if that be the proper term to use—to a "ghost," who may be called A, giving him for his work half the sum paid by the newspaper.

'Everything went well, until one day, A was suddenly taken ill, and died in a few hours. Much perturbed, his employer obtained the back numbers of the paper, read up the story—of which he, of course, knew nothing—finished it as briefly as possible, and carried his work at once to the office.

'The editor was much surprised to learn his errand. "But you have already sent us the rest of the story," he remonstrated, "and it ends quite differently." Deeply puzzled, the novelist went away, to learn subsequently that A had in his turn sub-let the writing of the serial to another "ghost," B, retaining a profit for himself on the transaction. B, of course, had finished his work without regard to his immediate employer's death.'

A NEW STYLE OF SHORTHAND.

Messrs. J. Walch & Sons, Hobart, Tasmania, send us a copy of a new shilling work they publish, entitled 'Nine Square, Dot, Shorthand,' invented by Edward M. Darken. In this system 'every letter and figure in the English language is formed by simply marking a dot in an angle, and the words are quite as easily read as ordinary handwriting. Most shorthand systems have alphabets of their own, but in this the English alphabet is used, so that a child may learn to read and write it in a few minutes. It must be remembered that this style of writing is for the use of the majority of people who cannot spare the time necessary to master the elaborate systems of shorthand which aim at verbatim reporting. Many people will be quite content to make a "dot" for each letter or figure, which is obviously easier than making the strokes and curves of ordinary handwriting.'

PROSPERITY AND SIZE OF CANADA.

Canada is increasingly prosperous throughout her entire extent, and her great West is opening up to the world economic and commercial possibilities of the magnitude of which even the Canadians themselves have no adequate appreciation. Each of the great new territories recently organised, Alberta and Saskatchewan, contains more than 275,000 square miles; that is to say, each one is nearly six times as large as the State of New York, and each is larger than the German Empire.—From 'The Progress of the World,' in the American Monthly Review of Reviews.

Letters to the Editor

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.]

'WORKING EXPENSES.'

Dear Sir,—In reference to your remarks in last issue on 'Working Expenses,' I have no doubt many of your readers will be interested if you can prevail upon the 'very competent authority' referred to, to give some further explanation as to the meaning of the term.

Most booksellers, and other traders as well, have been accustomed to calculating working expenses as a percentage of the turnover. For example, with a turnover of, say, £2,000, and rent, rates, assistants, carriage, light, and all other items of expense amounting to, say, £200, the working expenses would be said to be 10 per cent. But how many are there in our trade, I wonder, who are able to carry on business even at this percentage. And yet your correspondent infers that 3 or 4 per cent. may be a sufficient basis. Such a view is surely 'absolutely fallacious.'

The majority of booksellers and stationers will, I am sure, agree that Mr. Mortimer is on fairly safe ground in making the statement contained on p. 207 of his very admirable little handbook (which ought to be in the possession of every bookseller and publisher). If your 'very competent authority' is associated with the trade from a publisher's point of view, I think it would have caused no surprise at all if he had told us that the matter of working expenses need not enter into consideration at all as regards the conduct of a retail business, and that whatever allowance was received from the publisher represented all profit.

As Mr. Saxton says in your last issue, 'Bookselling at best is one of the least remunerative of businesses.' And small matter for surprise is it when in many cases the gross profit is only 20 per cent., and out of this has to be allowed a percentage for working expenses, whatever they may be. If this percentage was 3 or 4 per cent. the trade would be in a very different position to what it is at the present day. I have oftentimes been interested in articles on this subject in papers issued in connection with other trades—trades with a far 'quicker turnover' than we have. And even in these cases it has been generally acknowledged that 10 per cent. was a fair average.

We have now had many years' experience of the net system, and yet with all its advantages we find—in the words of another competent authority, that 'bookselling at best is one of the least remunerative of businesses.' And this is not because there is so little business to be done, but because the major portion of the profits are necessarily swallowed up in working expenses. The 'turnover' is in many cases satisfactory enough, but with a gross profit of 20 per cent. and working expenses of 15 per cent., how can any business be on a sound footing and successful?

On the 3 per cent. basis mentioned by your 'very competent authority,' the sum of £60 is allowed for the working expenses of a business with a turnover of £2,000.

Why, sir, in the majority of cases that amount would be more than swallowed up in rent alone. Even 4 per cent., or £80, is absurdly inadequate, and such statements are worse than 'absolutely fallacious.'—I am yours truly,

A. L. B.

October 10, 1905.

[The view of the 'very competent authority' is, unless we are mistaken, that it is wholly misleading to include in a percentage of working expenses such fixed charges as rent, taxes, salaries, &c., which do not vary according to the amount of turnover. It would be, he says, as reasonable to include the bookseller's tailor's bill, because it is obvious that he cannot sell books without clothes on. He is a bookseller himself, he knows what his yearly permanent expenses are, and when a book is offered him for sale he calculates first what gross profit he can get out of the sale, and next what extra expense the sale of that book will cost him. If it is a book that he thinks he can do a very large trade in by using a special canvasser for that book, he regards that canvasser's wages as the working expenses on that book. He adds: 'Bookselling is one of the most remunerative businesses I know if it is conducted with energy and intelligence, but no trade can be remunerative if conducted with the apathy and ignorance of trade that characterises nearly all booksellers I have ever met.'—Ed.]

WORKING EXPENSES AND 'ONE TRANSACTION' PROFITS.

Sir,—Did you ever hear the story told of the tradesman who sold his goods at less than cost price, but who, on account of selling so many, was able to realise a handsome profit? We think the 'Competent Authority' whom you quote in your notice last week of Mortimer's 'Ready Reckoner' must have done so, and would have booksellers follow his example. But we believe Mr. Mortimer must have had in mind the 99 per cent. of the book trade who cannot 'sell so many,' but who, if they double their regular trade, find that their regular expenses are not far from being doubled likewise. Booksellers have been trying too long to follow the advice of the 'Competent Authority' quoted, and with what result is too well known to need stating here. Let the trade take to heart the truth of Mr. Mortimer's note, and they will the sooner lift themselves out of the mire into which non-attention to it has plunged them, is the opinion of—Yours truly, Albert Lupton.

LONG-WINDED CUSTOMERS.

Dear Sir,—I venture to believe that a good deal of nonsense is perpetrated by correspondents who grumble at allowing credit to the trade.

Do you know three high-class firms in London, engaged in secondhand bookselling, who pay cash?

It is apparently unrealised by many minor members of the trade that the system of quarterly accounts is an accepted thing by the best houses, and that the system is the outcome of regular practice by the trade from time immemorial.

The fact is that many small dealers who report books to advertisers do not understand the working of this system at all, and worry their customers with applications for '2*s*. 3*d*. post-free,' where it would put the clerical arrangements of large houses out of gear to attend to their accounts at more frequent intervals than the usual quarterly settlement time.

Of course, if books are reported 'for net cash,' &c., no argument for quarterly settlement can be allowed; but I am convinced that a 'net cash' working in this business is impracticable.

Besides, dealers who are well up in the business are always willing to give one another a reasonable amount of credit, and to take the same.—Yours faithfully,

'One of Them.'

'THE SUCCESSFUL BOOKSELLER.'

Dear Sir,—Respecting your footnote to our letter of last week we have much pleasure in informing you that a number of copies of the above publication are being re-reserved for Colonial orders. The orders already received from the single advertisement in the Publishers' Circular has far exceeded our most sanguine expectations. Many orders have already reached us from the Continent, showing how widely your journal is read. The book is now passing through the press, and we shall have pleasure in shortly making an announcement in your columns of the actual date of publication.

We are,
Yours faithfully,
'The Successful Bookseller'
Publishing Company.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. A. Brown & Sons, Ltd.—'These Sayings of Mine,' by F. J. Laverack. This volume is like many hundred others which we receive during the year: it contains a few addresses or sermons of very average quality, and an autographed portrait of the author. Friends of Mr. Laverack may like to possess a copy of the sermons they have heard from the pulpit, but the general public will not unnaturally disregard the volume altogether; there is not a single thought in it which is not the common property of all serious-minded and educated men and women. Mr. Laverack should be more careful in his quotations: he gives as Tennyson's a quatrain from Omar Khayyam—a quatrain embodying the very essence of Omar's philosophy, and one which it would have been absolutely impossible for Tennyson to write.

From Messrs. S. C. Brown, Langham & Co., Ltd.—'Pro Patria, and other Poems,' by B. Paul Neuman. One who seeks for evidences of genius in modern poetry must meet with constant disappointment, though there is a plethora of talent and distinguished thought; one would, however, willingly sacrifice a hundred volumes of dexterous, tuneful verses for one of undisciplined genius. It is rather depressing to read verse so neat, so correct, so exact, as Mr. Neuman's; his creative impulse, wheedled and coaxed, never disturbs the classic outline of his work. There is no passion, no uncontrollable desire; the heart is evidently under the complete subjection of the head, and in a young man who aspires to write poetry that will live this is to be regretted. The lines on Stevenson are perhaps the best—'long, hatchet face, black hair, and haunting gaze' and 'A Ballad of the Caves of Porth' has imagination and strength.

From the Cambridge University Press.—'Pioneers of Modern Education, 1600–1700, by John William Adamson. Professor Adamson in this volume traces the introduction of 'modern studies' into the school course, and the breaking down of the monopoly 'vested by force of circumstance and not always with express intention' in the ancient languages. He endeavours to show the three most influential causes of the more directly scholastic kind which came into play during the period indicated. These were the 'New Philosophy,' to use the co-temporary phrase designating the beginnings of modern inductive science; the desire for a type of instruction especially suitable to the courtier, the soldier, the diplomatist, and the man of affairs, a desire which called into being the 'academies,' schools, or colleges, French in origin but by no means confined to French soil; and the movements in favour of popular education which took place in France, Germany, and England during the last twenty years of the seventeenth century. Attention is naturally directed in this light to John Brinsley, Wolfgang Rathe, Comenius, Samuel Hartlib, St. Jean-Baptiste de la Salle, August Hermann Francke, and others who in past ages have materially aided in the cause of education.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.—'Pianos: their Construction, Tuning, and Repair,' edited by Paul N. Hasluck. This is one of the well-known Work Handbooks, and contains in a concise and handy form much serviceable information relating to piano construction, the purchase of a piano, care, maintenance, and cleaning, tuning, re-stringing, &c., which has from time to time appeared in the columns of that widely circulated journal. There are upwards of seventy engravings and diagrams, which materially add to the efficiency of the volume.

From Messrs. Chatto & Windus.—'The Art of Writing,' by Robert Louis Stevenson. The most important essay in this slim volume is that entitled 'On Some Technical Elements of Style in Literature,' which first appeared in one of the monthly reviews twenty years ago. While it may be true that there is nothing 'more disenchanting to man than to be shown the springs and mechanism of any art,' yet there can be nothing more useful and instructive to the incipient artist himself. Stevenson makes no discoveries, but he reveals some of the hidden sources of beauty, and there are few living writers whose style would not be improved by a study of this essay. 'The Morality of the Profession of Letters' is good reading and sound reasoning, but we found the third essay a trifle self-conscious and affected. 'A Note on Realism' is an early but acute piece of writing, and we are glad to come across it once more; the entertaining account of 'My First Book' is familiar to even the most casual of readers. Several of the papers are scarcely worth preserving; had their author not been Robert Louis Stevenson they would have been neglected in the pages of the magazines in which they first appeared.

From the Church of England Temperance Society—'A First Reader in Health and Temperance,' by W. Taylor. The character of this volume can readily be surmised from the title. The various lessons treat of 'The House we Live in,' Health and How to Keep it,' 'The Kinds of Foods the Body Needs,' 'How we Eat our Food,' 'Some Drinks we should not Touch,' 'Alcohol, the Hurtful Part in Strong Drink,' 'Tobacco,' 'Blood and its Wonders,' 'The Covering of the Body,' 'How the Body moves,' and similar subjects. The information on the whole is simply and pleasantly imparted, though manifestly obtained at secondhand; and the illustrations, if not strikingly original, are sufficient for the purpose. Each lesson is succeeded by a useful summary.

From Mr. W. B. Clive (University Tutorial Press, Ltd.)—'Cicero: Pro Lege Manilia,' edited by A. Waugh Young, M.A., and A. F.

Watt, M.A. This will be found an excellent edition of Cicero's oration for school purposes, and it will especially prove serviceable to those studying for the London Intermediate Arts Examination, 1907, for whom, indeed, it is chiefly designed. Following the usual plan of the 'University Tutorial Series, the volume contains a short Introduction giving an account of the author's life and his chief works; this is succeeded by the text; and at the end of the book are a number of brief notes which will be found extremely useful by the candidate for examination distinction without cumbering his mind with unnecessary detail.

From Collins' Clear-Type Press.—'Henry Esmond,' by W. M. Thackeray; 'Mrs. Halliburton's Troubles,' by Mrs. Henry Wood; 'The Pilgrim's Progress,' by John Bunyan; 'Ivanhoe,' by Sir Walter Scott; 'Tennyson's Poems.' We heartily welcome these volumes of the 'Handy Illustrated Pocket Novels,' a series which should have a very wide popularity. The books are well got-up, artistic to the eye, pleasant and clear print on good thin paper, and the price is only 1*s.* net. It is difficult to know how they can be produced at the price. Each volume is illustrated, those to 'Tennyson's Poems' and 'Esmond' being particularly good. Those to 'The Pilgrim's Progress' are hardly so satisfactory. They are good in themselves, but they look almost like photographs, and as if persons had posed for the figures, which seems rather out of keeping with the character of the book.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd.—'Entrées Made Easy,' by Mrs. S. C. Peel; 'Puddings and Sweets,' by the same Author. We have put these little books to the test of actual use, and have found that they bear the ordeal exceedingly well. The recipes are simply and intelligibly stated, they are free from unnecessary extravagance, and by an admirable system of arrangement the various processes are graduated in difficulty so as to afford the cook a progressive course of instruction. Mrs. Peel may fairly be looked upon as the housewife's friend, and those who consult her pages are not likely to be disappointed in the advice they receive.

From the same.—'Extinct Animals,' by E. Ray Lankester, M.A., F.R.S. Young people owe a debt of deep gratitude to Professor Lankester for thus issuing in volume form the course of lectures delivered for their benefit at the Royal Institution during the Christmas holidays 1903-4. In addition to the invaluable distinction of a clear descriptive style likely to impress such readers, the book has the advantage of upwards of two hundred illustrations reproduced from the lantern slides used at the lectures; and these have stood the conversion to process blocks, on the whole, better than might have been expected. Many of these slides were photographs from specimens in the Natural History Museum, over which Professor Lankester has the control, and throughout the endeavour has been to illustrate the text with photographs taken from actual specimens. The author claims no greater merit for his book than an attempt to excite in young people an interest in a most fascinating study; and it may be willingly conceded that it is likely to do this and something more, since its pages are well calculated to please even older readers.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'Ludlow and Stokesay,' by Algernon Gissing. We hove already had occasion to testify to the worth of the 'Temple Topographies' issued by this firm, of which this forms the latest volume. Mr. Gissing is quite on enthusiast in his subject, and brings before us with much charm of style the many matters of interest connected with Ludlow. In regular sequence he deals with the imposing and venerable castle, the civic and religious life of the borough, likewise depicting the beauty of the landscape, of which the ancient town stands as a centre. It should be remembered that the ruined banqueting hall of the castle claims the literary distinction of having afforded the first stage for the enactment of John Milton's masque of 'Comus' produced on Michaelmas night, 1634, for the entertainment of the Earl of Bridgewater and his family. The few illustrations contributed to the book by Edmund H. New help the reader to realise the attractive nature of this neighbourhood.

From Mr. Henry J. Drane.—'Pictures without Canvas,' by Clark Stephens. The thoughts set forth in this little volume are not very remarkable, either in the matter of originality or clothing, and the author would have done well to attend more closely to the rules of grammar, the component parts of his sentences often showing a fine disregard for each other. But the very simplicity of his reflections on 'Mrs. Grundy,' 'Life in a Shell,' 'Adaptability,' 'Mirages,' 'Flirts and Flirting,' 'Fairy Tales,' and so forth will probably attract readers of the less cultured variety, and pleasurably remind them of features which their own limited lives have alone cognisance of.

From Messrs. Gale & Polden, Ltd.—'Guides to Military History for Military Examinations (including Notes on the Military Geography Required),' by Captain G. P. A. Phillips. Part I.—Peninsular War, 1808-10. This will be found a very helpful manual for military students, and, like all Messrs. Gale & Polden's publications, it shows a care in preparation and directness of purpose that deserve cordial recognition. Numerous maps add to the practical value of the volume, and there is a good index.

From Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., Ltd.—'A Healthy Home and How to Keep It: a Book for Everybody,' by Florence Stackpoole. Two Parts. It is impossible not to be struck in these unpretentious volumes of the 'Little Treasure' series by the uncommon good sense displayed. Occasionally one may be a little amused by the simplicity, we might almost say motherliness, of Miss Stackpoole's methods in imparting her advice, but one must always remember the audiences as a lecturer to the National Health Society she has been accustomed to address. It will be enough to say that her volumes are replete with sound practical reasoning in regard to the healthy condition of a home, and that the suggestions she makes are worthy the earnest consideration of all thrifty housewives.

From Mr. Henry J. Glaisher.—'Whispers from Within, or Epigrams of Experience,' by R. Dimsdale Stocker, is a little book from which a certain amount of instruction and amusement may be derived, provided the necessary reflection be added. Under the headings of Truth, Experience, Love, Philosophy, and so forth, the author has grouped a number of 'maximes' which sometimes hit the mark, sometimes seem shallow and self-evident, sometimes provoke a grim smile. One or two examples, selected at random but with consideration to space, will perhaps best testify to their value: 'Taken as a whole—people are less foolish than honest,' 'Thought should be suggestive—not dogmatic,' 'A man who honestly believes in himself is always sure to get people to believe in him,' 'Don't kill snails—throw them into a neighbour's garden instead.' (The last under the headline of 'Philosophy.')

From Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd.—'Rosamond's Morality,' by Gordon Cuming Whadcoat. Mr. Whadcoat's story is told in dialogue form. It commences with rather a pretty display of sentimentalism between a boy and girl. Anon another admirer turns up in the person of a town cousin. Misunderstandings ensue, and the first lover, feeling that the cousin is preferred to himself, departs for Australia. Returning home after a lapse of three years, he finds Rosamond established in London and rapidly making her way as an artist. And now comes in the question of her morality. She is not attached to her cousin Bob—nay even, as she afterwards confesses, hates him—but she is prepared to marry him as a duty, in order to reclaim him from his dissolute life. This startling information she imparts to her first lover almost in the same breath as she owns to an ardent passion for himself! And what does that backboneless individual do?—take her by storm and, with his arms round her, swear that she shall commit no such idiotic action? No; he meekly acquiesces, with many reflections on the nobility of her character, and goes back in a spirit of chaste resignation to Australia, which is perhaps the best place for him. But he does not stop there. Not he. After an interval he again makes his way to this country, where he finds the field nicely cleared for him. Bob—whom Rosamond, in pursuance of her determination, has married—is dead, after proving a thoroughly bad husband, and nothing stands in the way of the union of the true lovers but an illness, which fortunately does not prove fatal. This paves the way to another display of sentimentalism, in this case positively mawkish, and the story closes.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—'A House Divided," by E. M. Jameson. The main charm of this story is its simplicity. There are no sensational events, no deep dyed plausible villains, no terrible crimes. The only cloud is that cast on a family by an unstable, unprincipled husband, addicted to gambling, and a selfish though attractive girl, who is mean enough when the crash comes to desert her mother and sister for more affluent surroundings. And yet the story, despite its unsubstantial plot, is undeniably interesting. The character of the dutiful sister, Hester, beloved by a man who has the sense to recognise exceptional qualities of disposition, is drawn with an unstudied sympathy that can scarcely fail to win interest, and all the other personages of the story, if not very strongly outlined, are at least creatures of ordinary flesh and blood, human in their passions and tendencies, instead of the phantasms of a disordered, excitable brain. To the other good attributes of the book we have to add the illustrations of Mr. H. M. Brock, which are distinctly above the average for a book of this description.

From the same—'Partners of the Tide,' by Joseph C. Lincoln. Bradley Nickerson, being left alone in the world, comes to live with the 'old maids' at Orham, and on his journey there becomes acquainted with Ez Titcombe, the captain of a coasting vessel trading to New York. School days over—in which Gusty Baker, the dog-girl, plays an important part—Bradley gives up all idea of the ministry and sails with Captain Titcombe, first as cabin-boy and afterwards as second mate; and subsequently, when the honesty of the pair has got them out of a job, they become partners in a wrecking business, tugging ships off shoals where they have run aground and dragging for lost anchors. This business, which has many exciting moments, is successful, and the love threads end as they should. Such is the bare outline of a book which we have no hesitation in saying is one of the best novels we have read for many a long day. There is plenty of incident and excitement, witness the saving of the six-masted coal-barge, and things happen naturally, they are never forced; while we are introduced to a small number of characters, individuals, and skilful portraits every one of them. The gradual development of Bradley and his love story could not be better, and Captain Titcombe is alive from beginning to end and is full of real humour. Those who want a thoroughly good story, excellently told, should get the book at once, and, further, may be recommended to keep it. It is worth a second reading later on.

From the same.—'The Knowledge of God,' by A. T. Schofield, M D. In these days of indifference in religious matters it is quite refreshing to come across a book which strikes so certain a note as this. It concerns itself with the Christian life rather than with its work, with the character rather than with the career, and seeks to show what a real knowledge of God, as opposed to what may be called the 'Duty' knowledge of Him, truly means. It is a book which should have a wide circle of readers, and its sincere aim, its thoughtfulness, and the certainty and directness of its tone should be a very real help to many.

From The Homeland Association, Ltd.—'Nelson's Homeland: being a Topographical Description of North Norfolk from Hunstanton to the Cley-next-the-Sea, including Burnham Thorpe, Walsingham, and the Adjacent Villages,' by James Hooper, illustrated by Walter Dexter, R.B.A. This first volume of a new series of topographical books, to be known as the 'Homeland Pocket Books,' appears at an opportune time, since, as all the world knows, it is the centenary of Trafalgar. As to the contents little requires to be said beyond what is conveyed by the title; the author gives a good account of the early surroundings of Nelson's life from the topographical view point, and is very effectively assisted in an illustrative sense by Mr. Dexter. For the rest, the book is very well printed, has evidently been edited with care, presents great neatness of binding, and is conveniently adapted for the pocket.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—'The Century Bible: Isaiah—Introduction, Revised Version with Notes, Index, and Maps,' edited by the Rev. Owen C. Waterhouse, M.A., D.D., i.–xxxix. To those familiar with 'The Century Bible' to say that the present volume in the scholarly character of the editorship, the erudition displayed in the notes, and the general good qualities of production is worthy to be ranked with previous issues will be accounted as high praise. Here we have the latest research in Biblical history set forth in a form that is perfectly delightful to handle. Print, thin paper, fairly large type, and limp binding alike contribute to the pleasurable effect produced. Nor should we omit to make special mention of the two excellent maps—the one of Palestine, showing seats of the Twelve Tribes in the eleventh century B.C., the other Syria, Assyria, Babylonia, &c.

From Messrs. Jarrold & Sons.—'The Letters of Little Mary,' by J. Stenson Hooker, M.D. The question of food in its beneficial aspects is by no means a light one, and it is to this that Dr. Hooker in the correspondence of 'Little Mary' devotes himself. Many physicians and philanthropists, he points out in the Preface to his enforcive brochure, are at this day nobly concentrating their efforts upon the intemperance in drinking. But it must not be lost sight of that there is widespread intemperance of eating also, 'which is appalling to all thoughtful men and revolting to all refined souls.' Quite as many men die through indulgence in the pleasures of the table as from alcoholic excess. Tell me, says Dr. Hooker, the diet of an individual and I will tell you the probable length of his days. Frugality in food often tends to long days. Dr. Hooker's work is full of useful lessons, not the less advantageous because they are conveyed under a fanciful disguise.

From Mr. John Lane.—'A Year of Songs for a Baby in a Garden,' by W. Graham Robertson. These simple little songs of the seasons are very pleasing, and will not appeal to the children only. Many a child of larger growth will be charmed with them. 'The Way to We-Don't-Know-Where,' and 'The Autumn Sales' are particularly good; so is the dedication. Good also are the illustrations by the author. Get the book and enjoy it with your children, if you have any; and if you haven't, get the book and see how lacking your life is without them.

From Mr. T. Werner Laurie.—'How to Live the Simple Life,' by Calvin Pater. This may be called a practical guide to those wishing to live the simple life, and contains some of the main arguments of the chief writers upon the subject. The little book should be read, for if we are to hold our place among the nations it seems certain that a check must be placed upon the waste and luxury which prevail, and a return made to that home life which was once the proud boast of Englishmen. The book is pleasantly free from fads, but we have one thing to quarrel about In pursuit of his daily bread the present writer thinks he may claim that he lives simply, but he must positively decline to give up 'that monstrosity of a meal—five o'clock tea.' Take what you will, but leave us the cosy hour of tea. Why, it is an essential of the home life.

From the Library Supply Co., 181 Queen Victoria Street, E.C.—'Leather for Libraries,' by E. Wyndham Hulme, J. Gordon Parker, A. Seymour-Jones, Cyril Davenport, and F. J. Williamson. This is a volume of much interest and informative value for those concerned in the leather trade. The section specially treated of is that having to do with the manufacture of light leathers suitable for bookbinding, upholstery, &c., which are tanned with a pale tannage preparatory to being dyed. The arrangement of the book is as follows: Mr. Wyndham Hulme introduces the subject with a chapter on the 'History of Sumach Tanning in England, Degradation of the Manufacture of Leather, and History of the Reform Movement'; Mr. Gordon Parker points out 'The Causes of Decay in Bookbinding Leathers'; Mr. Seymour-Jones comments on the 'Provenance, Characteristics, and Values of Modern Bookbinding Leathers'; Mr. Cyril Davenport writes of 'The Repairing and Binding of Books for Public Libraries'; and Mr. Williamson concludes the subject with a 'Specification for the Fittings of a Small Bindery.' Many malpractices, on the showing of the authors, would seem to have crept into the preparation of these light leathers, rendering them worthless from a librarian's standpoint. 'Finish' is the object principally aimed at, and to accomplish this mineral acids are recklessly used to secure brilliant shades of colour; 'Persian' and other East Indian skins are stripped of their original tannage and then finished as moroccos; and sheepskin is mechanically grained to imitate goat, seal, and pigskin. The remedy advocated is the adoption of sound methods of manufacturing leather and of honest description in the retail trades.

From Messrs. Methuen & Co.—'Tristan and Isolde,' by Alice Leighton Cleather and Basil Crump. This interpretation of Wagner's great musical drama is very welcome. In a comparatively short space a very careful study of the music and the poem is given, and by the publication of the correspondence between Richard Wagner and Frau Mathilde Wesendonk the authors have been able to embody the musician's own explanations of his work. Wagner stands alone, and to really appreciate him one must be a musician of no mean order; but we cannot help thinking that the master sometimes read into his works more than anyone would have discovered had he not so clearly indicated the road for them in his letters and writings. After all, the real and ultimate value of a work, be it in music or in any other field of art, lies in the meaning and teaching it has for the multitude; and it is doubtful whether the majority of the thousands who have listened to this truly wonderful opera have found in it, or ever will find it, all the meaning which Wagner associated with it. Music, perhaps more than any other mode of expression, touches the individual soul, and the echo it awakens there is the true meaning for that individual. Musicians, and many of those who cannot fully claim the right to such a title, will, however, read this interpretation with keen interest; the former will follow the wonderful blending of motives when they again hear the work, and perchance make new discoveries; but the majority will be carried away by the music, and their own interpretation of it is likely to outweigh any other.

From Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.—'Drawings of Rossetti.' Nearly fifty reproductions of Rossetti's drawings are included in this volume. Among them are such characteristic examples as 'Mary at the Door of Simon,' 'The Death of Lady Macbeth,' 'Venus Verticordia,' 'Study for Desdemona's Death Song,' 'The Parable of the Vineyard,' 'La Donna Della Fiamma,' 'Cassandra,' 'Hamlet and Ophelia,' 'The Palace of Art, and 'The Gate of Memory.' To emphasize their merits, Mr. T. Martin Wood has contributed a lengthy Introduction which certainly exhibits no lack of appreciation of the master's skill.

From Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co.—'The Automatic Calf,' by William Edgar Geil. In an abrupt, staccato style Mr. Geil has written a study of the Ten Commandments. He is very anecdotic, very self-confident, and very dogmatic. We are far from denying that he is often shrewd and sensible, but at times he verges on silliness. 'I like the poems of Wordsworth because they do not contain a single oath. I never care for a book, however brilliant the writer, if it contains "swear words.'" For this reason one might love Mrs. Hemans and hate Byron.

From the Religious Tract Society.—'Facing the World: Stories of Girls who Thought what others only Dreamed about, and Did what others only Thought,' by Jean A. Owen. The healthy tone of these stories of girl life may be said to be their chief recommendation. They record no particularly exciting events, but the unaffected simplicity of their narration and their manifest adherence to the natural occurrences of life are certain to attract a large body of readers. There are three illustrations by A. Guy Smith.

From the same.—'Nature through Microscope and Camera,' by Richard Kerr, F.G.S., with sixty-five photo-micrographs by Arthur E. Smith. Professor Sims Woodhead in his Introduction to this volume goes to great lengths in the matter of praise, but few who have studied the book can deny that it is not thoroughly well deserved. 'I have seen,' he writes, 'many collections of photo-micrographs, and I have examined many of the microscopic objects here delineated, but never before have I fully realised either the beauty of the objects themselves or the possibilities bound up in the method by which these beauties have been reproduced, and so rendered accessible to others than those skilled in the use of the microscope.' The author and artist have traversed a wide range of subject, including fossil Radiolaria and Foraminifera, Radulæ, Cirri of Barnacle and Spines of Echini, Insect Life, Butterfly's Tongue, Eye of Dytiscus, Tongue of Bee and Leg of Bee, Mosquito Diatoms, Sections of Wheat Stems, Sting of Nettle, Human Hair, Human Lung, Tetanus Bacilli, &c. The chief interest of the volume undoubtedly lies in the illustrations, but in his work of description Mr. Kerr has shown no little adaptability and knowledge.

From the Fleming H. Revell Co. — 'Self-Control: its Kingship and Majesty,' by William George Jordon. There are many fine thoughts in this volume, forcibly expressed. The author writes with a shrewdness of outlook that can scarcely fail to win respect on such subjects as 'The Kingship of Self-Control,' 'The Crimes of the Tongue,' 'The Red Tape of Duty,' 'The Greatness of Simplicity,' 'The Majesty of Calmness,' and 'The Power of Personal Influence.' He expresses himself vigorously and candidly, with none of the affectations of style which are so prevalent in present-day essays. The book is American in its tone, and to some extent treats matters from the viewpoint of the New York citizen, but there are qualities of wholesome reasoning and timely exhortation which should render it equally acceptable on this side of the Atlantic.

From Mr. Alston Rivers.—'In Life's Byways,' by C. S. Bradford. The various sketches which make up the volume before us are notable from the fact that the author of them has had the privilege of working a new field. Throughout the book we are brought into close contact with native life in Burma during the military expeditions into and our subsequent occupation of that province, thereby increasing the reader's belief in the characters of each story. We would mention 'Mah Shway' and 'In a Jungle Village' as pathetic stories of unselfish love displayed by Burmese maidens, while 'The Padre,' 'By Teinmyo's Graves,' and 'Because of his Ancestors' have the additional merit of being told by a writer who finds no lack of incident or interest in his subject.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—'The Poetical Works of Robert Bridges.' Volume VI of this neat, well-printed, tastefully bound edition of Mr. Bridges's poetical works contains 'The Feast of Bacchus' and the 'Second Part of the History of Nero,' with the customary notes. The first named, a prefatory note reminds us, was originally printed for private circulation by H. Daniel, of Oxford, in 1889, being subsequently published (1894) by George Bell & Sons in conjunction with J. & E. Bumpus, Ltd., while in the same year 'The History of Nero' appeared also bearing the imprint of these publishing firms. The public appreciation of Mr. Bridges's verse which has called into being this uniform edition of his works is to us a very gratifying circumstance. It shows that readers can value sincerity of writing—a direct appeal to the heart, with pure refined expression—in contrast with the artificial outpourings of the æsthetic poet which mainly make for sensuous effect.

From the Sunday School Union.—'Outlines for my Class: Sketches of Bible Lessons for the different Grades in a Sunday School,' by William H. Groser, B.Sc. Prefaced by some helpful suggestions on the subject of lesson preparation, these 'outlines' will be found of excellent service by those engaged in Sunday School work. They are obviously dictated by one who has had long practical experience of class instruction, and knows exactly the best way of fixing the attention of his juvenile hearers. Many a teacher who is painfully conscious of his own deficiencies of treatment will welcome this little volume and feel grateful to the author for the assistance thus afforded him.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'A Royal Rascal,' by Major Arthur Griffiths. This is the story of the career of a soldier, and, whether truth or fiction, is a capital tale. It opens in Gibraltar in 1795, when 'Saucy' St. Clair, the artillery captain's son, lights upon a conspiracy while on a fishing expedition, and, at peril of his life, succeeds in giving information in time. As a reward he was given a commission, and so started his military career. Many stirring incidents during the wars with France follow, in which young St. Clair gains considerable kudos and corresponding advancement. During the Peninsular war, while a prisoner, he meets his future wife, and early in 1815, when the war was supposed to be over, they were married. Napoleon's return, however, caused him to take the field again, and at Waterloo he was severely wounded and his leg had to be taken off. This, of course, necessitated his retirement into private life, and brings an interesting, not to say exciting, story to an end.

From Messrs. Valentine & Sons, Ltd.—'Picturesque Yorkshire (York and the North Riding),' by William Andrews. Mr. Andrews has much that is interesting to tell his readers concerning the 'Land of Broad Acres,' and in this volume of 'The Shire Series' he draws upon an antiquarian knowledge which seems well nigh inexhaustible. But this is as one might have expected from his previous works. In the author's delightful company we visit York, Castle Howard, Old and New Malton, Helmsley, Rievaulx Abbey, Scarborough, Whitby, Mulgrave Castle, Middlesborough, Richmond, Easby Abbey, Bolton Castle, and some score or more of other interesting places, our way being further brightened by a profusion of illustrations which, reproduced from photographs, afford a very realistic impression of the various localities. Those unable to visit Yorkshire and who yet would know something of its characteristics could scarcely do better than purchase this neatly bound volume.

From Mr. Philip Wellby.—'Some Better Things for Us,' by A. S. L. Religion regarded from the view point of faith is, as it seems to us, an extremely delicate and difficult subject to treat. We can indulge in generalities with ease, but confined to pure reason the way is scarcely so clear. The author of this volume announces that his chapters are addressed especially to 'that large class of sufferers whose trials have not found adequate support in the presentment of religion which has come their way.' There is much in his work that will carry consolation to the minds of the doubtful, though it can scarcely be considered entirely convincing. The devoutness and sincerity attending his treatment of the subject are beyond question.

NEW EDITIONS, &C. — The Society for Christian Knowledge have issued a second edition, revised, of 'Roman Roads in Britain,' by Thomas Codrington, M.Inst.C.E. Included in the book, which treats of its subject in very interesting and comprehensive fashion, are a large chart of the Roman roads and small maps in the text.—From the Religious Tract Society we have received a copy of 'Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners in a Faithful Account of the Life and Death of John Bunyan, or a Brief Relation of the Exceeding Mercy of God in Christ to him,' thoroughly revised by the eighth edition, with eight coloured illustrations by Harold Copping.—Mr. Chas. J. Thynne has published a popular re-issue of 'What is Truth? the Doctrines of Romanists and Ritualists Contrasted with the Word of God,' by E. A. Rawlence.—The attention of readers may be directed to 'Publican and Serf,' by Skitalets, translated from the Russian by J. K. M. Shirazi, of which a sixpenny edition has been sent out by Mr. Alston Rivers.—Several books issued for the Rationalist Press Association, Ltd., have been received from Messrs. Watts & Co. Among these are a popular edition, carefully revised, of 'Supernatural Religion: an Inquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation' and paper-bound copies of 'The Wonders of Life,' by Ernst Haeckel, translated by Joseph McCabe; 'The Age of Reason,' by Thomas Paine, with a Biographical Introduction by John M. Robertson; and 'The Fundamental Principles of the Positive Philosophy: being the First Two Chapters of the "Cours de Philosophie Positive" of Auguste Comte,' translated by Paul Descours and H. Gordon Jones, with a biographical Preface by Professor Beesley.—Two interesting and exciting novels are to hand in sixpenny editions ('The Kingsway' series) from Mr. T. Scaley Clarke, of 34 Craven Street, W.C. These are 'A Woman Against the World,' by George Griffiths, and 'Princess Kate,' by Louis Tracy, both past masters in the art of weaving mysteries.—The Walter Scott Publishing Co. have issued in an especially neat, well-printed form 'Physical Education of the Young, or the Nurture and Management of Children, founded on the Study of their Nature and Constitution,' by Samuel Smiles, edited with appropriate additions by Sir Hugh Beevor, Bart., M.D.—From Messrs. George Routledge & Sons we have received 'Proverbs and their Lessons,' by Archbishop Trench, with Additional Notes and a Bibliography of Proverbs by A. Smythe Palmer, D.D. — The ninth edition of 'Exercises to Accompany the Wellington College French Grammar,' by H. W. Eve, M.A., and the Rev. J. H. D. Matthews, M.A., published by Mr. David Nutt, contains several additions which greatly add to the utility of the manual.—A cheap edition in paper covers, with illustrations by Cyrus Cuneo, has been issued of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's powerful novel 'Eleanor,' by Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd. This should be highly appreciated by lovers of the highest form of fiction.

We have been favoured by Messrs. A. Constable & Co. with a copy of their new illustrated English edition of 'The Kentuckians,' a novel, by John Fox, Jr. The cruelty and tenderness of the natives of the Blue Grass region is happily relieved by some sympathetic sketches of its natural beauty; while in the portraiture of Randolph Marshall and Boone Stallard, who dominate the story, the author merits praise for his subtle analysis of Kentuckian character.

From Messrs. De La Rue & Co., Ltd., we have received new editions of 'Bridge Abridged' and 'Bridge at a Glance,' both by W. Dalton. These books are so well known now to every Bridge player who studies the game at all that it is unnecessary for us to do more than welcome these new editions.

From the Gresham Publishing Company we have received Vol. II. of 'The World of To-day,' by A. R. Hope Moncrieff, which completes the survey of Asia. The interest aroused by the first volume is fully maintained; a most interesting work.

We have received from Messrs. Hazell, Watson & Viney, a copy of Mr. E. Derry's 'Patriotic Poems in Commemoration of the Centenary of the Battle of Trafalgar, fought on the 21st October, 1805.' This little book, the cover of which is tastefully ornamented with a coloured presentment of the Union Jack, contains many inspiring verse tributes to the valorous deeds of our sailors and soldiers, some of which are really worthy of public recital.

From Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son we have also received several other educational works of great efficiency—viz. 'A Primer of General History, Part II.,' treating of Mediæval History, by M. A. Howard, B.A.; 'Illustrative History—Stuart Period,' edited by J. W. B. Adams, M.A.; and 'Tales of the Middle Ages,' edited by C. L. Thompson, forming Volume V. of 'The Romance Readers.'

We have been favoured by Messrs. Marshall Brothers with a copy of their bulky report of the various meetings arranged under the direction of the Thirty-first Keswick Convention held during July of the present year. The recorded gatherings of this now celebrated Christian brotherhood palpably bear the impression of their teaching and testimony, and will be found instructive reading by those who are most in sympathy with the efforts of all connected with this active religious centre at Keswick.

A little volume of 'Selected Poems,' specially prepared by Mr. Austin Dobson from his published works, has been received by us from Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner & Co. In the tastefully gotten up book are to be found some old favourites, such as 'A Virtuoso,' 'The Drama of the Doctor's Widow,' 'The Ballad of Beau Brocade,' and 'The Old Sedan Chair,' which have made this poet famous for the refreshing variety of his elegant verse. The same publishers have sent us a copy of 'The Book of Psalms,' translated from a revised text, with notes and Introductions, by the Rev. Canon T. K. Cheyne, D.Litt., D.D. The ambition of the publishers and the translator of the present edition has been to make the Psalms in this form enjoyable, as well as to promote an intelligent pleasure in the reading of the Psalter at all times. The book is a most tasteful production, and ought to meet with an assured approbation from readers of this portion of the Scriptures.

We have received from the Pall Mall Press a copy of their 'Pictures of New London and Old.' For the lover of the great city, either as resident, provincial visitor, or tourist invader, the book will prove an excellent guide; while the artistic illustrations, mostly from drawings and photographs, will be a fit memorial of the important fresh features, in combination with much of historic interest.

We have received from Messrs. G. Routledge & Sons a copy of their new edition of the Rev. Charles Swan's translation from the Latin of the 'Gesta Romanorum.' This latest issue of a classical compendium of 'entertaining moral stories'—that has for centuries shared with the 'Arabian Nights' and Thomas Malory's 'Morte d'Arthur' equal fame—has now been augmented with a special Preface by E. A. Baker, M.A. The production of this cheap, well-printed, and annotated edition of a venerable classic is creditable to the enterprising publishers.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

⁂ In addition to the names of book sizes, such as cr. 8vo., royal 8vo., &c., the sizes are also given where possible in inches: inch = 2½ centimètres.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE'S LIST

THE BOOK OF THE SEASON.

EMMA, LADY HAMILTON

By WALTER SICHEL, Author of 'Bolingbroke and his Times,' 'Disraeli: a Study,' &c.
With a Coloured Portrait and numerous other Illustrations in Photogravure, Collotype, &c. Demy 8vo. 21s. net.

SECOND IMPRESSION ON MONDAY NEXT.

Extract from a three-column illustrated review on day of publication by Mr. A. G. Gardiner in the Daily News: 'It was inevitable and right that in the midst of the Nelson celebrations the remarkable woman who was so linked with his name and his destiny should not be forgotten. Mr. Sichel has presented her case with the fervour of a knight errant. He has produced not merely a book of poignant human interest, but an historical document of the first importance. He has had access to new and important sources of information, and has cleared up many hitherto doubtful points.

THIRD IMPRESSION OF THE BOOK OF JAPAN.

THE RISEN SUN. By Baron K. Suyematsu.

Demy 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

'Baron Suyematsu is an authority who will be widely read and cheerfully accepted in all he has to say about Japan, not only for his own sake, but for that of the information he is peculiarly qualified to give concerning the diplomatic relations of his own country with the rest of the world.'—Daily Telegraph.

'A record not only of personal industry and of the growth of a nation, but clever justification of the claims of the Japanese to rank with the great Powers of the West.'—Standard.

REMARKABLE NEW NOVEL.

THE FLAMING SWORD

By SILAS K. HOCKING.

Large crown 8vo. cloth gilt, price 3s. 6d.

The keynote of the story is furnished by the title. It is impossible to undo the evil we have done, to restore the old order of things, to go back to the old Eden from which we have been driven out—'the Flaming Sword that turns every way' bars the road.

RECENT VOLUMES BY SAME AUTHOR.

Large crown 8vo. cloth gilt, price 6s.

PIONEERS

By SILAS K. HOCKING.

'Mr. Hocking has written many admirable stories, but none, one may venture to say, so effective as this. He has presented his characters with convincing fidelity to human nature. . . . The reader will follow their careers with interest, and in especial that of the heroine, who is a pronounced and most attractive individuality. In a word, the novel is a notable success.'—SCOTSMAN.

IN BOHEMIA.

By Mrs. T. STERRY HUNT.

'CANADIENNE.'

An edition of this work was published some years ago in Toronto and met with a very gratifying reception, and we feel confident that this new and revised edition will quickly introduce this charming and thoughtful writer to all lovers of poetry in this country.

'In Bohemia,' is a short story in prose of considerable power depicting a character who loses much through her charming unselfishness. The poems are of many shades, some joyful, some sad, and many recalling foreign travel.

THE SIEGE OF THE SOUTH POLE

The Story of Antarctic Exploration

By H. R. MILL, D.Sc., LL.D.

Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

"THIS MUST BECOME THE STANDARD WORK OF REFERENCE ON THE ANTARCTIC.'—MORNING LEADER.

The MORNING POST says:

'Dr. Mill's qualifications for the task are indisputable. . . . But while Dr. Mill undoubtedly possessed the requisite knowledge, it remained to be proved whether he possessed the equally essential qualification of being able to convey that knowledge to others in an attractive form. The present volume is a triumphant demonstration of his literary insight and skill, for while making no sacrifice of scientific accuracy he has produced a narrative of Antarctic exploration which will fascinate the intelligent schoolboy as surely as it will instruct the serious student of Polar exploration. Dr. Mill has, in short, done for the whole story of Antarctic exploration what Captain Scott has done in his two recently published volumes for the voyage of the "Discovery," and there is a very real sense in which the two books may be said to be each the complement of the other.'

ALSTON RIVERS' Publications include many of the most popular books of the day. At the Libraries and Bookshops everybody is asking for 'HUGH RENDAL,' by Lionel Portman, and 'A LONDON GIRL,' by an anonymous author. Amongst Christmas Books, the new volume by the Author of 'A DOG DAY,' entitled 'THE ZOO: A SCAMPER,' by Walter Emanuel, with Illustrations by John Hassall, is also in great demand, whilst the most recently published volumes, 'A GUIDE TO FAIRYLAND,' written and illustrated by Dion Clayton Calthrop, and 'THE STOAT PACK,' by G. G. Desmond, are rapidly achieving popularity. Please write for Illustrated List.

THE PIG BOOK

POURQUOI?

Every Pig has its day (even as a dog), and as there are many dog books, why not a Pig Book? We hasten to explain that a Pig Book is a book having reference to pigs. We give it this title because it sounds more polite than 'Pigs I have met.' As most people draw just as well with their eyes closed as open, the inflexible rule of the Pig Book is that the artist shall close his or her eyes, draw a pig on one of the pages, and lift the pencil before putting in (or out, as the case may be) the eye of the pig. The artist then signs in order to fix the responsibility.

Some people can draw a pig, and most people think they can.

The line at the head of the title page is for the use of the owner, so that the page may read, 'Mrs. Porkington's Pig Book,' or 'Chanticleer Hall Pig Book,' so to speak, as the case may be.

A. PIGGE.

EACH PAGE CONTAINS HUMOROUS SKETCHES OF PIGS, AND IS EMBELLISHED WITH APPROPRIATE LITERARY QUOTATIONS FROM HOMER TO 'GORGON GRAHAM.'

'EMMA LADY HAMILTON'[*] AND 'LETTERS TO IVY.'[†]

BOOKSELLERS of the Empire who would like to help to do justice to a being who, as he often said, was Nelson's guardian angel should read and recommend to their customers Mr. Walter Sichel's new work entitled 'Emma Lady Hamilton,' which has been admirably produced by Messrs. Constable. For nearly a century the minds of many people have been poisoned by malevolent accounts of Lady Hamilton. Hundreds of thousands of her countrymen and women have been taught to think of her as a scheming, vulgar adventuress, whose only influence on Nelson was for evil. To us it has always seemed incomprehensible how anyone could read carefully the long correspondence between Nelson and Lady Hamilton without being absolutely convinced that her soul was a fit mate for his, and that their union, with all its consequences, was as inevitable for them as death.

Mr. Sichel's work is not only a vindication of Lady Nelson's real character, it is also a vindication of Nelson's love for her, and his claim for recognition of the services she had rendered to her country. Nelson, on his last return to England, had forwarded to Pitt through Lord Abercorn a solemn assurance that it was through Lady Hamilton's 'exclusive interposition that he had obtained provisions and water for the English ships at Syracuse in the summer of 1798, by which he was enabled to return to Egypt in quest of the enemy's fleet.' Nelson's word ought to have been sufficient, but it has been questioned, and not the least of the services Mr. Sichel has done is to prove, by new documents, the truth of Nelson's assurance.

Mr. Sichel's fascinating volume is in no sense a whitewashing one—all there was of wrong, deep wrong, to Lady Nelson and to Sir William Hamilton is of course admitted. What we regret most about it is that he does not insist even more strongly on the great services Lady Hamilton rendered to her country. If Nelson had told his countrymen they owed not only the victory of the Nile but all, even Trafalgar, to Lady Hamilton, who shall dispute her claim? He tells her so time after time in his impassioned letters. It is impossible to read their letters—never intended for other eyes than theirs—and not see that it was her unselfish, patriotic, and splendid encouragement which sustained him, not only in the excitement of battle but in the long weary intervals of sickness, dejection, and neglect of which he so often complains. As Mr. Sichel says, to Nelson, Emma was not only his, but Britain's guardian angel. It is impossible to read her reply to Nelson's poetic effusion beginning in true sailor fashion:

> From my best cable tho' I'm forced to part,
> I leave my anchor in my angel's heart without a feeling of sadness and resentment at the way Nelson's angel was treated by her country—her heart broken, her grave nameless and unknown.

The 'Answer of Lord Nelson's Guardian Angel' is in Nelson's own handwriting, dated 'St. George, April 2nd, 1801, 9 o'clock at night, very tired after a hard-fought battle' (Copenhagen), and the italics are his:—

> Go where you list, each thought of Emma's soul
> Shall follow you from Indus to the Pole:
> East, West, North, South, our minds shall never part;
> Your angel's loadstone shall be Nelson's heart.
> Farewell! and o'er the wide, wide sea
> Bright Glory's course pursue,
> And adverse winds to love and me
> Prove fair to fame and you.
> And when the dreaded hour of battle's nigh,
> Your angel's heart, which trembles at a sigh,
> By your superior danger bolder grown,
> Shall dauntless place itself before your own.
> Happy, thrice happy, should her fond heart prove—
> A Shield to Valour, Constancy, and Love.

Mr. Sichel's book, with its delightful portraits of 'Emma,' proves that she was worthy to inspire her hero with such stirring lines as these.

In its nature, as well as by force of circumstances, the union of Nelson and this 'true Englishwoman,' as he proudly calls her, was chiefly in spirit and in the spirit of these lines.

THE FIRST LORD DUDLEY'S 'LETTERS TO IVY.'

1781–1833.

The very interesting series of letters edited by Mr. Samuel H. Romilly form part of a correspondence which the Earl of Dudley kept up throughout his life with his greatest friend, Mrs. Stewart, the second wife of Professor Dugald Stewart. Helen d'Arcy Stewart, the 'Ivy' to whom John William Ward, afterwards created Earl of Dudley, addressed these letters, must indeed have been a charming lady, and every reader of this volume will regret that the letters of 'Ivy' to Lord Dudley have not been preserved. Although it must be confessed that one looks in vain in these letters for much evidence of the extraordinary powers of mind, wit of the brightest order, and other intellectual attributes claimed for his friend by Lord Brougham, they are full of interest by reason of their references to the sayings and doings of 'most of the leading actors in an interesting period of history and society.'

Almost in his first letter we are introduced to Samuel Rogers, who is described as a little affected, very amiable, and, like his own works, polished and finished 'to the most marvellous perfection.' A little later on he says he has read 'The Lady of the Lake,' finds it quite charming, and doubts if Rogers will survive it.

Writing from Brighton in October 1812, he says: 'You have probably seen Walter Scott's poem already. Pray tell me something about it. I never buy those fine wire-wove quartos, so that as far as I am concerned it will be unpublished till the octavo, price 18*s.*, comes out.'

Writing in May 1813, when the publishers were trying to get rid of the tax of having to give free copies of new books to the universities, he says: 'À propos of universities, your taking part against them with those lying rogues the booksellers is utterly abominable. Half-a-dozen copies of a book printed without any ostentatious decorations can hurt nobody. As to the fine works, as they are called, the loss will fall upon the purchaser, who will like them something the better for being something the dearer. Authors are certainly entitled to a more extended term in the property of their own labours. Eight-and-twenty years seems to be the present notion, to which I wish to add "or their own lives," in case they survive that period. Would that do?'

[†] Letters to Ivy, from the First Earl of Dudley. By S. H. Romilly. With Illustrations, with full Index. (London: Longmans, Green & Co.)

As a set-off to his libel on publishers, there are some handsome references to John Murray II. Writing from Nerot's Hotel,* Clifford Street, on January 7, 1816, he says: 'I sent the copy of Mr. S.'s book to Lord Byron through Murray, with the message you wished to accompany it. By the bye, I have always (though you have sometimes spoken of him) forgot to make honourable mention of the excellent Murray. He is the prince of all booksellers and publishers, liberal minded, well educated, and well mannered and of a pleasing aspect.'

There are many references to Byron, Scott, Campbell, Rogers, Macaulay, who is called a 'very clever, very educated, and very disagreeable man,' Sydney Smith, Moore, and other literary lights, but the bulk of the letters deal with politics and politicians. To read these letters, as the editor says, is 'almost as if one heard Lord Dudley pouring his heart out in conversation to her who shared in all his fears and aspirations. It is this spontaneity which gives them their special charm.' A word of praise is due to the editor's admirable sidelights on the politics of the period.

A GERMAN COMPLAINT AGAINST AN ENGLISH EDITOR.

THE Börsenblatt, of Leipzig, which is the chief organ of the German book trade, has a note in its last issue of which the following is the gist—that German publishers who think of sending books to English editors for review should be cautious in doing so. It appears that Messrs. Helwig, the publishers, of Hanover, sent a book for notice to an English class paper of high standard, edited in Edinburgh and published in London. After waiting a year they inquired of the editor if any notice of the book would be given, and were informed, so it is said, that, although the editor had received a review, he was 'unable' to use it, as they 'did not care to praise foreign works.'

We cannot believe that any English or Scottish editor would make such a statement as this, and we challenge the Messrs. Helwig to substantiate their charge by giving the address of the editor or the name of the publication.

In any case we regret that the Börsenblatt should refer to this isolated unproved case as a specimen of the 'friendliness of our cousins across the Channel.'

Our literary and scientific papers constantly give reviews of German and other foreign works, often in terms of the highest praise. We have often been struck, for instance, with the able reviews of German scientific works, which appear from time to time in Nature, and of general foreign literature in the Athenæum.

In the Republic of Letters there should be no international jealousies, and we can assure our German friends that we in this country should despise an editor who refused to praise a good book because it was by a German author quite as much as any German would.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

'THE Bookman Illustrated History of English Literature,' of which Part I. has just been published by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, is likely to be a great success—and it deserves it, for it is well done, most moderate in price, and will be complete in 12 parts at 1*s*. net each.

We are glad to see that Mr. Unwin is issuing a new impression of Mr. W. Clark Russell's capital story, 'A Yarn of Old Harbour Town.'

Mr. William Heinemann will publish early in November 'Through Five Republics (of South America),' by Percy F. Martin, F.R.G.S. The work will be fully illustrated.

Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co. have pleasure in announcing that they are publishing towards the end of October a collected edition of the Poems and Plays of Mr. C. Whitworth Wynne, whose 'Ad Astra' and 'David and Bathshua' met with such a popular welcome a few years ago. About a third of the volume is new matter.

Miss Agnes M. Clerke has prepared a new edition of 'The System of the Stars,' which will shortly be published by Messrs. A. & C. Black. The book has everywhere been revised and largely rewritten, and novelty has been given to the illustrations by extensive substitutions, suppressions, and additions.

A portrait of Professor von Behring, whose forecast of his expected cure of consumption was the sensation of the Paris Congress on Tuberculosis, is the frontispiece to the November number of the World's Work and Play, and the 'cure' is explained by Dr. Saleeby.

We are glad to hear that thousands of copies of 'The Words and Deeds of Nelson,' the little book issued by Mr. Henry Frowde, are now being distributed throughout the country.

The Prince of Wales has taken to read on his journey to India Mr. H. K. Beauchamp's translation of 'Hindu Manners, Customs, and Ceremonies,' by the Abbé Dubois. His Royal Highness was pleased to accept from the University of Oxford a specially bound copy of this work, which throws valuable light on the state of India from 1792 to 1823.

Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd., are publishing in November a volume of poems by Mrs. Charles Mackay, under the title of 'The Song of the London Man, The Song of South Africa, and other Poems.' Mrs. Mackay is the widow of a well-known London author and journalist whose premature death at the Cape after a long and incurable illness will be within the memory of many. Many of the verses included in the volume have appeared in Blackwood and the Pall Mall Magazine and in Cape papers, and some of the earlier ones received a warm commendation from the late Lord Tennyson.

His Majesty the King has graciously accepted a copy of Dr. Andrew Carnegie's 'Life of James Watt,' to complete the set of the 'Famous Scots Series of Biographies' in the library at Balmoral Castle.

Messrs. Cornish Bros., Ltd., of Birmingham, publish a most useful fourpenny brochure, entitled 'Cottage Gardens, Practical Hints on Cultivation and Management,' by Colonel the Hon. R. Stapleton-Cotton, with a Preface by the Duchess of Sutherland. If all who have cottage gardens followed the excellent advice as to growing and cooking vegetables the nation would soon be richer.

Mr. Heinemann will publish, on the 30th inst., a new story of life in a preparatory school, entitled 'Maitland Major and Minor,' by Mr. Charles Turley, illustrated by Mr. Gordon Browne. Mr. Turley will be favourably remembered as the author of 'Godfrey Marten.'

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., have ready a new edition of 'A Few Hints on Proving Wills,' by a Probate Court Official. This little book gives directions for proving wills without the expense of professional assistance, and includes also forms of wills and accounts.

* Nelson stayed at Nerot's Hotel.

Mr. Wyndham Albery, a son of the lady known to playgoers as Miss Mary Moore, is about to publish through Mr. Heinemann a little book of poems of which report speaks very highly.

'A Book of Mortals: being a Record of the Good Deeds and Qualities of what Humanity is pleased to call the Lower Animals' is the title of a book by Mrs. Flora Annie Steel which Mr. Heinemann will publish on the 30th inst. The work is a plea for recognition of what may be called the human side of animals, their intimate relation to and far-reaching influence upon man. Examples of this human side are taken from modern instances as well as from the myths of East and West, and the book has forty full-page illustrations.

'The Cathedral Builders in England' is the title of the forthcoming number of the Portfolio Monographs. Mr. Edward S. Prior, the author, is well known by his writings on Gothic art, and he has produced a most illuminating and interesting book. Among the many illustrations of the cathedrals as they used to be there will be several facsimiles in colours and gold of miniatures from old missals, selected mainly to show the mural decorations of the cathedrals when they were erected.

Mr. Roger Fry, the well-known art critic, has just completed the new illustrated edition of Sir Joshua Reynolds's 'Discourses,' which will be issued shortly by Messrs. Seeley.

Mr. Edward Stanford announces that he will have ready in the course of a few days a new and revised edition of 'A Descriptive Catalogue of Historical Novels and Tales,' by H. Courthope Bowen, M.A. The system of classification in geographical divisions has been retained, while the number of books included has been considerably increased.

Mr. Fisher Unwin's new books for Monday include Lord Coleridge's book, 'The Story of a Devonshire House'; a new book by Mrs. Catherine Bearne, entitled 'A Queen of Napoleon's Court,' the life-story of Désirée Clary, who married Bernadotte, King of Sweden; and an important work by Mr. David H. James, Special War Correspondent for the Daily Telegraph with the Third Japanese Army, entitled 'The Siege of Port Arthur: Records of an Eye-Witness.' The author was taken out to Japan as a child, and speaks both Japanese and Chinese.

Mr. Martin Breslauer, of 16 Unter den Linden, Berlin, sends us a copy of his most interesting illustrated catalogue of old and rare books, including 'Letters of Indulgence,' the Bull of Sixtus IV. printed from the oldest Gutenberg type; Aldines, Americana, chap books, early romances, &c. Among the incunabula is a Passio Domini by Biel, 1509. The catalogue is itself a beautiful bit of printing in red and black, with copious and valuable explanatory notes.

The existence of many popular children's annuals does not deter the publishers from bringing out still other books for the very critical public of two years of age and upwards. The 'Playroom Annual' is the latest in the field, being announced for publication about November 10 by Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son. It possesses some uncommon features, which give the publishers ground for hoping that it will be especially popular. These include pictures for children to sew, and others for them to weave, as well as pictures to paint, songs with music, a story by John Strange Winter, and large coloured plates.

Mr. Heinemann will publish immediately 'Nigel Thomson,' by V. Taubman-Goldie. It is a story of life at Oxford.

Dr. J. Holland Rose—who is, of course, one of our greatest authorities on the period of Nelson—is contributing to the November number of the Independent Review a paper on 'The True Significance of Trafalgar.' It propounds an entirely new view of the consequences of the battle. The other contributions to the same number will include 'Treasury Control,' by Mr. Reginald McKenna, M.P; 'Hungary and Austria,' by Dr. Josef Redlich; 'The Principle of Municipal Trading,' by Mr. Edwin Cannan; 'The Gaelic League,' by the Rev. J. O. Hannay; 'The Scottish Farm Labourer,' by Mr. William Diack; 'At the Sign of the Lion,' by Mr. Hilaire Belloc; and 'Charles Lamb,' by Mr. Herbert Paul.

On October 30 Mr. T. Fisher Unwin will publish a work on 'General Sociology,' by Professor Albion W. Small, Head of the Department of Sociology in the University of Chicago. It is an exposition of the main development in sociologic theory from Spencer to Ratzenhofer.

Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell is preparing a new edition of A. Welbourne Summers's successful story entitled 'Mad Barbara.'

Mr. H. R. Allenson has in the press 'A Tale of Six Little Travellers,' written and pictured by Mrs. Arthur Gaskin; and 'The Cinderella Owl-Book,' a new rendering of the old fairy tale in prose and illustration. Both have been produced by the well-known firm of Edmund Evans, with whose name is associated the best work of Kate Greenaway and Caldecott.

Mr. J. F. Meehan's October article in the Beacon deals with Bowood and the Lansdowne Family, and is one of the best of his very interesting series.

Mr. H. R. Allenson is publishing a new work by Charles F. Dole, entitled 'The Religion of a Gentleman.'

Messrs. Watts & Co. are publishing at sixpence Major Stewart L. Murray's 'The Future Peace of the Anglo-Saxons,' with an impressive Introduction by Earl Roberts.

The November issue of the New Album (No. 2), the new Magazine of Modes, was ready on October 27. It is a great advance on the first number, which was so well received that the large edition was out of print shortly after publication.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. have made arrangements with Sir Harry Johnston to contribute the portion dealing with Africa to their intensely interesting and really great work on the 'Living Races of Mankind.' This section of the publication will appear very shortly, and will contain photographs of many African types hitherto little known, including some characteristic pictures of the Pygmy races.

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., beg to announce that owing to heavy work in the binding of the two volumes of Captain Mahan's new work on 'Sea Power in its Relations to the War of 1812,' they are compelled to postpone delivery to the trade until Tuesday, October 31.

The Life Story of Sir Laurence Alma-Tadema, R.A., is well known as most interesting, and in a volume to be published shortly by Messrs. Cassell & Co., written by Mr. Percy Cross Standing, it is narrated fully from its beginning. A feature of the book will be the large number of illustrations—some of which are in colour—by means of which the reader can follow the development of Sir Laurence's art through its various phases.

We do not quite understand the tactics of the Investor's Review. In its October 7 issue it praised the Times New Book Scheme to the skies; in its issue of October 21 it as good as buries it, and for funeral oration makes a text of the Times Book Catalogue. The Times Scheme will not die because in its really wonderful book catalogue (which is given to subscribers) it mentions some books which have been remaindered since they were published. Every book catalogue pretending to be in the least complete must include books which have failed and been remaindered, and it must give the price they were published at.

No. 72 of the 'Photo Miniature Series' deals exclusively with Photography for Profit, a topic of intense interest to the majority of workers.

The Christmas number of the Art Journal, 'The Art Annual, 1905,' will contain an account of Frank Dicksee, R.A., by E. Rimbault Dibdin, fully and specially illustrated.

CELEBRITIES OF LAST CENTURY.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES BROOKFIELD are the authors of a book which Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., here and the Scribners in America will publish simultaneously on the 30th of this month. The title is 'Mrs. Brookfield and her Circle'; it will be fully illustrated with portraits and sketches—some of the latter being from hitherto unpublished drawings of Thackeray. The volumes are rich in literary anecdotes, for Canon Brookfield and his accomplished wife were on terms of close friendship not only with the author of 'Vanity Fair' and 'Esmond' (Mrs. Brookfield, as all lovers of Thackeray know, was the original of Lady Castlewood), but with the Tennysons, Carlyles, Hallams, Ashburtons, Procters, and Lytteltons; James Spedding, G. S. Venables, A. W. Kinglake, Richard Monckton Milnes, Tom Taylor, Sam Rogers, R. C. Trench, Sir Henry Taylor, and wellnigh all the literary celebrities of the Queen's reign. The material for this book has been obtained almost exclusively from unpublished family letters, journals, and papers which shed much fresh light upon a brilliant and remarkable group of people about whom it is scarcely possible to hear too much.

LAFCADIO HEARN, THE MAN.

ALL admirers of the late Lafcadio Hearn should see a delightful article about him and his work by his Japanese friend Nobushige Amenomori in the October number of the Atlantic Monthly. If the English of this kindly appreciation is the writer's own, it shows a marvellous knowledge of our language.

HALL CAINE CONTENT.

ADMIRES RULERS AND MILLIONAIRES, BUT WOULD SOONER BE A NOVELIST.

HALL CAINE, the English novelist, was the guest of honour and principal speaker at a dinner given at the Union Club last night by Joseph H. Sears, President of D. Appleton & Co., publishers. Mr. Caine spoke in a tone faintly touched with melancholy, dwelling particularly upon the inevitable passing of the favourite author.

'The new generation is always knocking at the door,' he said. 'Older literary men must be prepared to step down. After all, why should a man linger on after his message is said? I have had a long, happy sequence of successes. I shall try to be reconciled even if the public forsakes me. While I have art and ability there will always be appreciation. There is nothing that is at once so faithless and so faithful as the public.'

Mr. Caine again denied the report that he had come to America to study the genus millionaire. He characterised his alleged interview with a reporter as 'telepathic.'

'It is wonderful,' he continued, 'to be a man of immense wealth, to control the destinies of great masses of men. It is yet more wonderful to be a statesman, a position that has enabled your Chief Executive to stand higher than any crowned head in the world. But I would not give up being a novelist to become either a millionaire or a President. I think, however, that when the great American novel comes it must deal with the huge problems of the power and position of wealth. As for me, if I ever approach these matters, it must be only from the point of view of my tiny island, seeing, as it were, in little. Yet seeing in little, one often sees more closely and more finely.'

Speaking of his twofold character as novelist and playwright, Mr. Caine referred with smiling frankness to the 'solid American money' that had 'gone home to his little isle' from his plays in this country.

'It is a great joy to see emotions flash from the stage to the faces of one's audience,' he said. 'Still, the best I have to say will always go into my books. In the novel the author often comes as close to his public as a very brother or sister.'

Mr. Caine characterised his return to America as a 'return to friends.'

'I have come to see my friends and the friends of my books. Literature has no nationality. The American and the English public alike want ever the good and the true.'

He recalled his former visit, when he was a guest at a similar dinner given by Colonel Daniel Appleton, then President of the Appleton Company.

In introducing his guest of honour Mr. Sears, after denying the report of Mr. Caine's special interest in the American millionaire, referred to 'that millionaire of the Middle West, who has lately wept at receiving the congratulations of his friends.'

Mr. Sears's other guests were Alfred Jaretski, Lloyd Osbourne, Howard C. Smith, Jesse Lynch Williams, George S. Emory John Kendrick Bangs, John H. Finley, Forrest Raynor, Arthur Spurgeon, J. Walter Thompson, William W. Appleton, W. Ralph Hall Caine, Herman K. Viele, Charles Hathaway, John B. Dennis, Finley Peter Dunne, James Barnes, Charles Dana Gibson, Colonel Daniel Appleton, H. P. Davison, William H. Porter, and George W. Perkins. —New York Times, Sept. 28.

TRAFALGAR RE-FOUGHT.

IT was certainly as appropriate as anything could be that Messrs. Nelson should publish on the centenary of Nelson's greatest victory this account of 'Trafalgar Re-fought,' by the late Sir William Laird Clowes and Mr. Alan H. Burgoyne. As the Foreword says, the idea is decidedly novel, the object of the authors being to endeavour to show what Trafalgar would have been like had it been fought in 1905. It is rather shocking to see a picture of Nelson about to step into his electric motor-car to run down from Merton to Portsmouth and there embark in his ever so many thousand-ton steel-clad 'Victory.' The idea, whatever one may think of it as an idea, is admirably carried out, and the illustrations, battle plans, and whole get-up of the work make it as attractive in appearance as it is original in idea. In our Christmas number we hope to give a further notice of it, with an illustration.

MR. SHORTER ON THE TIMES BOOK CLUB.

WE are not sure we ought not to call it the Times Book Club and Book Shop, as we understand books are sold to the public whether they subscribe to the Times or not. We give Mr. Clement K. Shorter's remarks as probably a fair sample of the way a book reader looks at the matter. We regret that the editor of the Sphere and Tatler views the net book system with so much disfavour—every well-wisher of the booksellers ought to support it. With reference to the large orders which the Times has given for certain books, surely this does not prove that the Times has in a few weeks created an educated public, men and women with an immense thirst for literature, for new books which the existing libraries and booksellers refused to supply. The larger the order given by the Times the smaller will the orders for the same work be from the booksellers and libraries. We hope that Mr. Shorter is quite mistaken as regards the Times selling NET books under the published price. Here is what Mr. Shorter says in the Sphere, and it is always well to see a question from all sides:

'In the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR a very fierce controversy is raging on the question of the Times book scheme. Many of the booksellers are up in arms, and a meeting of the Booksellers' Association would by this time have been held in the Stationers' Hall were that building not under repair. Such a meeting will take place almost immediately. The question now at issue between the booksellers and the Times is not that the Times has become a great distributor of books, but that the scheme makes some kind of attack on the system of net books.

'I have already expressed my enthusiastic appreciation of the Times scheme. It is obviously good for authors. This may be demonstrated from the fact that 750 copies of Mr. E. V. Lucas's "Life of Lamb"—a guinea book—were sold to the Times. The same organisation actually took 1,000 copies of Mr. Anthony Hope's new novel, "A Servant of the Public." Although the publishers no doubt made concessions on such large orders, the author and publisher alike may be congratulated. The bookseller is in a different case, but even here I am strongly of opinion that the general impetus to book-buying and book-reading that will be given by the Times scheme will largely enhance the trade of existing booksellers all over the country.

'I admit that there is some element of grievance in the attempt to break down the net system. My readers probably know that there are two ways in which books are sold by the publishers to the booksellers; one of these is by what is called the discount system, by which when you get a novel nominally published at 6*s.* for 4*s.* 6*d.* you know that the bookseller has received discounts which will enable him to make a fair profit. There are other books issued by some of our best firms which are sold to the public only at the price marked, and these have been a greater joy to booksellers than the discount books because the profit upon them is steady and regular.

'Now the Times insists that after a book has had a certain measure of use they shall sell it, even if it be a "net" volume, at a discount of 20 per cent. Frankly, I am greatly in sympathy with this also, because personally I hate the net system. It is by no means gratifying when entering a book shop to purchase a book for which a given price is stated to find that one is not to receive the luxury of a discount. This is only a sentiment which has grown up of late years, but it is one which has considerable fascination, even for great minds. Mr. Gladstone, for example, never marked even a secondhand catalogue without sending it back with the request that he should have 10 per cent. off the catalogue price of the books which he proposed to purchase.

'In any case the Times scheme has come to stay, although there are those who regret that the publishers did not stick together shoulder to shoulder and refuse to give the Times special terms. I for my part am quite sure that the public have been the gainers from the fact that, in spite of the existence of the Publishers' Association, each firm has gone its separate way. There is plenty of evidence that the Times scheme has 'caught on.' On all hands I find people who have sent in a subscription delighted at the prospect that while they receive the congenial reading provided by our leading journal, their wives and daughters are to have access to an abundance of healthy literature.'—'C. K. S.,' in the Sphere.

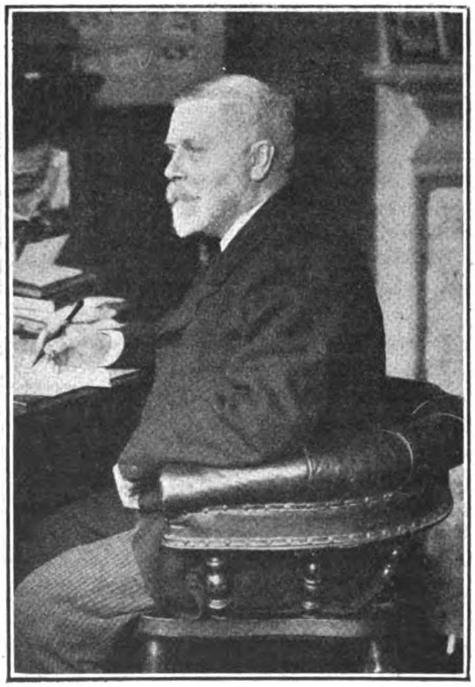
SIR WEMYSS REID.*

Sir Wemyss Reid's name has been familiar equally in the political, literary, and publishing world for many years; in the latter capacity as manager of the great publishing house of Messrs. Cassell & Co.—a 'position,' as his brother says truly, 'of wide influence and hard work'—he is perhaps best known to our readers. But Wemyss Reid was essentially a born journalist, and notwithstanding the undoubted ability with which he controlled the great concern, it was not the kind of work he liked best indeed, his brother tells us that 'he detested the City and the irksomeness of keeping office hours; but he stuck manfully to his post, and his presence there lent a lustre even to the traditions of a great publishing house.' It was as a journalist that he had won his spurs, and the change of occupation must naturally have been trying to him. 'I betray no confidences,' says Mr. Stuart Reid, 'when I say that at first he found his new duties somewhat uncongenial . . . and he felt that he had perhaps been ill advised in quitting the editorial saddle.' He, however, soon overcame this reluctant feeling, and besides he found relief from the prosaic details of a business career in the acceptance of two literary commissions—one was the preparation of an authoritative biography of Mr. Forster, and the other was the more literary than political biography of the first Lord Houghton—with both of whom he had a close personal intimacy and knowledge.



THE LATE SIR WEMYSS REID.

Mr. Stuart Reid's share in the production of this work has been mainly to write a brief Introduction occupying twenty-seven pages, and a very attractive and pleasant Introduction it is. It exhibits in every line the affectionate tenderness of a brother towards one whom, as his elder, he had been accustomed to look up to and admire from his earliest boyhood, and the way he has written it at once commands our sympathy and attracts our desire to peruse the autobiography which follows. The present writer had but a slight personal acquaintance with Sir Wemyss Reid, but slight as it was it has enabled him to confirm the very high yet modest appreciation by his brother which the prefatory Introduction discloses.

Beyond this Introduction Sir Wemyss is allowed to tell his own story in his own way; and really a very charming story it is, and one which will be read with avidity by all classes of readers, quite apart from party politics, although the book has much to say on that subject and on the great leaders of the Liberal party for the last half-century.

The book abounds with pleasant and amusing anecdotes, and there are many plums we would gladly appropriate, but we must reserve them for another occasion.

NATIONAL BOOK TRADE PROVIDENT SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Committee of Management was held in Manchester, on Friday, October 20, Mr. Young J. Pentland in the chair. The Chairman referred to the loss which the society had sustained through the death of Mr. Norman D. Warne, and moved 'that the Committee express to the family not only their deep regret at the loss which they had sustained, but their sincere sympathy with them in their bereavement.'

Twenty-two applications for membership were submitted. The Secretary intimated that he had received a donation of five guineas from the Scottish Branch of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland.

PARS FROM THE PERIODICAL.

It appears evident that the later parts of the 'Oxford Dictionary' have not circulated so widely in China as they ought, for a Chinaman in Singapore, in opening a school for his countrymen, announces that he is prepared, among other things, to teach English 'up to the letter G.'

The Nation, of New York, is taken to task by two correspondents in one issue for using the words 'dove' for 'dived,' and 'loan' as a verb. In each case the editor relies on the 'Oxford Dictionary,' which gives dove among the various forms of the preterite, with the label 'U-S. and Engl. dial.', and describes loan as a verb 'now chiefly U-S.'

With the publication of the 'English Dialect Grammar' Professor Joseph Wright's great dictionary is completed. The first portion of the 'English Dialect Dictionary' was issued in July 1896. The index to the 'Grammar' alone contains 2,431 words, 15,924 dialect forms, and upwards of 90,000 references to counties or parts of counties.

Mention the 'P. C.'—Our Readers who order books, &c. they see mentioned or advertised in the Publishers' Circular will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE LILLIE CRAIK.

We learn with great regret that Mr. George Lillie Craik, who had been for forty years an active partner in the publishing firm of Macmillan & Co., died at Folkestone on October 25 in his sixty-eighth year. Though of a somewhat retiring disposition, Mr. Craik had many warm friends among the eminent authors with whom he was brought into relations, including the late Lord Tennyson, Mr. John Morley, Mrs. Oliphant, Mr. Thomas Hughes, Mrs. Molesworth, and others. His kindly and sympathetic disposition had won the affectionate regard of all who were associated with him in his daily work, and he will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends. He was a lover of the best literature, and among poets specially devoted to the study of Wordsworth and Tennyson. His interest in art led him to act for a time as a Director of the Fine Art Society, and among his most valued possessions were two of the earlier pictures of his old friend Mr. Holman Hunt. Mr. Craik was twice married, first to Miss Mulock, the author of 'John Halifax, Gentleman,' and some years after her death to Miss Anna Holme.

THE 'STANDARD' BOOK CLUB.

As the majority of booksellers are also newsagents, we have pleasure in publishing the following letter from the manager of the Standard with reference to the Standard Book Club. A great feature of this club is that it will not sell books at all—it leaves that to the booksellers:—

THE 'STANDARD.'

Shoe Lane, E.C., October 20, 1905.

Dear Sir,—You have no doubt by now seen in the Standard the announcement of the fact that we are starting a Book Club.

I am writing to inform you that the system on which the Standard Book Club will be worked will not in any way act against the interests of the newsagent, but will in fact prove to be of great advantage to him.

Full particulars of the system by which subscribers to the Standard Book Club will be supplied with the paper, through the newsagent, will be posted to you in the course of a day or two, and we shall then place before you particulars of a method by which you can at the same time help us and profit yourself.—Yours faithfully,

The Manager.

We shall be glad to hear what our readers who are chiefly interested think of the proposals of the Standard.

Since the above was in type we have received the following letter from the Standard Book Club manager:

THE 'STANDARD.'

London, E.C.: October 25, 1905.

Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in forwarding you in advance our book giving full particulars of the Standard Book Club. It is sent to you in the hope that it may be of some use to you in your publication.

I may draw your attention to the fact that it is no part of the scheme to sell books, either new or in any state of wear, and also that one of the chief characteristics of the Standard Book Club is its extreme simplicity. In this way the business of the bookseller will not be interfered with, nor will the business of the newsagent be affected, as delivery under the proposed conditions will only be made through newsagents.

I shall be glad at any time to give you such further information as you may desire.—Yours truly,

The 'Standard' Book Club,
per the Manager.

FACSIMILE REPRODUCTIONS OF THE POEMS OF SHAKESPEARE AND OF PERICLES.

Mr. Sidney Lee has just completed an arduous piece of work for the Delegates of the Clarendon Press in the shape of a Supplement to their facsimile reproduction of the Shakespeare First Folio.

The Supplement will consist of facsimile reproductions, in quarto form, of the earliest editions of all that portion of Shakespeare's work which found no place in the First Folio —viz. the play of 'Pericles' and the four volumes of poems, 'Venus and Adonis,' 'Lucrece,' the 'Sonnets,' and 'The Passionate Pilgrim.'

All who wish to secure copies of the limited editions of these admirable reprints should, if they have not already done so, write for prospectus to Mr. Henry Frowde, Oxford University Press Warehouse, London.

SKETCHES FROM THE DIARY

OF

A COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER

OF THE MIDDLE OF LAST CENTURY.*

An Empty, Conceited, Juvenile Pretender.

A young Metropolitan, starring it on his first or second journey here to-day, and no mean altitude did he seem to attain in his own estimation. Advanced above his former self, and forgetting that his present associates were not his accustomed counter-skipping companions, he seemed to imagine himself superior to all the world beside — some 'herald Mercury, new-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill.' Alas! he found himself treated with the contempt he merited for his daring presumption.

Time, however, will soften down his present pretensions, and his display and importance will find an humbler yet more respectable level in a calm and sobered propriety of deportment. He will then be happy to make the acquaintance of men plain in appearance, but whose minds and knowledge of business are far beyond his own, and from whom he will be glad to receive lessons of instruction. Hundreds of others have similarly erred in their endeavour to pursue a course of ostentation and pompous self-importance, when commencing a commercial life, who now number among the brightest ornaments of the road; for a continued intercourse with its members rubs off their appearance of hauteur, self-importance, and affected superiority; and they are by degrees made to shake off their false dignity, to rejoice in being able to form friendships, and to settle down to a quiet, easy, plodding, respectable deportment. Thus they become all that we or others would desire them to be. Any man, in truth, who wishes to stand well with and become a member of the commercial body must consult, not only the gratification of his own wishes and desires, but the feelings of those around him must have his regard. He will even find it so imperatively requisite for him to adapt means to their ends that he must forfeit all comfort, and indeed respect, unless others enjoy his consideration as well as himself. A course of procedure so prudent is desirable on many other accounts also; for innumerable are the little essential services, in the shape of information, as to individuals, the shortest and most pleasant routes, exchanging of moneys, &c., which men are capable of rendering each other where a friendly feeling exists; and a respectful, courteous, affable deportment in a young man so places him upon an equality with his seniors as to improve his faculties and afford him an opportunity of sharpening his intellect by acquiring their knowledge without the expense of painful experience, and to force upon the mind of any man who intends the commercial world to be his sphere, and the commercial room his home, the necessity of its adoption. There, indeed, all are upon the same level; and, with now and then a rare exception, the opulent merchant, the wealthy manufacturer, or the thrifty money-making representative, aims at no display. Among such no classification exists; but men of all ranks and all ages, without respect to property or even superiority of attainment, are, as I have just said, upon the same level; and one uniform respectability of conduct, and attention to the established rules and observances of the room, form at once a stepping-stone to the respect due and usually paid by one gentleman to another.

Necessity of Keeping the Commercial Room Select.

White Hart, Aylesbury.—The commercial room—usually a sanctum sanctorum, or place set apart exclusively for the use of the commercial body, where all its inmates are supposed to be equally interested in passing remarks upon men and things—lost its character to-day from an accidental circumstance. A discussion had been commenced with some warmth, and carried on with no slight degree of ability, upon the merits and demerits of the income tax; when the conclusions arrived at were—as had been the case a thousand times before—that labour ought not to be taxed in the same ratio as real property, and that if any one class of men, in preference to another, had a right to exemption, commercial travellers constituted that class. Yet upon them an additional demand is made, by its surveyors or collectors straining the Act of Parliament, and thus representing the meaning of its framers as opposed to their intention, and thereby bringing into contempt those for whom commercial men at large entertain the highest respect, viz.—her Majesty's Government.

THE WINNER OF MR. UNWIN'S PRIZE NOVEL.

MRS. BAILLIE-SAUNDERS, whose portrait, by the courtesy of Mr. Fisher Unwin, we are able to give this week, is the winner of Mr. Unwin's first novel competition.

The main conditions were that anyone was eligible to compete who had never had a novel published, that Mr. Unwin was sole and absolute judge, and that the author of the winning novel should receive a prize of £100.

In response to this invitation a large number of authors submitted novels, amounting in the aggregate to 20,000,000 words, a pile of MS. which it needed Herculean labour to sift, especially as it was desirable to do so with as little delay as possible.

In the writer of the winning novel Mr. Unwin is confident that he has discovered a new novelist of distinct promise. The writer is Mrs. Baillie-Saunders, and Mr. Unwin has just published her book, which is entitled 'Saints in Society.' Mrs. Baillie-Saunders is the wife of the Rev. F. Baillie-Saunders, Chaplain of Marylebone Old Parish Chapel, and before her marriage was for a time occupied with journalism in connection with the Lady. She is the author of a monograph on Dickens, and is particularly interested in social problems as existing in London, some phases of which are touched in her book.

This story deals with the results of sudden success on two characters—those of a man and a woman. The working out of the plot brings the hero (a young printer and Christian Socialist) and his wife from a Walworth back street to wealth, power, title, and social success; both are flattered, courted, and made much of by the great world, and both in turn meet with a perilous 'kindred soul' in that world's ranks. There are many subsidiary characters in the book, but the ambitions, the rapid rise, and the respective triumphs of Mark Hading and his wife make a novel full of human interest and vivid character study.

We understand that Mr. Unwin now offers a prize of £5 for the most original review of 'Saints in Society.'

A BRIEF FOR LITERATURE AS A PROFESSION.

THE veteran New England author, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, after more than half a century's experience as a man of letters, is still inclined to dwell upon the advantages rather than upon the drawbacks of the literary profession. In the course of an address delivered before the Harvard Ethical Society, Cambridge, Mass., and afterwards published in the New York Critic and Literary World (August), he calls attention to the fact that while those who have chosen literature as a profession are 'very apt to complain of it, they are not at all apt to quit it.' In this respect, he remarks, they differ very much from the clerical profession, for instance, 'of which the members, while constantly urging it upon young men, are yet very apt personally to quit it for some pursuit a shade more secular.' Colonel Higginson proceeds to indicate four distinct advantages which he attributes to the literary vocation. The first of these, he says, is that at its best it 'puts a man on higher ground as to pursuits and gives him at least the chance of being remembered longer than any other vocation supplies.' He quotes Rufus Choate's aphorism, 'A book is the only immortality,' but is thereby led to add:

'I do not mean to say that the books or names of all authors are immortal; quite the contrary. I remember too well a time when a playmate of mine, some years older than myself, George Frederick Ware, of Cambridge, confided to me his authorship of an anonymous volume entitled 'The Retrospect, and other Poems,' a secret which I violated so far as to confide it to the young author's college classmate, James Russell Lowell, who bought the only copy of it which was ever sold. I should perhaps have repented of my treachery, but that I knew of the publication, about the same time, of a much larger book, a poem called "Gonsalvo de Cordova," of which not a solitary copy ever found a purchaser; so that the publishers, Messrs. Ticknor & Fields, might at any time be seen retreating from the back door of their shop whenever the unfortunate author entered at the front door.'

A second advantage, he urges, is that the literary profession lasts a man into later life than other pursuits. On this point we read:

'One discovers in growing older what will seem to most of you improbable at your age, that lawyers and physicians, however eminent, are apt to outgrow their prestige at least. I am brought now by accident into quite a circle of young physicians. Nothing can exceed the irreverence with which they speak of all physicians thirty or forty years older than they are; and in the law some of our most eminent men seem to have had their practice slip from under their hands. Turn, for instance, to the life of Richard Henry Dana, which Charles Francis Adams has written, and you will see how reluctantly he tells that somehow or other Dana's practice seemed to vanish through his hands, whereas he had been not many years before the leading lawyer of Boston. That is to be considered. A literary man usually keeps his hold much later in life.'

The third advantage alleged is 'that the literary man's work keeps him in a much higher vein of thought, even where, as often happens, it involves a constant revision of his own work.'

This leads the Colonel to an interesting statement about Browning's readiness to revise. We quote:

'Robert Browning, for instance, performed in later life the extraordinary feat of going through his rather abstruse poem of "Sordello" and placing at the top of each page a single line or motto, which virtually told the story of the somewhat unintelligible page below. This did at least no harm, but in other cases he damaged his poems for ever, by laboriously simplifying them too much in order to meet half-way those who could not quite comprehend him. Both his son and his sister assured me when I saw them in Italy that he could be easily induced to do this by anyone who was puzzled, and always justified it on ground that the thought was the thing important, and all else was secondary.'

The fourth count in Colonel Higginson's brief for the profession of letters may be described as a charm, a fascination, rather than as necessarily an advantage. It is the fact that 'no author knows which book of his will succeed.' On this point he writes:

'Goethe wrote to Schiller, "We make money by our poor books," and if you wish to win an author's heart the surest way is to inquire from his publisher which of his books has come nearest to an absolute failure. You have then only to write to him, praise that book to the skies, and close by quoting a sentence. I could easily tell you which book of mine this would be, but wild horses should not draw that from me. I have more than once in my life, however, gone through precisely that experience.'

Colonel Higginson emphasises the value of literature as 'reaching a world outside of science, and incapable of being duplicated or overwhelmed by it.' He concludes with the following comparison:

'Science can be duplicated or gone over again, or it can be dropped and taken up again at the same point. It can be renewed. The highest forms of literature come we know not whence and go we know not whither; and this accounts for instances in such work where even one verse remains in the memory of mankind while all the rest is lost. We have now the key to the atrophy on one side of Darwin's nature. It was in his case the Nemesis of Science—the price he paid for his magnificent achievements. Poetry is not a part of science, but it is, as Wordsworth once said, "the antithesis of science"; it is a world outside. The name of this world, we may conclude, is literature.'

Letters to the Editor

'AN ATLANTIC TRAGEDY.'

SIR,—Under this title a book is announced as having been written by me to be published by Messrs. Digby, Long & Co. The statement is made by the World, October 24. Will you permit me to say that I have never written a novel by this title, and that I have produced nothing since 'The Yarn of Old Harbour Town,' which is likely to prove the last work of fiction I shall tease the public with.—Yours faithfully,

W. CLARK RUSSELL.

9 Sydney Place, Bath: October 26, 1905.

[All lovers of the best of sea stories will join u in hoping that Mr. Russell will be able still to give us others. His latest is already in a second edition.—ED.]

LONG-WINDED CUSTOMERS.

DEAR SIR,—The letter signed 'One of Them' in last week's issue is really too biassed to be passed without a protest.

The writer asks if there are three high-class firms in London who pay cash. My experience is that the majority of the well-known houses do pay within a week or so if 'cash terms' are printed on invoices. I know from personal experience that several well conducted firms make a practice of paying all bills every week, unless a quarterly account has been arranged. It is nonsense to talk about putting the clerical arrangements of large houses out of gear to attend to their accounts at more frequent intervals than three months, and that a net cash working is impracticable.

Dealers 'well up' in the trade certainly give each other a quarterly account, which in some cases is stretched to six, nine, or twelve months; but we are not all 'well up,' and those that are now should remember the time (not so very long ago) when they were among the 'minor members.'

Other reasons must be looked for to account for the want of promptness on the part of the long-winded minority—one at least is obvious.—Yours faithfully,

W. D. S.

SIR,—Your correspondent, 'One of Them,' in last week's P.C., who is trying to arrange quarterly accounts in the secondhand book trade, is not fair—how about the poor secondhand bookseller? It is a cash buying business outside sale rooms. If every bookseller took three months to pay his accounts it would spell ruin to some of us. A bookseller who pays cash on receipt of goods is worth reporting books to. CASH BUYER.

SIR,—It would have been disastrous if 'One of Them' had settled the struggling 'minor members account of 2*s*. 3*d*. post free' in less than three months. Not only would the large counting-house staff employed by 'One of Them' have been disorganised, but it would also have interfered with the birth-rate, the bank-rate would have fallen, Wall Street would be in a panic, in Calcutta the rupee would have fallen, Singapore would be in a revolution, and the Balkans would be seething in sedition. In spite of this I think it is trumpery to buy a 2*s*. book from a 'small minor member of the trade,' and expect him to enter same for three months and then send a statement. I also doubt if 'One of Them' has the right to speak for the 'best houses in the trade.'—Yours faithfully,

A SMALL MINOR MEMBER OF THE TRADE.

BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

DEAR SIR,—At the monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, held on Thursday, October 19, Charles J. Longman, Esq., in the chair, the sum of £96 10*s*. was voted to 55 members and widows of members.

One member was elected and one fresh application for membership was proposed.

At the meeting of the directors held on the same evening a letter was read from Mr. Hugh Spottiswoode stating that he would make a contribution to the funds of the institution of 25 guineas as a slight token of his thanks to the booksellers for their assistance in forwarding the sale of Printers' Pie. The gift was gratefully accepted by the directors.

We are given to understand that a dramatic performance will be given on Thursday, December 14, at St. George's Hall, for the benefit of the funds of the institution. Particulars will be announced shortly. Yours faithfully,

G. LARNER, Secretary.

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—On page 463 (Oct. 21) you are kind enough to mention the 'Kingsway Series' of Novels published by me. But I regret to note that both my names are spelled wrong. Yours &c.,

T. SEALEY CLARK.

Notices of Books

From Mr. Edward Arnold.—'Historical Tales from Shakespeare,' by A. T. Quiller-Couch. This new impression of Mr. Quiller-Couch's adroit paraphrase is improved by the addition of sixteen selected illustrations from the Boydell Gallery, including reproductions from prints after J. Northcote, R.A. R. Westall, R.A., J. Opie, R.A., and others. Of the general merits of the book we have previously expressed our appreciation, and all we need now say is that it is thoroughly calculated to win the approval of young readers, especially those partial to martial deeds, and likely to afford them great pleasure. Parents, guardians, and kindly hearted people generally, to say nothing of schoolmasters, should make a note of this volume with an eye to Christmas presentation.

From the same.—'The Professor's Legacy,' by Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick. Mrs. Sidgwick relies for the interest of her novel on the old device of cross purposes and amatory misunderstandings, and after a somewhat sentimental fashion she succeeds in holding the attention of her readers. A wealthy young Englishman interested in zoology goes to Fichtenstadt, where he becomes the pupil and valued assistant of a celebrated German Professor. The Professor has an only daughter, a quaint child of ten, towards whom the English student is early attracted, and in after years, on the death of her father, he is left her guardian and eventually marries her. But the marriage is only brought about on her part through disappointment in another direction, and after the ceremony she realises for the first time how repugnant the union is to her. The story then follows the usual course familiar to fiction readers; the husband too proud to show his affection, the wife anxious after a time to make him understand that the love she once refused him is now completely his. Of course it all comes right in the long run, but before this desirable end is attained there are any number of pretty traverses, advances and retreats, mainly brought about by other male admirers, whose pernicious influence is considerably augmented by one Aunt Betty, a vain accomplished mischief-maker.

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—'Poems by Alfred Lord Tennyson,' with illustrations by Eleanor F. Brickdale. Some sixty of the late Poet Laureate's shorter poems, with 'The Princess' and 'Maud,' are included in this elegantly furnished volume of 'The Endymion Series.' The illustrations of Miss Fortescue Brickdale are exceptionally clever, and this, added to attractive qualities of binding, print, and paper, should ensure for the work a wide sale. For gift purposes it is especially well adapted.

From Messrs. Adam & Charles Black.—'The Schoolboy Abroad,' by Ascott R. Hope. The author, relinquishing for the nonce his customary rôle of fiction-weaver, in his present book applies himself to a veracious description of the lot of the schoolboy in other countries. After a few preliminary pages suitably devoted to a consideration of his surroundings at home, Mr. Hope shows by a series of bright unaffected sketches what his position is in France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Russia, Switzerland, Spain, and Denmark, concluding his work with a chapter headed 'The Schoolboy on Pegasus,' in which some rather amusing book inscriptions are given.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—'The Nelson Navy Book,' by J. Cuthbert Hadden. The history of the British Navy, its early beginnings, gradual growth, and eventual accession to supreme sea power—the stubborn conflicts she has waged, first with the Spaniards, then with the Dutch, and lastly with the French, all of whom she has vanquished—might well fire a healthy courageous boy's imagination, to say nothing of the numerous coloured and plain illustrations with which the present account is adorned. Mr. Hadden, on the whole, has performed his work of compilation well, though one might have wished that he had put a little more energy and enthusiasm into his recital of these gallant deeds. A feature which young people are likely to appreciate is the handsome picture binding, which is so thoroughly suggestive of the stimulating reading within.

From Messrs. Brown, Langham & Co.—'The Benefactor, a Tale of a Small Circle,' by Ford Madox Hueffer. The main character of this story is one of those sweet dispositioned souls who find pleasure in helping everybody rather than themselves. Although a man of no mean literary talent himself, he is perpetually neglecting his own interests to advance the prospects, by money and advice, of some ungrateful scribe in whom he sees promise of future greatness. Years previous to the story he has actually parted from his wife owing to his Quixotic principles, she being tired of a man whose sole interest in life seemed to be wrapped up in other people rather than in his own reputation and immediate surroundings; and it is characteristic of the man that he has settled on her the best part of his income, reserving only a very small portion (which he is rapidly dissipating) for himself. Into his life comes another woman, who recognises his noble, unselfish character and secretly worships him. But it is the misfortune of such a man in his eagerness to help others that he should bring trouble in his wake. At the moment when he is reduced to poverty through his foolish, misplaced efforts he for the first time recognises that this girl cares for him. On his part he sufficiently loves her to plan a final act of self-denial. All the pain and torture shall be his; he will quietly leave the neighbourhood without letting her know. But she discovers this, and reproaches him. Then he breaks down and confesses his love—gives her to understand that he will ask her to go away with him and extract the confession that she is prepared to accompany him abroad. When the final scene comes, and she expects him to take what she has offered, he retracts, and, with some muttered words about 'a calamity,' leaves her to her miserable destiny. A blunderer he has always been, and a blunderer—to use no more contemptuous expression—he remains to the end of the chapter.

From Messrs. Burns & Oates, Ltd.—'Who Killed Sir Edmond Berry Godfrey,' by Alfred Marks, with an Introduction by Father J. H. Pollen, S.J. Readers interested in the more momentous and much debated events of history will find this an extremely attractive volume. To such it will not be necessary to recall the fact that Sir Edmond Godfrey was one of the principal figures in what has been styled the Popish Plot towards the close of the seventeenth century, and that his death took place under very mysterious circumstances. For long it was supposed that he had been assassinated—he was found at the foot of Primrose Hill with his own sword run through his body—and his death let loose a storm of furious passion against the Catholics in this country, aided and abetted by the notorious Titus Oates and his infamous gang. Of late years, however, there has been a growing belief in favour of suicide, and it is towards this verdict that the reasoning of Mr. Marks inclines. In this he is supported by the views of a well-known modern physician, Dr. Freyberger, who has carefully gone over all the surgical evidence of the so-called murder. The book is a remarkably engrossing study of an event which has frequently aroused antagonism between rival schools of historical research.

From the Cambridge University Press.—'The Origin and Influence of the Thoroughbred Horse,' by William Ridgeway, M.A., F.B.A. The author of this elaborate work has evidently given much thought and careful research in its preparation, in order to present to those who are interested in equine study, not only a specific account of the Asiatic, Libyan, and other breeds of domestic horses 'mostly known in historical times,' but likewise, with the help of many friendly professional authorities, 'to indicate the influence exercised on the history of the chief nations of the ancient, mediæval, and modern world by the possession of horses. Further, the author sets forth with much force of argument the fallacy on the part of breeders for the ill-judged and unscientific introduction into their valuable stock of 'alien blood.' The volume closes with an interesting supplementary chapter on 'The Development of Equitation.' The general reader who has a love for horses, 'the noblest of all the creatures that man has subdued to his will,' will even find in the book, as we have done, much that is instructive and worthy of consideration at a time when the abolition of the horse for the service of man forms a topic of considerable importance. The publishers of this new volume of the 'Cambridge Biological Series' deserve commendation not only for the appropriate style in which it is issued, but also for the liberal number of choice illustrations that appear throughout the text.

From the same.—'An Introduction to Greek Epigraphy: Part 2, The Inscriptions of Attica,' edited by E. S. Roberts, M.A., and E. A. Gardner, M.A. As set forth in the Preface, the present volume follows in proper sequence that issued by the publishers in 1887. Both volumes were designed as a handbook to a complete 'Corpus Inscriptionum Graecarum,' that may be the means of 'encouraging the genuine student of Greek Epigraphy to make use of the larger works and the literature of which even those larger works do but contain a summary.' Space prevents us from enlarging upon the value of such an intrinsic theme, and therefore we content ourselves by the mention only of some of the matters treated in the inscriptions, which mostly relate to the 'Decrees of the Senate and People,' 'Finance' in its varied branches, 'Ritual,' 'Dedications,' Statue-Bases and Sepulchral Inscriptions. The editors express the further hope that their work may possibly prove an incentive for the student of this branch of Attic archæology to 'once more move among the scenes in which these documents once played a living part.' Due recognition must also be made of the valuable help rendered by the publishers in the production of this erudite work, which is in every way creditable to all engaged therein.

From Messrs. Chapman & Hall, Ltd.—'The Puzzle of Dickens's Last Plot,' by Andrew Lang. Mr. Lang comes to a subject of this description with intuitive liking: he is interested in solving doubtful points. He has studied during his time the authenticity of the 'Casket Letters,' the mystery surrounding the death of Sir Edmond Godfrey, and other hotly debated events of history. But we venture to say that in 'The Mystery of Edwin Drood' he has received what we believe is known in pugilistic circles as a 'facer.' We ourselves know Edwin Drood fairly well. We have studied the events as exposed in his career, and have wondered what they pointed to in his after-life. Dickens, whatever may be thought of his plots in their entirety, was a wonderful hand at constructing a situation, and he never placed a brick in position without considering its effect on the entire edifice. Durdles's power of ascertaining the presence of 'old uns' in a tomb, Jasper's long black scarf of which such particular mention is made, the habit of Mr. Datcherly's carrying his hat in his hand (thereby showing that he wore a wig), to say nothing of other features, all pointed to their ultimate connection with the final dénouement and give zest to the reader's quest after a solution of the mystery. To the Dickens student Mr. Lang's theories are bound to be interesting, if not at all times convincing; but we fear to the ordinary reader the book will prove as great a puzzle as the disappearance of Edwin Drood himself.

From the same. — 'The Inseparables: an Oxford Novel of To-Day,' by James Baker. We should scarcely rate this novel as one of Mr. Baker's most noteworthy achievements—equal, for instance, to 'Mark Tillotson' or 'The Cardinal's Page' — but that it possesses exceptional interest there can be no question. The story opens at Oxford amid the hubbub of boat training and racing. Here our sympathies are early enlisted with Robert Lyndeley, a much 'ragged' number six, who has managed to incur the enmity of his coach and fellow collegian—an important influence on the after course of the narrative. Lyndeley is a clean living, manly young fellow—an excellent example of the best type of the University undergraduate—but unfortunately he falls under the influences of a local Circe, who bitterly resents his efforts to rescue a friend from her clutches and even more especially hates him because he has himself failed to respond to her amatory advances. Years afterwards, when married to his friend, she finds an opportunity to gratify her spite. By this time, however, numerous changes have taken place. Lyndeley has been to Egypt on scientific excavation bent, and his thoughts are divided between two loves, the one fickle but tantalising, the other beautiful and rather unapproachable. Round these personages, aided in unimportant rôles by other actors, the author has interwoven a highly absorbing romance, in which his old-time good qualities of vigorous style, clear characterisation, and rapid action are happily apparent as ever.

From Messrs. Dean & Son, Ltd.—'Hercat's Ventriloquist and Ventriloquial Dialogues,' by the author of 'Card Tricks and Conjuring Up-tô-Date' &c. It seems almost a pity that masters of the ventriloquial craft should be giving their secrets away so readily—it is almost like killing the goose that lays the golden eggs—but there is always the consolation that though it is one thing to show a reader how it can be done, it is quite a different matter to endow him with the necessary faculty to bring about its accomplishment. The amateur, however, may learn much from Mr. Hercat's little work, and even professionals may not be above taking a hint or two.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'The Story of Hamlet,' 'The Story of Macbeth,' 'The Story of Julius Cæsar,' retold from Shakespeare's plays by Alice Spencer Hoffman. These little volumes worthily continue the series of 'Stories from Shakespeare's Plays for Children.' Each volume is simply and brightly written, clearly printed, and very tastefully bound, the illustrations being an especially commendable feature. Those for 'Hamlet' are by Patten Wilson; for the others T. H. Robinson is responsible.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—'Raphael,' by Julia Cartwright (Mrs. Ady). Little requires to be said about this volume of 'The Popular Library of Art,' except that in the space afforded her Mrs. Ady has given an impressive description of the artist's life and work. The examples of Raphael's genius illustrating the book have not always come unscathed through the process of reproduction.

From the same. — 'Magic Casements,' by Arthur Shearly Cripps. There is much in these sketches to admire. They rise superior to the affectations of the age, and yet have a graceful distinction of style that will appeal to those of a refined poetic temperament. But we wonder whether they were written in Mashonaland, from which the Preface is dated, or previous to departure from this country. They lack a sturdiness which is supposed to be characteristic of colonial life.

From Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., Ltd.—'Personal Studies,' by Henry Scott Holland, Canon of St. Paul's Cathedral. Canon Holland possesses that indefinable touch which is so essential to the success of all writers of personal essays; he has the first great quality of being able to interest. You read the opening paragraph of one of his papers, and you feel compelled to go to the end. Of how many modern writers can one say this? Canon Holland is not a great writer—he is not even a brilliant one; but he invariably chooses subjects upon which he has thoughts of his own, and he invests these thoughts with a delicate charm that is very refreshing. Whether he is writing about Jenny Lind or Lord Salisbury, Mr. Gladstone or Father Dolling, he is always attractive and informing. Indeed, he has something of Mr. Birrell's touch, a little of his fascination. The papers were well worth reprinting, and we are glad to have them in volume form.

From the Granville Press, Ltd.—'Pannell's Reference Book for Home and Office.' This bulky volume contains within its covers an English Dictionary, Medical, Legal, Social, Educational, and Commercial Guides, and many other smaller but not less important items. With this book at hand one is ready to meet any difficulty that is likely to arise in the ordinary course of one's reading, conversation, or work. Its comprehensiveness and practical value render it a marvellous work, and the low price at which it is published place it within the reach of everybody. It needs only to be seen to be appreciated.

From Messrs. Harrison & Sons. — 'Our Empire: Past and Present,' by the Earl of Meath, M. H. Cornwall Legh, LL.A., and Edith Jackson: Volume II., Great Britain in Asia. In its aim of bringing together, between the covers of a volume of reasonable size, the facts which will convey to the reader an adequate impression of the extent and wide-spreading responsibilities of the British Empire, this may be pronounced a most successful volume. The authors claim no originality for the material set forth, but simply proffer it as a basis for further and adequate inquiry into the subject. It is needless to say that in such a work the beginnings of Company rule, the influence of France, the rule of Clive, Warren Hastings, Lord Cornwallis, and Lord Dalhousie, trade interests, the details of the great Mutiny, and the gradual growth of the Imperial Government in India occupy no unimportant part; and we learn something of Wellesley in this connection, the first Burmese War, and the character of the Sikhs. The volume runs to nearly eight hundred pages, and includes four maps and several illustrations. Among the latter is an admirable portrait of the King.

From Mr. William Heinemann.—'Brother East and Brother West: a Searchlight on the Unemployed,' by Leighton Leigh. The position maintained in this volume is that the problem of the unemployed is really no problem at all—it does not exist. There is plenty of work for people to do if they will only tackle it. The country farmer, the builder, the house decorator, the housewife, are all crying out for help of the right sort and are unable to obtain it. Labour, not necessarily of a skilled order, was never in such request as now. Working men, however, prefer to vapour about their rights, to take part in 'unemployed' processions, and generally to do anything but what lies immediately at their doorsteps. No doubt there is a considerable substratum of truth in this view of the question, but it does not indicate everything, nor does the rather glib explanation of the author altogether solve matters. Granted that there are a large number of thriftless, lazy fellows about who prefer to do anything but a steady day's work—granted that the honest skilled workman is always sure of a job—there are yet a tremendous body of labouring men—perhaps not particularly efficient, but strong and sinewy—who are anxious to obtain employment and are unsuccessful. The struggle at the London Docks would alone show this. Large towns, no doubt, foster slackness in its most pernicious shape, and the good effects of increased education have yet to be felt; but, after all, matters are not quite so bad as Mr. Leigh would have us believe. We scarcely think he has gone to the root of his subject, but that the book will excite interest there can be no question.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—'The Red Reaper,' by John A. Steuart. We are glad to find that Mr. Steuart has got back to a subject that thoroughly suits him. Few novelists have such a power in delineating the stress of conflict, the opposition of rival fashions, the struggle almost amounting to savagery of man with man; and every character in this deeply interesting description of the perilous times through which Scotland passed during the first half of the seventeenth century, when Montrose raised the standard of the Stuarts, stands out with a clear-cut individuality, a forcefulness of purpose, and a mastery of detail which can scarcely fail to make a lasting impression on the reader. Mr. Steuart has got thoroughly, so to speak, into the yoke of the period, and his narrative sparkles with touches to which the hearts of all true Scotsmen will surely respond. He has been able also to impart to his narrative a distinct idea of the buoyant gallantry, the debonnair bearing, and variable temperament so characteristic of the Highlander, and the contrasts he draws make distinctly for the interest of the story. Perhaps the want of any feminine influence, or only the merest trace of it, detracts from the popular value of his work, but we cannot but think this is more than counterbalanced by the vigour and intensity of his writing. Such a work, when the reader has once fallen under the spell of the author's style, will allow him no pause until the final chapter be reached. And what a painful ending is here! Betrayed for the 'thirty pieces of silver,' Montrose is dragged to the scaffold, and the life of a gallant, noble-minded gentleman is ignobly brought to a close.

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.—'Myrrh and Amaranth: Two Lectures,' by Josiah Oldfield, M.R.C.S., D.C.L. This is rather a singular little book, and it is not altogether easy, beneath the cloud of lofty expression, to see what the author is aiming at. Apparently, however, Dr. Oldfield sees much virtue in the influences of 'Brother Pain' and 'Sister Drudgery,' the former because he acts as a corrective to over-indulgence or criminal excess, the latter by reason of the sanctifying sway she exercises over the more menial pursuits of life. The author concludes his work with these words: 'Hail, Sister Drudgery, Angel of the Roses, Mother of the Lilies, let me be faithful to thy shrine and to thy kinship.' It is in a similar strain that most of the book is indited.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—'Sir Thomas Browne,' by Edmund Gosse ('English Men of Letters' series). Mr. Gosse acknowledges his indebtedness in the Preface of this volume to the writings of Simon Wilkin, the Norwich antiquary, and of William Alexander Greenhill, and from these and other sources, combined with his own gifted literary insight, he has evolved an extremely interesting monograph, which presents as vivid and, without doubt, faithful a picture of Sir Thomas Browne's life and personality as could be. The book perhaps lacks warmth—that thorough sympathy with the subject which imparts an additional fascination to keen criticism—but in the general capability of its treatment it will unquestionably bear comparison with any of the brilliant volumes that have preceded it.

From Mr. T. Maskew Miller, Cape Town, Pretoria, and Bulawayo.—'Science in South Africa: a Handbook and Review,' edited by the Rev. W. Flint, D.D., and J. D. F. Gilchrist, M.A., D.Sc. This volume was prepared in view of the visit of the British Association to South Africa, which took place this year, and its sponsors are the South African Governments and the South African Association for the Advancement of Science. Through its pages, contributed to by men of acknowledged scientific ability, the reader will be enabled to learn what has been accomplished in the way of scientific research in South Africa, the opportunities that exist for further investigation—which are, as might naturally be expected in a country yet in its infancy, very great—and the present condition of affairs. The valuable material thus gathered together is arranged in sections, respectively appertaining to the Physical, Anthropological, Zoological, Botanical, Geological, Mineralogical, Economic, and Educational aspects of the main subject, while among the numerous contributors of papers are Sir David Gill, Mr. W. L. Sclater, Professors J. C. Beattie, R. Broom, Daniel Hahn, and Thomas Walker, Mr. W. Hammond Tooke, Mr. A. W. Rogers, Mr. Herbert Kynaston, Mr. William Anderson, Mr. J. D. F. Gilchrist, the Rev. W. Flint and other established scientists, who for the most occupy Government positions at the Cape. In some of these departments no doubt a little disappointment may be felt. The field of Anthropology, for instance, which should apparently be productive of such interesting results, seems to have been comparatively little explored, Mineralogy occupies but some twenty-two pages, and the greater proportion of the volume is devoted to economic, educational, and historical subjects. However, there is a good time yet to come for scientific research in South Africa; and, as Sir David Gill points out, in an imperfectly developed country, when the struggle of life is keen, men do not stop to investigate scientific principles for themselves, but are content to borrow the results of other workers for their own immediate ends. That South Africa offers a rich field for scientific inquiry this volume forcibly demonstrates, and though the obtained results recorded in its pages are exceedingly interesting, and to some extent valuable, it is for the promise it affords of even better results that the book is chiefly to be prized. We should not omit to mention that there are a number of illustrations, including coloured plates, maps, and diagrams. The general 'get-up' of the volume is highly creditable to the publisher.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—'Brothers of Peril,' by Theodore Roberts. In this vivid, nature-surrounded story Mr. Roberts takes his readers back to the early days of Newfoundland, at a time when that country was being explored for financial purposes by the greedy English merchant. He depicts the Beothic savages, then principal inhabitants of the isle, and the dissensions taking place among them. Onenwa, last remaining representative of his race, makes friends with the proprietor of a schooner visiting the territory for fishing purposes; and it is in the dangers encountered by himself and his associates that the interest chiefly lies. This is of a particularly hazardous description, and largely results from the manœuvres of one Captain Pierre d'Antons, a shifty Frenchman. Naturally, woman has her share in the trouble. But after a remarkably exciting time, which no doubt young people of enthusiastic, romantic temperament will exult in, it is satisfactory for well-seasoned minds to find that all ends happily, and that the various characters of the story are left in a much more comfortable position than could have been foreseen. The book will interest both young and old alike, if of an ardent disposition, and the colour of the illustrations is appropriate even when not very artistically applied.

From Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.—'Miscellaneous Works of Oliver Goldsmith.' This is the new volume of the Thin Paper Classics, and can hardly fail to be one of the most popular, as it contains, in addition to 'The Vicar of Wakefield' (which alone would ensure its popularity), 'The Good-Natured Man,' 'She Stoops to Conquer,' Lives of Dr. Parnell, Lord Bolingbroke, Beau Nash, Letters, and Poems.

From Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co.—'Farthing Dips, or What Can I Do,' by J. S. Woodhouse; 'Uncle Jo's Old Coat,' by Eleanora H. Stooke; 'The Cost of a Promise,' by Marian I. Hurrell; 'A Venturesome Voyage,' by F. Scarlett Potter; 'Lady Betty's Twins,' by E. M. Waterworth; 'Marjorie's Enemy, a Story of the Civil War of 1644,' by Marian Adams. These six books are entertaining and instructive storiettes suitable to young readers and are issued in the choice form for which this publishing firm are renowned. The same house also send us 'Dollie Dimple! Pictures and Stories for Wee Folk'; 'Feed My Lambs, a Scripture Picture Book'; and Animal Antics, Funny Pictures, Merry Rhymes,' by Louis Wain and other artists, all of which will mightily please the children into whose hands the books may come.

From Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd.—'On Life's Threshold, Tales to Young People on Character and Conduct,' by Charles Wagner, translated by Edna St. John. In this book, which forms the third in a series of English translations from the author's writings, are to be found helpful and practical essays on Life, its origins and claims. They are the result of much thought on the part of a wise and generous nature, fully alive to the needs of the young in this century, and the topics are such as can be easily assimilated by those on the threshold of life. We are pleased to recognise the encouraging sign that the books of this writer have so large a sale, not only in his own country but also in England, and we welcome this fresh addition to the series.

From the Religious Tract Society.—'Six Heroic Men,' by D. Alcock, W. G. Blaikie, E. Paxton Hood, and S. S. Pugh, with a Preface by the Rev. A. R. Buckland, M.A. The heroes whose deeds are recorded in this volume are John Frith, the Biblical scholar and friend of William Tindale, who also, with other Marian martyrs, perished in the fires of Smithfield; Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, the anti-Slavery champion; David Livingstone, the African missionary and intrepid explorer; Richard Baxter, the gifted Royalist preacher and writer; John Lawrence, the brave Indian administrator and commissioner; and, lastly, Claude Brousson, the able French Apostle of the Desert. The lessons to be derived from the study of these life-stories are such as will readily appeal to junior readers, and the interesting book should find a place in libraries for the young.

From Messrs. Seeley & Co.—'The Golden Reciter: Prose and Verse for Reading and Recitation,' with an Introduction by Cairns James. The aim of the compiler of this book has been 'to break new ground and to offer passages for recitation and reading drawn from fresh sources, and new selections from the works of well-known writers.' In carrying out his laudable intention Mr. James has been enabled through the courtesy of many publishers and writers of copyright books to make a far less hackneyed selection than he could otherwise have done. The book is well gotten up, and, being issued at a popular price, will by this means reach a larger number of readers fortunate enough to gain an introduction to, and a knowledge of, some of the best literary excerpts in our language.

From Messrs. Skeffington & Son.—'The Plain Man's Life,' by Rev. C. Moor, B.D. The six addresses which make up this volume were delivered by the author during Lent of the present year, and are chiefly concerned with the ordinary practical life of men and women. The book contains most helpful and opportune counsel on such themes as Home, Work, Friendship, Philanthropy, Adversity, and Worship, founded on the garnered experience of a writer who is alive to the real needs of those who constitute the varied ranks of English society in the present century.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'Stars of Destiny,' by L. Parry Truscott. The author of this essentially modern love story has affixed as headings to the various chapters certain impressive prose passages from the writings of Ralph Waldo Emerson. The chief personage of the novel is Meredith Arless, son of a gifted artist, who dies just when recognition of his talent and future fame seemed assured. The son henceforth becomes the idol of an indulgent mother with a strong belief in his evident pride of authorship. In pursuit of his chosen profession, Meredith has the fortune to meet with Constance Orpen, a gifted writer, with the consequent result that a close friendship springs up between them. Constance, however, is the wife of an insane husband, and her life is shadowed by the knowledge that the cherished hope of her union with Meredith will be for some time doubtful. There now comes athwart their intercourse another trial in the shape of Milly Jeune, the daughter of the Rev. Horace Jeune, perpetual curate of Blythdowne. Her 'pretty face, frivolous talk, and girlish wiles' that have already captivated Philibert Brown, a banker's clerk, are the means whereby Meredith becomes for a time the unwilling victim of a mad infatuation. The conflicting interests which thus beset these four and the unravelling of the tangled threads of this domestic drama for its proper adjustment are evidence of the author's skill, also revealing at the same time his gift for complex characterisation. This novel will surely maintain his already growing reputation.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co.—'The Fatal Song,' by Fergus Hume. Mr. Hume puzzles us. He can occasionally when put to it write a story of great sensational interest, unfolding the details of a mysterious crime if not exactly with the skill of a Wilkie Collins, at least clearly and rationally, while at other times he descends to the absurdest depths of melodrama. His present story is thoroughly of the penny-plain-and-twopenny-coloured description, and the way the characters comport themselves, the language they use, and the attitudes they strike, are such as might be seen on the stage of any travelling booth. A lady occupying a good position in London society goes down to 'Beck-on-Sea,' near Brighton, and is there found assisting at a performance of pierrots on the beach; a young girl singing a song after the fashion of the said lady is assassinated; the nephew of the lady, who has been deputed by the editor of a popular newspaper to trace her disappearance, seeks to elucidate the mystery of the murder; a twin sister turns up; the entire book is full of wildly improbable situations, which the author only emphasizes by his crude description. As we know from 'Lady Jim of Curzon Street,' he can do very much better than this, and it is a pity that he should condescend to such hurried irrational work.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Ltd.—'The Imposter,' by Harold Bindloss. Mr. Bindloss works on old lines, but his story has a vitality and rugged force that redeem it from anything like insipidity. Two men out in the more uncultivated parts of Canada —one good, the other bad—bear a rather striking resemblance to each other. Circumstances, which we have not space to detail, lead to the good man posing as his dissolute, unprincipled double. In this disguise he takes up his residence with relatives at ihe settlement of Silverdale, and speedily astonishes everyone by the energy and capability he displays. They can only regard him as that rare being, a reformed man who is making amends for the past. Then the real Simon Pure, gambler and scapegrace, who is supposed to have been drowned, turns up, and matters become lively. Naturally a girl is concerned in the story—a girl who, having heard of her relative's dissolute life, is much surprised at the conduct of the man who is impersonating him, and eventually, after a stern resistance, falls in love with him. The story is vigorous, healthy, and thoroughly interesting.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Ltd.—'The Vision at the Savoy,' by Winifred Graham. That the careless rich are sadly in need of a religious revival may possibly be true, but whether the idea forms a good subject for a novel is another matter. There is a purpose in this book, and it is so insisted upon that one is bound to judge it from that standpoint. Jane Cardigan, the wicked aunt, is too much given to frivolity to enlist our sympathies, and her dying conviction that something ought to be done for people like herself hardly strikes home. When later she appears to her nephew, Arthur Paris, in the crowded supper-room of the Savoy, in company with Our Lord, the effect is more grotesque than impressive. Arthur Paris, however, understands, and builds a wonderful temple—Jane Cardigan's Temple—for the mission to the rich, and secures the help of all the leaders of religious thought of to-day, including Bishop Ingram and Father Ignatius. We are given a sermon from each of them. Only in a very general way is the success of the revival hinted at, and the book closes with another appearance of Jane Cardigan to her nephew. The novel is not uninteresting, but it is a strange mixture which we do not find convincing.

NEW EDITIONS.—Mr. Heinemann has published the twelfth volume of his edition of the Works of Heinrich Heine. This contains 'Romancero, Book 3, and Last Poems,' translated by Margaret Armour. The volume, which is apparently the last of the series, increases our admiration for a production which is remarkable for its good printing, fine paper, and suitable binding. The translation is beyond cavil.—The latest addition to the compact 'York Library,' published by Messrs. George Bell & Sons, is the 'Gesta Romanorum,' translated from the Latin by the Rev. Charles Swan and revised and corrected by Wynnard Hooper, M.A.—The admirers of Lord Beaconsfield's novels will welcome the publication of 'Vivian Grey' in the 'New Pocket Library' of Mr. John Lane. A short Introduction of no particular merit is contributed by the Earl of Iddesleigh.

We have received from Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. a copy of Smollett's 'Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves' and the 'Adventures of an Atom,' complete in one volume, accompanied by reproductions of Cruikshank and Corbould's illustrations. It forms a fresh addition to the firm's attractive series of cheap 'Classic Novels.'

We have been favoured by Messrs. C. Whittingham & Co., of the 'Chiswick Press,' with a copy of the third revised and enlarged edition of 'The Printers' Handbook of Trade Recipes, Hints, and Suggestions relating to Letterpress and Lithographic Printing, Bookbinding, Stationery, Process Work, &c.,' compiled by Charles Thomas Jacobi, in which will be found many matters of vital interest to publishers, booksellers, and authors, as well as to the general printer and others; while in its improved form the book is deserving of even wider popularity than it has already achieved.

We have received from Messrs. Stevens & Haynes a copy of their new sixth edition of Thomas Pitt Taswell-Langmead's 'English Constitutional History from the Teutonic Conquest to the Present Time.' This interesting and invaluable Text-Book has been carefully revised throughout by Philip A. Ashworth, Barrister-at-Law, and in its extended form should gain a still wider recognition from the historical student as well a general reader.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

THEOLOGICAL, BIOGRAPHICAL, AND KINDRED WORKS.

At Six Shillings.

THE INFANCY AND YOUTH OF JESUS. By the Rev. A. MORRIS STEWART, M.A., Author of 'The Crown of Science' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6*s*.

This is an important and fascinating work—important because its subject is important and because much study has been expended upon it, and fascinating because the author has treated his difficult yet most attractive topic with rare insight and tenderness, and with a gifted imagination. The success of Mr. Stewart's previous works will be recalled—his 'Crown of Science' having reached a Fifth and his 'Temptation of Jesus' a Third Edition.

At Three Shillings and Sixpence.

THE SHRINE OF FAITH: Our Lord's Human Experience. By the Rev. T. H. WRIGHT, Author of 'The Finger of God' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3*s*. 6*d*. net.

The Rev. T. H. Wright issued last year 'The Finger of God,' a volume described by the Critical Review as probably the best work on Our Lord's Miracles published during the last quarter of a century. This reverent and sympathetic work deals with the recorded experiences of Jesus, and is intended to assist the reader to some comprehension of the Saviour's inner life. It is strikingly suggestive and illuminative.

THE RIGHT LIFE, AND HOW TO LIVE IT. By HENRY A. STIMSON. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3*s*. 6*d*. net. [In preparation.

This book is by an American minister. There is nothing pietistic in it. 'The Right Life' here indicated is simply the clean life of virtue, such as parents desire their families to live, and teachers hold up for their scholars. The book is for young men, and its style is simple, direct and persuasive.

At Half-a-Crown net.

THE POWER OF PLAY. A Discussion on the Place and Power of Play in Child Culture. By G. HAMILTON ARCHIBALD, Author of 'Bible Lessons for Little Beginners.' Crown 8vo. cloth boards.

Child study has been much in evidence of recent years, but parents can scarcely have too much expert help in dealing with what is one of the greatest problems of life—the problem of the children. Mr. Archibald writes in a popular style of a somewhat obscure aspect of the question, his purpose being to show that the deep and unconquerable love of play is not something to be opposed and suppressed, but rather fostered and cultivated. The book is almost startling in its power of suggestion.

At Two Shillings.

PROGRESS AND PERFECTING. By the Rev. W. W. SIDEY, Author of 'The Silent Christ.' Foolscap 8vo. cloth boards.

'Progress and Perfecting' consists of a series of beautiful addresses on Christian Discipleship, by the author and preacher whose 'Silent Christ' has given so much delight to sermon lovers. It contains many 'golden counsels' uttered in wise and graciously sympathetic words.

OUR INDUSTRIAL OUTCASTS. A Volume of Essays on the problem of the Unemployed. Edited by WILL REASON, M.A., with an Introduction by Dr. CLIFFORD.

The Problem of Unemployment has a long history which requires to be taken into account before the evil can be touched. In this volume its genesis is pointed out, with a brief survey of the means which have been adopted at various periods to cope with it. A series of suggestions for present remedies makes the book invaluable to all those who are interested in the subject.

At Four and Sixpence Net.

THE HISTORY OF THE REFORMATION OF RELIGION IN SCOTLAND. Including the 'Confession of Faith' and 'The Book of Discipline.' By JOHN KNOX. A Twentieth Century Edition, Edited and done into modern English by CUTHBERT LENNOX. With Frontispiece Portrait. Royal 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 4*s*. 6*d*. net.

The Four Hundredth Anniversary of the Scottish Reformer has inspired a large output of special literature dealing with the man and his period, but, as Dr. Alexander Whyte says, that great maker of Scotland can never be known aright until his own 'History' has been read and re-read. In this Choice Edition, the classic of a great Reformation, done into modern English, will find many new readers and admirers.

At Three and Sixpence net.

JOHN KNOX; a Biography. By the Rev. D. MACMILLAN, M.A., with an Introduction by the Very Rev. Principal STORY, D.D., LL.D., and specially drawn illustrations by THOMAS SMELLIE, F.S.A. Crown 8vo. cloth, rough edges, 3*s*. 6*d*. net. 2nd Edition. 3rd Thousand.

At One Shilling Net.

JOHN KNOX: the Hero of the Scottish Reformation. A Biographical Sketch. By EDWARD MILLER, M.A. With numerous Illustrations. Cloth boards.

A brief but graphic and spirited biographical sketch of the great Scottish Reformer, fully illustrated. It tells the whole story without going into tedious details of creeds and controversy, and is therefore specially adapted for young people's reading.

NEW NOVELS.

At Six Shillings.

A SPUR TO SMITE: a Novel. By G. B. LANCASTER, Author of 'Sons o' Men.' Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6*s*.

This is the first complete novel by G. B. Lancaster, whose book, 'Sons o' Men,' published last year, achieved a remarkable literary success in this country and is now exciting considerable attention in America. 'A Spur to Smite' is certain to be one of the popular successes of this year.

A HEART'S HARMONY: a Novel. By ETHEL M. FORBES. Crown 8vo. cloth boards.

This novel is the first effort of a new writer, the wife of one of the most brilliant of the younger ministers in Glasgow, himself an author. It is the story of the development of character through suffering and tragedy, but there is no sentimentality, and the literary syle has great distinction.

HANDSOME GIFT BOOKS.

At Six Shillings.

THE GREEN-PAINTED SHIP: a Romance of Sea Adventure. By ROBERT LEIGHTON. Illustrated by J. W. CHARLTON. Imperial 16mo. cloth, bevelled boards, olivine edges, 6*s*.

WITH NELSON IN COMMAND: a Romance of Nelson and the Baltic. By ROBERT LEIGHTON. Illustrated by H. L. SHINDLER. Imperial 16mo. cloth, bevelled boards, olivine edges, 6*s*.

The Christmas gift-book season would be incomplete without a contribution from the pen of Mr. Leighton, who is regarded by so many boys and older boys as the legitimate claimant to the place left vacant in the story-telling world by the death of G. A. Henty. 'The Green-Painted Ship' is a thrilling tale of sea-adventure and treasure-finding, and 'With Nelson in Command' is a spirited romance of Nelson's days. Both books are splendidly illustrated.

At Five Shillings.

THE SPURS OF GOLD: a Romance of Lollard Days. By J. BROWN MORGAN and J. ROGERS FREEMAN. With Illustrations by E. TRAVERS POPE. Imperial 16mo. gilt edges.

The period of Henry IV. and the Lollards, of Hotspur and Glyndwr, has hitherto been left almost untouched by writers of fiction. 'The Spurs of Gold' is a spirited romance written by two collaborators who have brought to their work not only a large knowledge of the times of which they write, but also a sympathetic touch and a gift of humour. All the chief personages of the time appear in the pages of the story, and there is an abundance of fighting and adventure.

FAMOUS BRITISH ADMIRALS. By ALBERT LEE, Author of 'England's Sea Story' &c. Fully Illustrated. Large crown 8vo. cloth boards.

Many have been and many will be the Navy and Nelson records issued during this Nelson year, but 'Famous British Admirals' will win a place of its own as a volume of concise yet picturesque and spirited biographies of our British Sea-Kings. It is written by Mr. Albert Lee, whose 'England's Sea Story' gained so favourable a reception last year. The author's abilities as a descriptive writer are well known.

MADAM OF CLYST-PEVERIL. By E. EVERETT-GREEN, Author of 'The Three Graces' &c. Illustrated by COLBRON PEARSE. Imperial 16mo. cloth, gilt top.

This is the latest of Miss Evelyn Everett-Green's well-known historical tales. Every year Miss Everett-Green's reputation as a writer of historical fiction grows stronger, and 'Madam of Clyst-Peveril' will sustain the high reputation she has earned.

At Three and Sixpence.

MISS GREYSHOTT'S GIRLS. By EVELYN EVERETT-GREEN. Illustrated by ARTHUR TWIDLE. Imperial 16mo. cloth, gilt edges, 3*s*. 6*d*.

Miss Everett-Green has few equals in describing girl-life, whether at school or in a domestic environment. Miss Greyshott's 'young ladies'—they are only four—are all true types of English girlhood, and their hopes and ambitions, their adventures and misadventures at the critical period of leaving school for a larger world are narrated with delightful humour and sympathy and keen insight. The story of what befell the four is an exceedingly romantic one.

At Half-a-Crown.

THE BLACK FIFTEEN; and other School Stories. By W. E. CULE. Illustrated. Small Imperial 16mo. cloth boards.

There are eighteen stories in this volume, all dealing with the life of a public school, and boys will find the book full of interest and amusement. It opens with a story of a somewhat uncanny football match, in which a boy who had lost his train is forced to take part, much against his will. All the stories deal with the same school, and the thread of interest is exceedingly well maintained.

At Two Shillings.

THE ROSE-COLOURED BUS; and other Tales of the Fairies. By W. E. CULE, Author of 'Child-Voices' &c. With numerous delightful Illustrations by FLORENCE MEYERHEIM. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2*s*.

The book contains Ten Fairy Stories which should prove not only fascinating to children but interesting to those who are older. 'The Rose-Coloured Bus,' 'The Green Jug,' 'The Way Home,' and 'The Beautiful Harbour' are charming stories.

ADDRESS FOR EDITORIAL, PUBLISHING, AND ADVERTISING PURPOSES—112 CANNON STREET, LONDON, E.C.

How does 'The Standard' Reading Club affect Publishers and Booksellers?

The subscribers to 'The Standard' Reading Club are not asked to buy books. They are encouraged to read them, and reading a book is in many cases bound to lead to a desire for its possession.

This is an extract from the Book which describes 'The Standard' Reading Club in detail.

'YOU will not be importuned to buy books. "The Standard" will not make any attempt to undersell the book trade. The subscriber who, after reading a book, wants to keep it, will, in most cases, prefer to have that book new and unhandled—except in the case of some rare old edition this would certainly be the preference of the true lover of books. There are many booksellers who allow the full discount on such books as are not published at net prices, and for those who do not object to buying second-hand books there is always the opportunity of purchasing them at the regular bookshops.'

'The Standard' Reading Club will unquestionably give a vigorous fillip to the Publishing and Bookselling businesses. It will lead to the reading of thousands more books than are read now. And thus it will be of great and direct benefit to the Publishing Trade. As to the Bookselling Trade, there can be no better inducement to the purchase of a book than the reading of it. A very large percentage of 'The Standard' Reading Club books which are perused by its subscribers will eventually be bought by them. 'The Standard' Reading Club does not make any attempt to satisfy this desire for purchase, but on the contrary directs its subscribers to the regular Bookshops.

'The Standard' Reading Club confidently anticipates the support of the Book Trade, which its operations cannot fail to benefit.

OUR BOOK WILL INTEREST YOU.

We have prepared a little book which gives all the details of 'The Standard' Reading Club. It is not lengthy, for our plan is so simple and so sound that it needs no long, argumentative explanation. At the same time, many features which cannot be explained here are dealt with in the book.

It will be sent to you by return post-free if you will address a letter or postcard to the Manager, 'The Standard' Reading Club, Shoe Lane, London, E.C., or you may send the appended form in an open envelope, bearing a halfpenny stamp :—

THE NOVEMBER
NUMBER OF

THE BOOK MONTHLY

AN ILLUSTRATED RECORD, GUIDE AND MAGAZINE
FOR BOOKSELLERS, LIBRARIANS & PUBLISHERS
FOR BOOKBUYERS, READERS & WRITERS

To begin with it contains all manner of information about the New Books of the hour—those of October, those to come out in November. He who runs and reads, may thus quickly and easily know what new there is to read.

Then there are many gossipy paragraphs about literary affairs, and who loves not gossip? Moreover, with these same paragraphs go interesting and capitally printed portraits and other illustrations, and who does not love pictures?

Coming to the articles, two especially may be mentioned: one a talk with Mr. Richard Kearton on natural history literature and the making of it; the other a paper by Mr. Hubert Bland, one of our ablest London critics and reviewers, on the modern novel and its characteristics.

Generally the November number of the BOOK MONTHLY, like its predecessors, is a What's What and Who's Who of Bookland, and you will do well not to miss it. If you are not already familiar with the magazine, write for a specimen copy to the publishers, SIMPKIN, MARSHALL & CO., 4 Stationers' Hall Court, London.

BOOKS ABOUT OUR FLEET.

SEA POWER IN ITS RELATIONS TO THE WAR OF 1812.

By Capt. A. T. MAHAN, D.C.L., LL.D.

Captain Mahan presents in a series of vivid pictures the stirring events of the war, the points of single ship fights and squadron actions, giving due attention to the strategic interest of campaigns on the land and the diplomacy of the time.

'In lucidity, cogency, breadth of view, and depth of research they yield to none of their predecessors.'
STANDARD.

'A fitting termination to his great work on the "Influence of Sea Power on History." His writings belong to the world.'
DAILY GRAPHIC.

THE BRITISH FLEET 'THE GREATEST OF ALL FACTORS IN THE ADVANCE OF HUMANITY.'

The New York 'NATION,' the most fearless and influential of American political and literary organs, has the following remarkable testimony to the beneficent 'Influence' of the 'Sea Power' of Great Britain. It is the more remarkable because the 'NATION' is strongly anti-Imperialistic and a very cold admirer of most things British.

From the New York 'NATION':—

'Some communities are faced by problems that make war probable at a period more or less near, and among such communities, unfortunately, is England. British civilisation has spread its benefits ostentatiously over the globe. During one hundred and fifty years one thing alone has maintained untouched this greatest of all factors in the advance of humanity, and that thing is the British Fleet. England has occasionally lost sight of this fact, though never for long. . . . This is why Nelson is the national hero, the embodiment of a national ideal.'

CAPTAIN MAHAN'S NEW WORK,* 'SEA POWER IN ITS RELATIONS TO THE WAR OF 1812.'

> 'War is violence, wounds, and death. Needless bloodshed is to be avoided ; but even more, at the present day, is to be deprecated the view that the objects of a war are to be sacrificed to the preservation of life.'—Mahan's 'War of 1812.'

THIS grim statement and admonition will be found on page 403 of Vol. 2 of Captain Mahan's new work, which completes the series of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History' volumes.

Whether we consider the series merely as history or whether we consider its 'influence' in making history, it is certain that no other books have ever possessed such a power as these 'sea power' books. Translated into all the great languages, studied by the best statesmen and naval authorities of all the sea powers, it is less than the truth to say that they have more than doubled the moral, and probably also the material, naval forces of the world since they appeared. By moral naval force we mean the appreciation of what naval power has effected in the past, how it has effected it, and its present and future possibilities.

Writing with knowledge of what the best naval writers of other countries as well as of our own think of the works of Captain Mahan, we do not fear being charged with exaggerating their influence—political as well as naval. It is true that here and there an academical English naval writer has shrugged his shoulders at the 'infatuation for a British naval history made in America'—reminding one of the short-sighted opinion of a good naval officer who said: 'Mahan's writings are all right enough, and true enough, but there is nothing new in them; all these battles have been described before—if an English officer had written them they would have made no noise.' There is much virtue in that 'if,' and it shows that the speaker had not begun to realise the real secret of Captain Mahan's success.

Although called 'The War of 1812,' these entrancing volumes cover a much greater period, nearly one third being devoted to showing that for a century and a-half previously the wise policy of successive British Governments — 'a policy of sweeping protection' for our war and merchant navy—was the main cause of our last war with America. Starting with the Navigation Act, passed in 1651 during Cromwell's Protectorate, our author shows in his clear, luminous style how Great Britain's 'need to predominate on the sea' dawned on the minds of her statesmen, and how jealously and even ruthlessly generation after generation of them fostered and protected the naval interests of the country. As Captain Mahan points out, even Adam Smith, 'while exposing its fallacies as a commercial measure,' recognised the Act of Navigation as 'perhaps the wisest of all the commercial regulations of England.'

When John Adams, the first United States Minister to Great Britain, endeavoured to get his country to modify its naval policy he found it labour in vain. 'Every commercial consideration has been repeatedly urged,' he wrote, 'but to no effect; seamen, the navy, and power to strike an awful blow at an enemy at the first outbreak of war, are the ideas which prevail.' It would be a fine thing for our Empire if some of the obsolete ideas of our ancestors as to the real secret of sea power still prevailed. They wisely insisted that in peace time every merchant crew should be at least three-fourths British, securing thus such a naval reserve as is unobtained by any other system. When war broke out they wisely relaxed the rule, and to prevent injury to our trade allowed our merchant ships to be worked by crews of which even three-fourths might be foreigners.

One great lesson for our country to be learned from Captain Mahan's new work is the vital importance to this country of a real naval reserve of young active British merchant sailors. As Mr W. Clark Russell and other writers have so often told us, at present we work our merchant ships with such a large proportion of foreigners that it would be impossible safely to draw largely on our own men to make good the drain of war.

In the last two-thirds of his work Captain Mahan deals with the many engagements which took place on sea and land—for the American lakes are practically seas—between our sailors and soldiers and those of America. Although there is none of the pomp and majesty of sea fights on a great scale, we get picture after picture of some of the most desperate fighting recorded in history, fighting between men of the same race of equally dauntless courage, who could only beat each other by superior skill or numbers or armament. The beauty of Captain Mahan's writing is not only its clearness but its absolutely impartiality. Nobody in England at the outbreak of the war of 1812 dreamed that our seamen who had fought under Nelson and Collingwood and St. Vincent and the rest would be beaten time after time by men who had never previously fired a gun in action. Our men were beaten by the men who designed and armed the American ships; as Captain Mahan tells us, two American frigates were equal to three ships of ours nominally of the same class. Again and again we read how our ships were crippled and half beaten before they could get within gunshot of the enemy.

Captain Mahan is equally impartial with praise or blame. Needless to say, there were no railways in 1812, consequently the British in defending Canada had to rely on sending men, supplies, and the materials for building and repairing their fleet on the lakes by water from Halifax or England up the St. Lawrence. Captain Mahan shows how the Americans frittered away their strength in a series of engagements along the whole course of the frontier instead of concentrating their force at Montreal or Kingston. 'The only substantial gain for the Americans on the whole frontier in the campaign of 1813 was the destruction of the British fleet on Lake Erie, the left flank of the American position. Had the same result been accomplished on the right flank—as it might have been—at Montreal or even at Kingston, the centre and left of the British line must have fallen also,' i.e. by the blocking of the way to the sea. Captain Mahan's new work, which is very attractively illustrated, must prove of deep interest to all who speak English, especially to all subjects of King Edward VII., whose Empire depends as does no other on its own and other nations' sea power.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THE official account of the tour in India of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales will be written by Sir Walter Lawrence, K.C.I.E., Chief of the Prince's Staff. The work will contain the only authoritative record of this memorable journey through the Indian Empire, while the various territories visited will suggest a comprehensive survey of their condition and a discussion of many important problems connected with their government and administration, for which Sir Walter Lawrence's long experience of Indian affairs has eminently fitted him. Thus the work may be expected to form a standard book of reference for many years to come. It will be published in two handsome, finely illustrated volumes by Mr. Edward Arnold, 41 and 43 Maddox Street, London, publisher to H.M. Secretary of State for India in Council, as soon as possible after the conclusion of the royal tour.

Mr. John Lane will publish on November 9 'Peterkins: the Story of a Dog,' translated from the German of Ossip Schubin by Mrs. John Lane. The book is charmingly got up, and contains numerous illustrations by T. Cottington Taylor. Other volumes Mr. Lane will publish on the same day are 'Edward A. MacDowell,' by Lawrence Gilman, a new volume in 'The Living Masters of Music,' and a reprint of Captain Marryat's 'The King's Own,' in 'The New Pocket Library.' A feature of the last-named is an Introduction by W. Clark Russell.

We are glad to hear from Messrs. A. & C. Black that they are publishing a book which 'radiates sunshine,' entitled 'The Italian Lakes,' painted by Ella Du Cane, described by Richard Bagot.

Miss Anne Macdonell has an Essay on Saint Douceline coming out with Messrs. Dent & Co. Saint Douceline is a little-known saint much influenced by Franciscanism, but one who never joined the poor Clares. She was the founder of the House of Beguinés, and they were known as the Ladies of Roubaud; she encouraged her ladies with the saying: 'All the other Orders have a fast Rule; but yours only is love!'

Mr. John Masefield has edited, with Biographical Preface and notes and Mr. Jack B. Yeats has furnished a number of illustrations to a reprint of 'The Fancy,' by John Hamilton Reynolds, Tom Hood's brother-in-law and the friend of John Keats. The little volume, published anonymously in 1820, purported to be 'A Selection from the Poetical Remains of the late Peter Cocoran, of Gray's Inn, Student at Law,' and it cannot be doubtful that the prefatory memoir prefixed is in its main features autobiographical, and those portions of it which relate to his life at Shrewsbury School as it existed in the palmy days of Dr. Butler extremely interesting. Mr. Elkin Mathews will shortly publish the volume in his 'Satchel Series.'

All interested in entomology should see the 'Antiquariats-Katalog No. 98,' just issued by Herr Max Wegg, 1 Leplaystrasse, Leipzig.

The autobiography of an angler is practically what Mr. Aflalo's new book, 'The Salt of my Life,' will be. But although personal stories are freely scattered through its pages, many useful hints to anglers will also be found there. The book is to be published by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., and is fully illustrated.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. will publish almost immediately a new volume of the 'Temple Classics,' entitled 'Indian Poetry.' It is a selection and translation from Indian Poetry by Mr. Romesh Chundra Dutt, who rendered the 'Maha-Bharata' and 'Ramayana' into English verse for this series; also a new volume in the 'Temple English Literature Series for the Young,' entitled 'The Conquest of Mexico and Peru,' being an abridgment of W. H. Prescott's well-known book by Mr. Oliphant Smeaton.

Mr. Arthur Symons has contributed to 'The Vigo Cabinet' series some translations from the 'Poèmes en Prose' of Charles Baudelaire, and to the same series Mr. F. P. Sturm (a new writer) will add 'An Hour of Reverie.'

Miss Lilian Street and Miss Elizabeth Gibson have in the press new volumes of lyrics entitled 'Shadow and Gleam' and 'Shadows' respectively. Both will be published by Mr. Elkin Mathews.

Volume IV. of the Works of Shakespeare will appear in the 'Standard Library,' issued by Messrs. Methuen, in a few days.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. are about to issue immediately a specially selected number of volumes in their 'Temple Classics' bound up in chamois leather; these, at a slight increase on the lambskin volumes, should make very acceptable Christmas presents.

Messrs. P. S. King & Son, Orchard House, Westminster, announce that they will publish, early in November, 'Louis Wain's Annual,' printed in colours and tints throughout.

Mr. Clement K. Shorter's 'Charlotte Brontë' is published in America by Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons.

Collectors of works on the Navy, on the History of Steam Navigation, on the Early Railway System, will be greatly interested in a list of such works which Mr. Edward Baker, of 15 John Bright Street, Birmingham, has for sale. Mr. Baker's very useful notes about the books gives his catalogue quite an historical as well as bibliographical value.

'Thomas Gainsborough,' by William B. Boulton, contains a full treatment of the life and work of the great painter, whose remarkable personality and eminence as a painter and the picturesque character of whose times and acquaintances together provide a subject of general interest. There are forty plates in the work, which Messrs. Methuen have just published.

Harper's Magazine for November has some more of Mr. Abbey's wonderful pictures from Shakespeare.

The Hon. John Collier, one of our foremost exponents of the art of portraiture, has completed an interesting volume on this branch of art, which will be published during November by Messrs. Cassell & Co. It is no mere technical treatise, but a series of unconventional chapters on portraiture considered historically and practically. A close acquaintance with the works of old masters and a personal knowledge of the great portrait painters of our time enables Mr. Collier to speak with authority. There are upwards of forty illustrations of the work of old and modern masters in the book.

Mr. George Moore's new novel, 'The Lake,' will be published by Mr. Heinemann on the 10th inst. It is a story of an Irish priest and a pretty school mistress, told with all the author's well-known brilliance and skill.

'The most remarkable fact about the modern novel is, not that it should be so bad, but that it should be so good as it is.' — Hubert Bland, in the Book Monthly.

Mr. Heinemann publishes to-day 'The Fortune Hunter,' a story of the days of Augustus Adolphus, translated from the Swedish of Harald Molander. Dr. George Brandes writes of the book: 'It is a work of art of great distinction—a romance of the same kind as Dumas' "The Three Musketeers."'

A very handsome edition of Prescott's Historical Works in 22 vols. 8vo. is in course of publication by Messrs. J. B. Lippincott & Company. It will be called the Montezuma edition, and will be illustrated by 110 full-page photogravure plates by Goupil, of Paris, some of which are original illustrations by the most distinguished modern artists. The edition will be limited to 100 numbered sets.

THE STANDARD READING CLUB.

As will be seen from the advertisement, the new Standard scheme claims not only not to injure booksellers, but to be of benefit to them by encouraging book reading. We hope that it is to be of more direct benefit than that, but at present all we can ascertain is that it will work through the 'Book Lovers' Library,' and, unless we are much mistaken, that scheme is worked by means of booksellers who act as agents for it. In the Daily Mail a month or so ago there was a list of a large number of booksellers acting as agents for the Book Lovers' Library. If this Standard scheme is the same scheme, it will benefit the book trade, or at least those members of it who act as local agents.

JOHN H. MABIE DEAD.

JOHN H. MABIE, senior member of the firm of Mabie, Todd & Baird, manufacturers of gold pens, at Fulton and Nassau Streets, died in Hackensack, N.J., about ten o'clock on Tuesday night, October 10, immediately after his return from an automobile ride with his son Charles, being stricken with a severe attack of heart disease.

Mr. Mabie was found unconscious in his room by a member of the family and medical aid was quickly obtained, but he died within an hour. He had previously been in perfect health. He was fifty-eight years old.

Mr. Mabie had been in business in this city more than twenty-five years, and had lived in Hackensack all of that time. He was prominent in the affairs of the town, but never held public office.—Geyer's Stationer.

PRICES OF BOOKS.

THAT valuable work, 'Book Prices Current,' Vol. XIX. (Elliot Stock), records prices at which books have been sold from October 1904 to July 1905. It has about eighty pages less than Vol. XVIII., and records eight hundred fewer sales, but though the sales of moderately expensive books have been fewer, the sales of very expensive books have increased. The number of volumes which in one year sell for £100 or more each is on the average twenty-five or thirty. In Vol. XIX. are recorded the sales of forty works at more than £100 each, six of which fetched more than £1,000 each: the Mentz Psalter, 1459, £4,000; 'Titus Andronicus,' 1594 (private sale), £2,000; 'Richard III.' (also Shakespeare), 1605, £1,750; a Family Bible, 1766, with notes on and by Robert Burns, £1,560; Caxton's 'Caton,' 1483, £1,350; Shakespeare's 'Henry IV.,' Part 1, 1608, £1,000. The number of lots sold at the auctions dealt with in this volume is 42,447, of which 5,439 are recorded in detail. An improvement in the arrangement of this issue is to combine subject and general index in one alphabet. While the prices of books unique or almost unique rises, those of other valuable works have been lower in the past season, which on the whole, says Mr. Slater in his Preface, 'has proved one of the best of recent years for buyers.

A FINE WORK ON OLD DUTCH MASTERS.

AT the extremely moderate price of 10 francs (to be raised to twelve on January 1, 1906) Messrs. G. Van Oest & Cie, publishers, 16 Rue de Musée, Brussels, have just published a handsome imperial 8vo. volume entitled 'La Renaissance Septentrionale et les premiers Maîtres des Flandres. In addition to twenty-four full-page plates there are about a hundred illustrations in the text, and very fine they are. It is indispensable to all lovers of Dutch Art, as it deals with it from its beginnings in the twelfth century to the great time of the Van Eycks. We hope to give specimens of the illustrations in our Christmas number.

'ÆSOP'S FABLES,' No. 301.

A BOOKSELLER who had paid rates to help support the public library of his town fell sick with 'Bookclubitis,' following a severe attack of "Encyclopæditis.'

He called in his doctor, who prescribed a concoction of 'patience' and 'combination,' and took his fee of 5s. and departed.

The doctor then went to the Public Library to get a book he desired to read; it was 'out.' He also tried the 'Cash Chemists,' also the 'Chaucer Book Library,' without success.

Repassing his friend the bookseller's shop he saw the book he wanted in his window, and he plucked up courage and bought it, paying for it with the money the sick man had just paid him!

THE P.C. IN AMERICA.

THE latest issue to reach us of the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, which covers very efficiently the affairs of the English book trade, is an 'Autumn Announcement Number,' containing full particulars of the forthcoming output of the English publishers. A casual glance through the list has revealed several items of considerable literary interest which do not appear in the announcements of any of the American publishers. Among these may be mentioned a new collected edition, in eight finely-printed volumes, of the complete works of William Ernest Henley; a two-volume 'Life of Charles Dickens, as revealed in his Writings,' by Mr. Percy Fitzgerald; a volume on 'Ideals and Realities in Russian Literature,' by Prince Kropotkin; the sixth and concluding volume, entitled 'Young Germany,' of George Brandes's 'Main Currents in Nineteenth Century Literature'; a collection of 'Essays on Mediæval Literature,' by Professor W. P. Ker; 'The Puzzle of Dickens's Last Plot,' by Mr. Andrew Lang; and a new edition of W. Cory's 'Ionica' with a Biographical Introduction by Mr. Arthur C. Benson.—Chicago Dial.

MR. ARROWSMITH'S No. XCIII.

THE new volume of Mr. Arrowsmith's famous 'Bristol Library' is No. 93, and one is Called Back a long way in thinking of No. 1. 'Fleet Street from Within, the Romance and Mystery of the Daily Press,' by Henry Leach, is the title of the latest addition to the handy shilling series, and having read it right through with great interest we can confidently recommend it to all who would like to look for an hour or so into the 'works' of the Daily Press. Mr. Leach's is the best book on the subject we know. Most people who read it will thank God they do not have to earn their daily bread on a daily paper!

OBITUARY.

WE regret to have to record the death of Mr. William Curtis Edmonds, Bookseller, &c. 420 Brixton Road, S.W., at his residence on October 29 in his eighty-second year. The business was established in this house in 1847 by his mother, he assisting her, in 1858 it was transferred to him, and in 1875 he added the printing and binding departments. For many years he has subscribed to the P.C. Mr. C. E. Hard, who sends us this information, adds: 'I have been in his service for nearly twenty-two years, and could not wish for a better master and friend.'

TRADE CHANGES.

MR. AGAS H. GOOSE, bookseller, Norwich, informs us that he has taken his son, Mr. Arthur W. Goose, into partnership. The style of the firm will be from this date Goose & Son.

Mr. Dudley Vivian is now sole London representative for the Library Press, and Mr. William Hurton continues to carry 'The Cameo Classics' and the other popular lines of this enterprising young publishing house in the country.

PUBLISHERS' BOWLING LEAGUE.

Several New York book houses have signified their intention of joining the proposed Publishers' Bowling League, and if the Oxford University Press team hear from a few more the league will be assured. If there are five men in any one concern who will represent it on the bowling alley the league can be organised and the games started. There are to be no expenses or charges of any kind excepting that the losing teams will pay for the use of the alley, as is customary in regular open games. The only purpose of the league ought to be good clean sport and a closer acquaintance among the men of the publishing trade—New York Publishers' Weekly.

MORE ABOUT BACON.

Just as we go to press we have received this note from Messrs. Gay & Bird: 'Mr. Begley's forthcoming sequel to his work issued in 1903, "Is it Shakespeare?" is likely to cause a little flutter in literary circles. Mr. Begley has had the good fortune to discover a French volume, published in 1631, which contains much information about Bacon's early life, and even some writing by him not known to any of his biographers. He finds in this volume an early and new methodical version of Bacon's "Sylva Sylvarum," with some experiments in Consort not contained in the edition published by Dr. Rawley. Some new facts also are supplied concerning Bacon's early travels and occupations. Some interesting and quite original references to Bacon's father, Sir Nicholas, are given.'

THE MUSES LIBRARY.

We are requested by Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., to state that the volumes of the Muses Library issued in the series since its purchase by them from Mr. A. H. Bullen, its original projector and editor—viz., the Poetical Works of Johnson, Goldsmith, Gray and Collins (in 1 vol.), Sir Lewis Morris, Coventry Patmore, Poe, Adelaide Proctor, D. G. Rossetti, Tennyson, and Palgrave's 'Golden Treasury'—were not selected for the series by Mr. Bullen, who disclaims responsibility for their inclusion. Mr. Bullen, in fact, ceased to edit the series after its ownership passed from his hands.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

St. Vincent.—Yes, it should have been Lady Hamilton, and not Lady Nelson, in fourth line from foot of first column last week. The context makes it clear.

Often the Case.—Little Elmer: Papa, what is a critic?

Prof. Broadhead: A critic, my son, is a person who could not do it himself.—Puck.

'AN ATLANTIC TRAGEDY.'

Sir,—I find that the above book, which was announced in the World, October 24, as though it was a new novel by me, is a collection of short stories which I wrote for Messrs. Tillotson & Son, of Bolton, many years ago. I have no recollection of the nature or titles of these tales, which I doubtless wrote under the complete impression that they were for serial use and destined to live only as long as the life of the issue of the journals in which they appeared. I am pained that Messrs. Tillotson should have acted towards me as they would not willingly act towards a man in any other walk than that of letters. They should have told me that they had these stories in their possession; that they meant to sell them; asked if I had any objection; taken care (if I had not objected—but I should) that I saw proofs; caused the purchaser to see that I was satisfied with the title, &c. &c. Even if I had sold all rights in these stories, I still hold a moral right—the right to protect my reputation against such injury as must be done me by editorial mutilation, by interpolation, by abridgment, by arbitrary choice of title, which in this case comes perilously close to a novel written by me and published, in three editions, by Messrs. Chatto & Windus, called 'An Ocean Tragedy.' And further, I desire to protest against the practice which a certain class of publishers are guilty of—the practice, I mean, of so naming a book as to lead readers to believe that it is a novel, one long story, when in reality it is a collection or miscellany, with one narrative whose title gives its name to the whole.

The resentment excited in me by Messrs. Digby, Long & Co.'s republication of crude old work of mine is rendered the more acute by the circumstance that I have bidden farewell to fiction-writing, and that I could have wished to die with dignity, like Cæsar, with all my robes about me. This wish would have been fulfilled by the publication, by my honourable and excellent friend, Mr. Fisher Unwin, of 'The Yarn of Old Harbour Town,' which in my opinion—and I can be as critical as Jones, who is learned in such cant as 'sane,' 'convincing,' 'appreciation,' and the like of the journalistic sottises of the hour--is the best piece of work that ever left my pen, in spite of the yelps of certain Press Yahoos who, secure in their ambush of trees, discharge their drenches upon the heads of the seemly and comely passers-by. But as Marryat makes a sailor sing, so say I:

'Port-Admiral, you be d——d.'

Yours faithfully,
W. Clark Russell.

Mention the 'P. C.'—Our Readers who order books, &c. they see mentioned or advertised in the Publishers' Circular will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

AUTHORS, PUBLISHERS, AND AGENTS.

Sir,—So much has been written already upon the vexed question of author, publisher, and agent that it might well seem superfluous to add another word to the discussion.

The only excuse for doing so must be that, although the discussion goes on continually, the main point at issue has always been ignored, while fresh points have arisen lately.

The whole matter is one of business; and the essential rule for any sort of trading is the law of supply and demand—a fact which has persistently been kept out of the reckoning in every contribution upon the subject of publishing books that I have read.

Leaving on one side the manufacturing trades which are interested in the question—viz. the printers, paper makers, and others, as well as the circulating libraries and booksellers, there remain the authors, the publishers—and, as now seems generally to be admitted, the literary agents, as the three parties principally concerned.

All the classes enumerated above help in their several callings to produce and supply books, but the actual demand comes solely from the general public.

It is advisable, therefore, before considering what proportion of profit is to be allotted to the different suppliers, to make sure that there is a sufficient demand for the production. Otherwise books have to be brought out at somebody's loss, and to the gain of nobody in particular.

The late Sir Walter Besant, who worked most strenuously on behalf of his fellow labourers in the field of fiction, always seemed to assume that there was an unlimited market, not only for the work of popular and well-tried writers like himself, but also for that of beginners all and sundry.

I remember some years ago reading three MSS. which had previously been stamped with Sir Walter's approval, and I doubted then, and doubt still, whether any publisher of position would have accepted them, even if all costs had been borne by the author.

The constant exhortations to inexperienced writers which appeared month after month in the Author ten or twelve years ago must have had the effect of stimulating an output which was far in excess of any possible demand.

The equally constant warnings against publishers may well be forgotten now. Everyone must respect the disinterestd zeal of the author now gone in championing his craft, however mistaken they may consider his logic to have been, and although it may provoke a smile to reflect that the man who was never tired of inveighing against publishers as middle men reaping all the profits of the author's genius could find no better way of solving the difficulty than that of introducing a third party, the literary agent, to share in the spoils.

Much is due to the memory of a kindly humourist who introduced us in his books to a gallery of unaffected and thoroughly English girls, as well as to not a few amusing rogues of the type of Autolycus; and if his crusades led him into occasional pitfalls where business affairs were concerned, so, after all, did those of Don Quixote.

In any case the Author under its present management adopts a less trenchant method in its dealings with publishers, although we still find existing the old hallucination that they all amass vast fortunes in spite of trade competition and depression. One would be glad if this were so; but a glance at their advertisements in one part of the paper, and an occasional law report in another part, tell a different story.

In the last issue of the Author Mr. Bernard Shaw still clings to this sanguine belief in the opulence of publishers, but he is known to be fond of a joke and we may suspect that he is jesting here. As, however, Mr. Shaw takes his readers into his confidence to the extent of telling them that his publisher pays him a royalty of 20 per cent., it will not be giving away any trade secret to affirm that probably a score of publishers would be willing to grant him the same royalty. It is not the liberal payments to successful authors that cripple a publisher, but the numberless stillborn ventures of new and struggling aspirants, the expense of which he has to defray perhaps fifty times in the hope of lighting upon a nugget the fifty-first. This doubtless is speculation on the part of the publisher, but without it how many authors would come before the public at all?

Here again we have an instance of excessive supply, and when the nugget is found it is the demand of the public that calls the tune.

The Authors' Society being now in better accord with the Publishers' Association, which was started in the first instance partly with the view of bringing about some understanding of the sort, has recently been devoting more time to the question of the literary agent.

I have mentioned above how he originated; and if the author chooses to pay a third party to advise him upon his choice of a publisher, to arrange terms for him, and to try and place his book upon the different foreign and colonial markets, there seems to be no just reason to urge against his doing so; but in a very fair and exhaustive article upon the subject which appeared in the April number of the Anthor for last year there are a few statements which call for comment, as they are based upon the assumption that it is impossible for a literary agent to deal fairly between author and publisher, 'because he cannot act for both parties.'

But surely in most relations of life where a professional man acts as an adviser it is essential that he should be trusted by the parties between whom he is acting. Indeed a reputation for honesty would seem to be the chief justification for a literary agent's existence. The next paragraph, however, treats of the literary agent as a purchaser, who advances money to needy authors, buys their MSS. at his own price, and tries to sell again to publishers for as much as he can get.

There is nothing positively dishonest about this sort of book-broking, but it can hardly be agreeable to an author to sell his work to an agent for £50, and then to find that the latter has received £100 from a publisher.

Nor can it be altogether gratifying to another publisher to find that a MS. for which, perhaps, he has been asked £200 has found a buyer at half that figure.

In this same article of April 1904 the very sound rule is laid down that no agent should permit a new author for whom he is acting to bind himself to a publisher for more books than the one under consideration—that is to say, for any underwritten books of the future; and the same rule surely should apply even more strongly where the contract is between author and agent. But would an adviser of ordinary common sense be likely to recommend such a proceeding, or are authors so extraordinarily foolish as to sign agreements based upon such terms?

Sir Walter Besant was always persistent in telling his fellow authors that they were not men of business, being, as he put it, too much engrossed in originating works of genius to attend to the affairs of everyday life. At the same time he would assure them that for an author to part with his copyright to a publisher was to sell his birthright for a mess of pottage.

The Authors' Society now treats such a system of barter between author and agent as quite a usual occurrence.

Is the agent, then, so much more generous than the publisher that he can afford to offer the author better terms, or is the book trade in such a flourishing state that it can welcome yet another middleman, whose business takes the form indicated by the Author? Mr. Bernard Shaw, in his letter of last July, adopts an original estimate of the respective business capacities of author and publisher. He says, in his review of 'The Confessions of a Benevolent and High-minded Shark': 'Whenever a publisher gives me literary advice I take an instant and hideous revenge upon him. I give him business advice. I pose as an economist, a financier, and a man of affairs. I explain what I would do if I were a publisher, and I urge him to double his profits by taking my advice.'

This is all very well, but how would Mr. Shaw treat the literary agent if not as an adviser? Does he, like the Author, view him in the light of a trade competitor with publishers?

In the same number of the Author (July 1905) there is an article upon the 'ideal agent,' which states, among other things, that 'he ought to be a good reader to be able to judge of the quality and defects of the contribution.'

This seems excellent advice, but the question arises whether if the 'ideal agent' comes to the conclusion that the defects of the MS. outweigh the quality he is justified (1) in charging the author a fee; (2) in submitting it to publishers.

The latter complain that over 90 per cent. of the MSS. sent to them are hopeless trash, and yet the article goes on to suggest that when a contribution is accepted the agent's commission should be paid, not by the author but by the publisher.

Upon the whole, further consideration confirms me in the opinion that the publishing trade suffers from excess of supply over demand, and that, if the latter cannot be increased, the former must be reduced, and this will not be done as long as the literary agent poses as a book-broker.

He would probably be of some assistance to publishers if he exercised a little discretion before submitting MSS. to them; he would certainly be of use to authors if he gave them sensible advice based upon his own experience of the best means of securing publication for their work; and he would prove himself a universal benefactor if in any way he could check the flow of unread and unreadable fiction which swamps the market.

But it is impossible that this result can be achieved so long as the 'agent,' literary or non-literary, figures as a mixture of 'bull and bear,' after the fashion described in the columns of the Author.

His claims to utility would seem to lie in an altogether different direction. As an honest adviser or intermediary he might be welcome, but in the light of a buyer he occupies an anomalous position, and exercises an influence upon the market which is the reverse of beneficial either to author or publisher.

No good is gained by turning the profession of letters into a kind of Stock Exchange, least of all when there is an absence of genuine demand on the part of the public.

Perhaps the Authors' Society and the Publishers' Association may be able to arrive at a solution of the difficulty with or without the intervention of the 'ideal agent,' but the one thing needful for all three is that the public should buy.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

A. F. G. Stirling.

SHARING THE RISK OF PUBLICATION IN BYGONE DAYS.

Dear Sir,—I believe that in times past it was the custom for a number of publishers or booksellers to share the risk of publishing an expensive work among them by first ascertaining the cost, and then each undertaking a large or small share according to their faith in the success of the venture. I think this has been stated in your columns, but I ask for confirmation.

I am preparing the biography of a Hertfordshire historian whose work was printed for some four booksellers—Ben Griffin, Sam Keble, Dan Brown, and Roger Clavel, in 1700. The venture was, I hope, a profitable one. The prospectus, after stating that the work 'is now a-going to be put to the Press to be printed in as fair a character and in [?on] as large and good paper as this Proposal and specimen is printed on; but by reason of the Dearness of Paper and the Chargeableness of Print, the Book making a great many sheets, cannot be afforded under Twenty shillings a book to the Subscribers, there being to be printed but 500 books,' &c. &c.

Now as the work was in folio, 14¾ by 9½, contained 634 pages of printed matter on a good tough paper, and 45 illustrations printed from copper plates (the engraving of which in most instances was paid for by the owners of the houses represented), it is a little difficult to see where a profit could be expected at twenty shillings a copy! Perhaps some expert would kindly give the writer, purely as a matter of literary interest, his opinion. W. B. GERISH.

Bishop's Stortford: October 28, 1905.

[It is a pity Sir Walter Besant cannot answer this question; he could have proved that 75 per cent. of the proceeds must be profit.—ED.]

MR. C. K. SHORTER AND THE NET SYSTEM.

SIR,—It grieves me very much to see such a brilliant literary man as Mr. Clement K. Shorter expressing his disapproval of the net system, and, what is more surprising, his weak reason in favour of his opinion. It is merely the gratification of purchasing a book marked 6*s.* for 4*s.* 6*d.* Surely this sentiment is hardly the thing you would expect from a person so intimately connected with the publishing and bookselling world. The net system, which has only been obtained after a hard fight, which has been welcomed with open arms by the trade, who recognise its possibilities, needs the support, especially at this moment, of every person connected with the trade, and surely the public need to be educated into a more businesslike spirit than is shown in their desire to get a 6*s.* book for 4*s.* 6*d.* I write this simply in defence of the net system.—Yours faithfully,

J. T. (a Publishers' Traveller).

'LONG WINDED CUSTOMERS.'

SIR,—Will you allow me to inform 'One of Them,' whose letter appeared in last week's issue, that if he had put his name to the letter he would not have been bothered for the future with applications for payment of small sums—i.e., 2*s.* 3*d.*, or for large sums either? I consider his letter most unfair to other bookbuyers who pay promptly, and I trust that they will not rest under the stigma which the said 'One of Them' has cast upon them as a body. Thanking you in anticipation, I am, dear sir,

Yours &c.

Reading. J. SMITH.

REVIEWS OF GERMAN BOOKS IN BRITISH PERIODICALS.

SIR,—The Expository Times is neither edited in Edinburgh nor published in London, but I send you the last two numbers to give point to your remarks in last week's PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR. The Expository Times gives as much space as this to Foreign Theology every month.—Yours faithfully,

JAMES HASTINGS, Editor.

St. Cyrus, Montrose, Scotland:
October 31, 1905.

[In the copies Dr. Hastings sends us there are reviews of some half-dozen German works almost all favourable and complimentary to German scholarship, besides notice of German periodicals.—ED.]

FROM THE TIMES OF THE YEAR——

DEAR SIR,—The enclosed extracts struck me as being rather amusing. They are culled from a note in 'Mustard and Cress,' in the Referee, a paper which I have never, never before, purchased. As a director of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, the last paragraph appeals to me somewhat strongly.

Yours faithfully,
J. W. HARDEN.

THE TIMES.
DO YOU KNOW WHAT IT IS DOING?
Forthcoming Arrangements.

The Proprietors, encouraged by the success of the Times Book Club, have decided to give all subscribers for one year the full advantages of the Times Boot Club, the Times Coal and Blanket Club, and the Times Soup Kitchen.—N.B.—The Times Goose Club has now commenced.

The Proprietors of the Times have acquired an admirable site, on which they are about to erect Almshouses for the accommodation of ruined Booksellers and proprietors of Circulating Libraries.

Notices of Books

From Mr. George Allen.—'Nelson and his Companions in Arms,' by John Knox Laughton. Well beaten ground is naturally to a large extent traversed in this account of Nelson's naval career, but the narrative is so succinctly and ably set forth, the type is so clean and large, the thin paper so convenient, and the size of the volume so handy, that numerous readers, we are sure, will feel disposed to refresh their remembrance of these stirring events of history, while the younger generation could scarcely gain information in a more charming form. Included in the dainty little volume are a number of portraits, mostly of Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton.

From Messrs. Samuel Bagster & Sons, Ltd.—'The Christian as Protestant,' by the Rev. Robert J. Drummond, D.D. The author of this volume thinks, and by no means unjustifiably, that there are times when Protestants need to be reminded of what Romanism really is, of what she was before the Reformers arose, of what it was that compelled them in the interests of Christianity—or, it may be said, humanity—to enter their protests and to withdraw from her communion. In a series of chapters, therefore, respectively treating of the Church of Rome as a Church of Christ, the inability of Papacy to be recognised as a Christian institution, the reason for the Reformation, the attitude of Cranmer during the religious dissensions of the sixteenth century, the influences of the Scottish Reformation, the teaching of that stalwart figure in ecclesiastical history, John Knox, &c., he sets forth some of the leading features in the building up of the Protestant Church. The volume gives one the impression of a collection of essays not originally intended to be grouped together, though connected by a common link, but they are all worthy of attention and will certainly lead to profitable thought.

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—'Horace,' by Rev. W. Tuckwell, M.A. This addition to 'Bell's Miniature Series of Great Writers contains a concise, well-written account of the celebrated Latin author and his works, accompanied by several illustrations.

From the Cambridge University Press.—'An Introduction to Geology,' by J. E. Marr, Sc.D., F.R.S. Little originality can perhaps be claimed for the facts of geology, but undoubtedly there is much in the way they are set forth. Dr. Marr has a clear, incisive style which pleasantly invites to knowledge, and by the method of his teaching he at once cultivates the best of relations with his readers. The book is mainly designed as an exercise ground for those who intend to pursue the study of geology into more advanced regions, but no doubt, seeing that it is written as far as possible in non-technical language, it will be found useful also for ordinary readers desirous of acquiring a general idea only of the science. For both these classes it is equally well adapted. The illustrations are from photographs, several being of great interest.

From Messrs. Chapman & Hall, Ltd.—'Java: Facts and Fancy,' by Augusta de Wit. This is an entertaining, piquant book, evidencing considerable powers of observation and no little capability of expression in the author. The insight it affords into the social life of the Javanese is especially interesting, and a prominent attraction is to be found in the photographic illustrations, which are not only very numerous but exceedingly well reproduced. Unfortunately, in order to give full effect to the pictures it has been found necessary to use a heavily-coated surface paper, which largely adds to the weight of the volume.

From Messrs. James Clarke & Co.—'Christ's Pathway to the Cross,' by J. D. Jones, M.A., B.D.; 'The Crucible of Experience,' by F. A. Russell. These are two further booklets in the daintily equipped 'Freedom of Faith' series, an attractive library of religious reading distinguished by refined thought, eloquent reasoning, and a delicate perception of higher things.

From the same.—'The Pilot: a Book of Daily Guidance from Master Minds.' The object the editor of this work has had in view in his selection of quotations is, we are told, 'the inspiration and enlargement of daily life by constant reference to the truths of the spiritual life,' and he has endeavoured to recognise the catholicity of the sources from which light and counsel may be drawn. The volume is very neatly produced, with an attractive 'Prayer Book' binding. Without doubt it will be found of great help and religious benefit by devout-minded readers.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd.—'The Irrational Knot,' by Bernard Shaw. This work was written some twenty-five years ago, and it constitutes what Mr. Shaw terms 'the second novel of his nonage.' For a time it went the round of the publishers, no one being desirous of taking it in hand, and eventually it first saw light in a little propagandist magazine belonging to Mrs. Annie Besant. It is interesting now to compare Mr. Shaw's earlier work with his more mature efforts. The spirit is certainly the same; there is the usual tilting at recognised social customs, the hypocrisy of life, and so forth; but the treatment is vastly inferior. At times, indeed, the book is positively dull The plot chiefly hinges on the marriage of Marion Lind, member of a well-to-do family, with a man much inferior to her in social position, who has 'views' after the usual Shawian type. After marriage Marian is disappointed in her husband on account of what may be termed his exasperating reasonableness, and she eventually leaves him for an old lover, with whom she proceeds to New York. Here she soon realises the mistake she has made, and after a time finds herself deserted. Then the husband puts in an appearance—presumably to look after the affairs of a dead sister in whom he has never evinced the slightest interest or affection during life—and, being confronted with his wife, states that he is prepared to take her back provided she has now shaken off all the conventionality of her class and is anxious to lead a free rational life. This she can hardly promise, and with their renewed parting the curtain is rung down. What becomes of them afterwards, or how the rest of the characters fare, is not divulged. The effect on the reader can only be described as discomforting.

From the same.—'The Smithy: a Drama,' by Robert South, LL.B. Mr. South has on more than one occasion proved his ability to write thoughtful and suggestive historical dramas. His work, though deft and artistic, is hardly suitable for stage exposition: the action is too slow, the character-drawing not sufficiently clear-cut and emphatic. The action of this play takes place in Neuchâtel during the early part of the seventeenth century, when the whole town was still under the gloomy and soul-destroying influence of the dead Calvin. Brenda Vautier marries, against her father's command, an upright young man who, for mere charity's sake, succours the son of a notorious Anabaptist. This is his only offence, but it is enough to work his ruin. His fellow-citizens conspire to starve him, and he and his wife and child are reduced to want. The drama closes on a note of hope, though the hero lies dead and the father of the heroine is struck blind by lightning. Mr. South writes with dignity and power, and is seen at his best in his pathetic episodes.

From Mr. Horace Cox.—'Handy Guide to the Game Laws, with Abridgment of the Acts relating to Game,' by A Solicitor. The aim of this handbook is to place before the reader in clear and simple language the provisions of the law concerning game and wild animals generally. This object the little book well serves, and it may be commended as a serviceable and reliable guide on the subject.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'English Local Government,' by R. C. Maxwell. Seemingly all our literary sustenance has now to be taken in compressed form, but, granted the necessity, we have little but praise for the way Mr. Maxwell has prepared the bolus. He has evidently devoted himself very assiduously to the work, and the result is a little book of which he may justifiably feel proud. It is clearly written, well arranged, and wonderfully comprehensive considering the size of the volume.

From Mr. Henry S. Drane.—'Standerton Under Martial Law,' by Emily Olivia Carolin. This short story has been written by a person who does not possess even the elements of style; the spelling is wretched, the punctuation worse, and no attempt whatever is made at characterisation. The fire is 'pocked,' and estrangement is found 'not condusive to good spirites,' and letters are torn to 'shreads.' In the second chapter alone we have counted twenty-seven mistakes—many of them, no doubt, due to carelessness in the correction of the proofs. Miss Carolin was ill-advised in publishing so puerile and ridiculous a story as 'Standerton Under Martial Law.'

From the same.—'Everyday Life, by Susan Constance Logan. This novel is connected with scenes of regimental life in Lahore and family life in England. The chief personage of the story is one Colonel Allason, an Indian officer and a widower. He has an only daughter named Miriam, who, on account of her delicate health, at the age of six years he sends to England, and places her under the charge of Mr. and Mrs. Barden, of Stonyhurst, in Dorsetshire. The Colonel—finding the Indian climate unsuitable at his advancing age, and longing for the companionship of his daughter—resolves to quit that country and reside with her at a place of their own in London. He at once communicates with his only sister, Mrs. Emily Crosskeys, a widow with an only child, Louisa, requesting them to leave their home in Scotland to form a family group under the same roof. Mother and daughter duly arrive, and take their place in the Colonel's new home. After a time the combination proves disastrous, owing to the widow's inebriate propensities and Louisa's domineering ways in the household. Allason and his daughter forthwith leave London and join their friends the Bardens. Fresh interests in their lives soon arise, for Delmar Barden, an only son, a young subaltern on leave from India, gets attached to Miriam, while the Colonel solaces himself by marriage with Mrs. Andover, a widow. Subsequently Louisa is smitten with Edward Vereker, of the Indian Civil Service, and both couples are united in 'holy matrimony' and at once accompany their husbands to India. Their married happiness is, however, of brief duration, for Delmar becomes an inveterate gambler, while Louisa develops into a virago. The novel, which is written in a convincing manner, ultimately reaches a tragic close, and forms a good specimen of the realistic type of fiction.

From Mr. Henry Frowde.—'Collected Sonnets of Lloyd Mifflin.' It has been acknowledged by competent critics, both in this country and in the United States, that the author of this volume of new and selected sonnets is one of the greatest of American poets. This fine volume, issued in a suitable form, is enriched with a good photogravure portrait of the poet.

From Mr. William Heinemann. — 'Baby Bullet: the Motor of Destiny,' by Lloyd Osbourne. This is a very amusing story, brightly written, and with plenty of lively incident. We do not quite see how an American school mistress with a salary of sixty dollars per month could save enough to visit this country, but that is a mere detail, and the fact remains that she got here, accompanied by a younger and much more attractive female friend. Exploring the green lanes of England they ran across an exasperated motorist who, his patience utterly exhausted, made them a present of his machine (won at a charity bazaar) and hurriedly left the field of action. And now began the most delightful series of adventures for the ladies. Naturally the motor—at once christened Baby Bullet — was of no use except as a means of introducing them to novel experiences, but this duty it performed to admirable purpose. In the succeeding events another motorist—also an American—and his French chauffeur loom large, and the whole party are involved in a number of escapades, not forgetting love-making, which will keep the reader thoroughly interested and entertained until the close.

From the Homeland Association, Ltd.—'Woking and Ripley,' by Arthur Henry Anderson. We have on several occasions called attention to the excellence of these 'Homeland Handbooks,' and the present one, No. 42 of the series, is in all respects up to the high level of its predecessors, and this is to give it very high praise. Besides the general text it contains some interesting notes on bird life by D. W. Collings, and upon botany by Harold W. Mornington, and there are many illustrations. These books are really indispensable for residents and for all pedestrians, motorists, and wheelmen.'

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—'Organic Evolution,' by C. W. Saleeby, M.D.; 'Heredity,' by the same author. These are two interesting, if not particularly profound, expositions of highly absorbing topics. The matter in each case is set forth with a briskness far removed from the ordinary run of scientific treatises.

From Mr. John Long.—'The Carlton Classics. Under this title Mr. Long is now publishing a series of classical reprints which for neatness, convenience of size, and moderate price could scarcely be improved upon. Each little volume may be had in three varieties of binding—paper, cloth, and leather. The works which have reached us are 'Childe Harold's Pilgrimage,' by Lord Byron; 'Warren Hastings,' by Lord Macaulay; and 'The Four Georges,' by William Makepeace Thackeray; but we understand other reprints of standard works have already been published in the series. Mr. Hannaford Bennett contributes a short Bibliographic Introduction to each issue, and it may safely be said that no daintier, more artistically produced, and, let us add, cheaper series has been placed before a public ever keenly alive to the advantages of a bargain. 'John Long's Carlton Series' should achieve a tremendous success.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd., we have now received the reprints of the third and fourth editions of 'The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyám.' Each volume is introduced by a short life of the poet philosopher, and the allusions which might present any difficulty to the Western reader are explained in the notes at the end of each volume.

From Messrs. Marshall Brothers.—'St. Paul's Epistles to Thessalonica,' by Rev. Harrington C. Lees, M.A. This volume of 'Our Bible Hour Series' is a useful little book for students, considering, in various sections, the characteristics and teaching of the epistles in a clear and lucid manner. It is rather a guide than a commentary, and seeks to direct the study, without any attempt to be exhaustive. It will serve best, perhaps, as an introduction to the perusal of more ambitious works upon the subject, but it is, nevertheless, very complete in its way.

From Mr. Elkin Mathews.—'Poems,' by Post Wheeler, M.A., Litt.D. We sincerely regret we have not greater space to devote to this collection of verse. It is a volume throbbing with generous impulse and glowing passion—a volume that conveys to the reader a flush of sublime humanity, raising him above the sordid cares of life.

From the same.—'The Gods of Pegāna,' by Lord Dunsany. Lord Dunsany's volume is well suited for readers of what may be termed the mystical temperament. There is a weird, heathenish atmosphere overhanging the collection of fables that will without doubt appeal to their keenest susceptibilities. This impression is enhanced by the illustrations.

From Mr. Andrew Melrose.—'Progress and Perfecting,' by W. W. Sidey. These chapters, or sermons, built round St. Paul's utterances in Colossians ii. 6–10, are full of thought and are admirable in every way. They preach a lesson to Christians with regard to faith, thanksgiving, and the higher knowledge of Christ, in a simple yet in a most effective manner. Those who have enjoyed and reaped benefit from the author's former work, 'The Silent Christ,' will find the present one equally suggestive and equally helpful in their endeavours to lay hold of those essentials which are necessary to Christian discipleship.

From Mr. John Murray.—'Home Reunion, Reflections on the Present Position of Nonconformists, and an Appeal for a Better Mutual Understanding.' By the Earl Nelson. The views advocated on this important question have long engaged the attention of earnest Christian men. This book is the result of a fresh endeavour to reach the desired consummation of unity among the ministers and members of the Church of Christ.

From the same.—'From December to December, the Day Book of Melisande.' There is a distinct charm about this ideal diary. The subjects frequently commented upon by this thoughtful writer comprise Art, Literature, Music, Religion, and the less impressive things of life.

From Mr. Eveleigh Nash.—'The Third Kiss,' by Herbert Flowerdew. We have found Mr. Flowerdew's novel a little mystifying, to say which is perhaps the greatest compliment we can pay it, since it indicates that the interest is sufficiently substantial to carry the reader to the end of the book in the hope of elucidation. A young gentleman of a volatile, happy-go-lucky disposition—certainly blessed with all the world's advantages that conduce to such a fortunate condition—goes abroad in quest avowedly of a wife. His progress is followed with close attention by two people at home, a man and a woman. The man is in love with the woman, but is strangely oblivious to the fact that her interest in the doings of the boy on the Continent is dictated by other reasons than those of simple friendship. Eventually, after giving him every cause to come to an opposite conclusion, she shows where her heart really lies, and with the sacrifice of the elder man the story ends. The author has rather played fast and loose with his reader, but his story is undeniably interesting, and, despite a certain artificiality of tone, should find favour with the fiction-loving public.

From the same.—'The Flight of Georgiana,' by R. N. Stephens. Romance is strongly to the fore in this novel, and little is lost in the treatment accorded to the various events by the author. A chance meeting of man and maid during the exciting times following Culloden, and the train is laid for as pretty a series of love traffickings as could possibly be imagined. Ultimately the gallant is made prisoner by the wicked uncle and stands in sore danger of losing his life, but in the nick of time a way of escape opens out and Romeo makes a dash for the open, taking his sweetheart on horseback before him. But his risks are by no means yet over. Strangely enough, he unknowingly steers for the house of a rival, where by pure courage he gains the day. The story is vigorously written, and has many good points. The illustrations are quite in sympathy with the narrative, though not over well drawn.

From Mr. David Nutt—'The Russian Empire and Czarism,' by Victor Berard, translated by G. Fox-Davies and G. O. Pope, with an Introduction by Frederick Greenwood. One of the most important phases of contemporary history is that embodied in this volume—namely, the growth of the Imperial Russian Empire and her relations with neighbour nations. Mons. Bérard, the gifted French author, has dealt with his theme in a lucid and comprehensive manner, and the work is one to be commended to the attention of thoughtful English readers.

From the Religious Tract Society.—'A Trooper of the Finns,' by Tom Bevan. This is a tale of the Thirty Years' War, and boys are likely to be delighted with it. The hero, Harry Hampden, is as manly a youth as could be desired, and the little Prince Rupert plays a prominent part in the story. It is full of incident from beginning to end, and the characters are exceedingly well drawn. We have thoroughly enjoyed the book, and have somehow conceived a sneaking liking for the villain, Count Radzay. The author has contrived to make him, in spite of all his faults, a real man, and in Kronberg Schloss he is almost an angel beside Father Clement and the terrible little Brother Simon. The book does not lack a love story, and the illustrations are good.

From the same.—'The Adventures of Val Daintry,' by V. L. Going. This is another capital boy's story, and if, even among English lads, it might be difficult to find one quite as fearless and capable as the hero, it is a good thing sometimes to be presented with a high ideal. It is a tale of the Græco-Turkish war, and, after some surprising adventures and escapes from Turkish soldiers and brigands, Daintry and his friend Ion manage to save the 'Marathon' from being blown up. This leads to a commission in the Irregulars for Daintry, and through much fighting and some wonderful exploits on the part of the boy hero, we are given a very good history of the war, and incidentally the boy finds his long lost father. The book may be recommended as an excellent gift to a healthy lad. The illustrations are not so good as they might be.

From the same.—'The Brigands' Prey,' by A. M. Jackson. This story concerns the doings of Philip Wilmot and Dick Seymour, first among brigands and then among slave dealers. The probabilities are somewhat strained perhaps, but altogether the book makes very good reading and the characters of the boys are well developed. The revolt of the cargo of slaves is very well told, if somewhat gruesome, and we rather resent the fact that the arch villain finds a comparatively easy death.

From the same.—'Cyril's Quest,' by Annie Gray. Hal Hazelton, to better the fortunes of the family, goes to Argentina, and when he is not heard of for some months his twin brother Cyril goes to look for him. The travels and adventures occur in the land of the Incas, always a fascinating region, and, incidentally, many historical facts are told concerning this ancient people. There is a strong religious purpose in the book, and the actual story is by no means uninteresting.

From Mr. Alston Rivers.—'A Captain of Men,' by E. Anson More. This romance deals with Assyrian life in 1058 B.C., and is the work of an American author. The story is mainly historical, its principal personage being Merodach, the Babylonian, and a captain of horse in the Assyrian army accompanying Asshur-ab-aram, a usurper and an uninvited guest of Hiram, King of Tyre. The conflicting interests of the tale are skilfully set forth, and relate in a measure to an attachment formed by Merodach for Miriam, a Hebrew slave to a merchant of that city, while he is ambitious also of occupying the throne of Assyria. Merodach then departs on an adventurous quest, prompted thereto by the Tyrian king, but afterwards fraught with great danger to himself and his followers. This gives rise to many striking episodes that are well depicted. The combination and picturesque grouping of the varied characters represented by the author are such that we are loth to forgo their acquaintance at the close of the book. The romance is one that should be readily appreciated by most readers of current fiction.

From the same.—'In Desert Keeping,' by Edmund Mitchell. Mrs. Estees might have kept her guilty secret for ever had it not been for the awkward and unwelcome appearance of her former lover at her home in California. Howard's presence did not, however, trouble her long, for Kit Estees, learning of his aforetime intimacy with his wife, murdered him at the first opportunity. The murderer escaped the arm of the law for some time, but his guilt was eventually discovered and he was apprehended. From this point onward the interest of the book wanes, and were it not for the author's character drawing it would have been a somewhat wearisome task to finish the story

Mr. Mitchell writes well and easily, but his style is lacking in grip and force.

From the Walter Scott Publishing Co., Ltd. —'In Nelson's Day,' by John G. Rowe. It is quite evident that 'Trafalgar' year will have more than a passing influence on the book world, for we have already received many books relating to the prowess and valour of Nelson and his subordinates, while others are promised. The present one is a good specimen of the boy's story, having for its background the eventful years when George III. was king and the Navy was the theme of earnest talk in English homesteads. Harry Yaxley, the hero of this romance of the sea, displays at all times the daring and pluck ascribed to those who were England's boast at this anxious time. The author gives us some exciting descriptions of the piratical and smuggling fraternity whose rule was so prevalent, as well as a forcible depiction of the memorable battle off Cape St. Vincent, in which our hero is engaged and in which he gallantly saves the Admiral's life. The romance is brought to a fitting close by a narration of the stern struggle on board the battleship 'Victory,' in Trafalgar's Bay, and the subsequent scene in which our famous Admiral reached the end of his career. The volume contains a number of illustrations throughout the text, and a portrait of Nelson for a frontispiece.

From Messrs. Seeley & Co., Ltd.—'His Most Dear Ladye: a Story of Mary, Countess of Pembroke, sister of Sir Philip Sidney,' by Beatrice Marshall. Miss Marshall has inherited (or possibly cultivated) much of the gift possessed by her mother, the late Mrs. Marshall, as regards a pleasant, easy flowing style, and in her present story this is very attractively apparent. The narrative is scarcely one of thrilling adventure, but for those who prefer the quieter pathways of fiction it will provide very agreeable entertainment. There are illustrations.

From Messrs. Skeffington & Son.—'Woman Disposes: the Psychology of an Experiment,' by Leoline Phillips. This in some respects is a very clever novel, though it fails of definite success. Perhaps the chief cause of shortage is the author's inability to deal effectively with the material at his command. Greater experience will strengthen his powers. As it is, this story of man's endeavour and woman's influence is by no means without interest.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—'The Difficult Way,' by Mabel Dearmer. This novel principally relates to the experiences of the Rev. John Pilgrim and his wife Nan, living in a squalid neighbourhood of South London. The vicar's noble and self-sacrificing efforts for the social and spiritual welfare of his poor parishioners is convincingly told. The story is well written, the characters dramatically conceived, and the various incidents create a vivid impression.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'Renunciation, by Dorothy Summers. The central idea is a powerful one. Dare Thorpe, an all-round athlete and generally known as 'Beauty Thorpe,' is first introduced to us as playing the winning innings for Oxford at the 'Varsity match at Lords. Later he becomes acquainted with Lady Iris Ireton by rescuing her from the attentions of a terribly deformed tramp. An unaccountable horror of deformity is characteristic of the heroine, and when, long afterwards, Dare Thorpe is seized with creeping paralysis he hides himself from the woman he loves rather than let her know of his deformity, and the story ends on a tragic note. Lady Iris is more or less bound by an eccentric will to marry her cousin Jack Forde, and is also loved by Lord Borrowdale. The latter plays an important part in the story, and is portrayed with some skill. The heroine's position in the early part of the book, however, is somewhat confused. She certainly owes nothing to her wretched mother Lady Wrenford, and the difficulties in the way of her loving Dare Thorpe are not very easy to follow. As the book proceeds the story is told with much more directness and increases in interest, and the final catastrophe is excellently worked up. Indeed, the book just misses being a very notable novel. Something is lacking—it may be experience—but the author shows that she is possessed of considerable power, and her work is much above the average. We shall open another work from her pen with the greatest confidence.

From Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd.—'A Maker of History,' by E. Phillips Oppenheim. This is as good as anything Mr. Oppenheim has given us. Mystery and high diplomacy go hand-in-hand. An English youth, travelling for pleasure, becomes unknowingly eye-witness of a meeting between two of the greatest monarchs in Europe, and becomes possessed accidentally of a piece of paper for the secret recovery of which a million pounds is offered. So a secret and mysterious battle rages round the youth, who suddenly disappears; directly afterwards his sister, who has gone to Paris to meet him, also disappears. To the rescue first one and then another Englishman, only to find that some mysterious power hems them round and eventually drives them back to England. In the end, incidentally the Baltic Fleet incident is explained to us—the youth finds that he has, without knowing or understanding anything about it, been a maker of history. There is a good love interest running through the story; noble names and motor-cars, murder and robbery, are intermixed, for the secret service stops at nothing; and the whole is so well told, and the interest so unflagging, that we should be glad to have more.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Ltd.—'A Village Mystery,' by Mrs. Coulson Kernahan. The framework of this novel is not very substantial, and the mystery might well have concerned something more terrifying than the identity of a miser and his supposed treasure casket. But Mrs. Kernahan has imparted to her narrative a fluency of description, combined with what may be termed 'doggy' effects, which will effectively tide the reader over to the conclusion.

NEW EDITIONS, &c.—The De La More Press have sent out an extremely handsome, well printed copy of 'The Young Duke,' by the Earl of Beaconsfield, being a further issue in their 'Centenary Edition' of that author's earlier works. The volume is supplied with an interesting Biographical Introduction and notes by Mr. Lucien Wolf, and contains a capital portrait of Disraeli from the picture at Hughenden by Chalon.—From Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co. we have received a copy of their new and revised edition, constituting the twentieth thousand, of Sir Richard Tangye's interesting work on 'The Rise of a Great Republic,' which it is needless to say refers largely to the iron trade. —Following on their small handy edition of 'Rabelais' Messrs. Gibbings have now issued, in similar form and equally well printed and neatly bound, the 'Religio Medici and other Essays' of Sir Thomas Browne. A short Introduction supplies some necessary details in reference to the author's life.—From Messrs. George Routledge & Sons we have to acknowledge receipt of 'The Newspaper Reader's Companion,' an invaluable dictionary in pocket form of political and social terms. It has been compiled by Mr. Albert M. Hyamson, to whom the thanks of all newspaper readers, so frequently at a loss as to the exact meaning of a term or expression, should be heartily awarded. Messrs. Seeley & Co. have issued a new edition, with fifty illustrations, of 'Oxford,' by Andrew Lang. The author discourses pleasantly and with learning of 'The Town before the University,' 'The Early Students,' 'The Renaissance and the Reformation,' 'Jacobean Oxford,' 'Some Scholars of the Restoration,' 'High Tory Oxford,' 'Georgian Oxford,' and 'Poets at Oxford' (Shelley and Landor), concluding with 'A General View' and some observations on 'Undergraduate Life.' The volume, both in the matter of its contents and handsome 'get-up,' is one of great attraction.—A very neat, artistically bound edition of 'Hans Andersen's Tales,' translated by H. Oskar Sommer, with pictures by Arthur J. Gaskin, comes to us from Mr. George Allen. The thin paper which has been used enables the tales to be published in very compact form, and a more convenient, presentable edition we do not remember to have met with.—A new edition of 'The Procession of Life,' a powerful novel by Horace Annesley Vachell, has been published by Mr. Eveleigh Nash. The book may confidently be recommended.—'Topsy's Travels and Adventures,' the history of a little toy terrier, told with infinite sympathy by Isabel Wortley, has been published in a second edition by Messrs. Jarrold & Sons. The book is illustrated from photographs.—From Mr. John Lane we have received 'Alroy,' 'Popanilla,' 'Count Alarcos,' 'Ixion in Heaven,' by the Ear of Beaconsfield, with an Introduction by thel Earl of Iddesleigh, being Volume XXXI. of the 'New Pocket Library.'—A popular sixpenny edition of 'The Jade Eye,' by Fergus Hume, as rich a feast of sensationalism as the most satiated fiction reader could desire, has reached us from Mr. John Long.

From Messrs. S. H. Bousfield & Co. we have received a copy of Mrs. De Horne Vaizey's story, 'How Like the King,' which proved successful in gaining the one hundred pounds prize in the recent Daily Mail competion. It relates to an imaginary weekend stay of the king at Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gwynne's residence, with the many incidents that take place, related by the author in a most original manner.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

Magazines for our Bluejackets

The Editor of the 'Publishers' Circular' begs to remind Publishers of Magazines and Cheap Literature that parcels made up from 'Returns,' or other unsaleable stock, which are sent CARRIAGE PAID to

Miss AGNES E. WESTON,
Royal Sailors' Rest,
Portsmouth,

are forwarded, free of charge for freight, to H.M. Ships on Foreign Stations in all parts of the world, and are considered a very great boon by our Bluejackets.

The Editor of the 'Publishers' Circular' feels sure that many Publishers of Magazines will be glad to know that at a small expenditure for carriage of parcels to Portsmouth such great delight can be distributed all over the world to the crews of our ships of war.

FIRST LARGE EDITION EXHAUSTED ON SUBSCRIPTION.
SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

AYESHA. 6s.

THE RETURN OF SHE.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD.

With 32 Full-page Illustrations by MAURICE GREIFFENHAGEN.

The BYSTANDER: 'One of the weirdest and most thrilling stories ever written. The reader will not lay the book down until he has read it from cover to cover.'

The DAILY GRAPHIC: 'It can and does do what no other writer now living can do: it can create for us a fairy world of passion and romance so vivid as to be almost real. To this end it is helped by Mr. Greiffenhagen's brilliantly clever illustrations.'

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DR. NIKOLA,' &c.

FOR LOVE OF HER. 5s.

By GUY BOOTHBY.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH: 'Mr. Guy Boothby's name on the title-page of a novel carries with it the assurance of a good story to follow. In the confection of tales of exciting adventure he is not excelled by any novelist of the day.'

The ABERDEEN FREE PRESS: 'It is marvellous that Mr. Boothby's novels should all be so uniformly good.'

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM.

BLACK AND WHITE: 'Mr. Oppenheim will bear comparison, not only with himself, but with the most ingenious of his contemporaries. Indeed, in my opinion, he is the most admirable inventor and solver of mysteries now writing in England. In "A Maker of History" his many talents have full play.'

The DAILY EXPRESS: 'Mr. Oppenheim is one of my favourites. I always enjoy this author, but I never enjoyed him more than in "A Maker of History."'

THE PILLAR OF LIGHT. 6s.

By LOUIS TRACY.

The EVENING STANDARD: 'So admirable, so living, so breathlessly exciting a book. The magnificent realism of the lighthouse and its perils, the intense conviction of the author, brings the very scene he pictures before the reader's eyes with hardly a line of detached description; the interest of the terrible dilemma of the cut-off inhabitants of the Pillar are worthy of praise from the most jaded reader.'

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE GARDEN OF LIES' &c.

TOMMY CARTERET. 6s.

By JUSTUS MILES FORMAN.

The BIRMINGHAM POST: 'Rarely do we get a novel of such high quality and powerful dramatic interest as this.'

THE WAYS OF OUR RAILWAYS

By CHARLES H. GRINLING.

Superbly Illustrated with 200 Photographs and Technical Diagrams.

MORNING LEADER.—'It is A PERFECT MINE OF REFERENCE. Mr. Grinling has made a delightful book, and it is a real achievement. It tells us everything we are capable of understanding about Railways, and he has succeeded in keeping it absolutely free from technicalities. Just the sort of book that people ought to keep. Full of amazing facts and figures.'

AN OUTLANDER IN ENGLAND: Impressions of an Australian in England.

By J. H. M. ABBOTT, Author of 'Tommy Cornstalk,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

A series of impressions of England and the English from an Australian point of view. Its interest for English readers lies in the fact that it presents a view of their country and its conditions which is impossible from an interior standpoint.

THE LIFE OF CHARLES LAMB. By E. V. Lucas. With numerous Portraits and Illustrations. Second Edition. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 21*s.* net.

'Lamb has found a biographer after his own heart from one of his own best pupils.'—Times.

MADAME GEOFFRIN, HER SALON AND HER TIMES. By Janet Aldis. With many Portraits and Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

A picture of a famous salon and of society in the last years of the reign of Louis XV., the close of the courtly days of the 'Old Régime.'

'A sympathetic and eminently interesting contribution to the literature of the period. A generally charming record.'—East Anglian Times.

'Many stirring incidents and a wealth of anecdote are to be found in this absorbingly interesting book.'—Sussex Daily News.

MARY STUART. By Florence MacCunn. With over 40 Illustrations, including a Frontispiece in Photogravure. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

'The author has not space enough for controversy, but exhibits complete balance of judgment. Her narrative is vivid and avoids rhetorical pursuit of the picturesque. She is extremely sympathetic, but she is entirely free from the credulity into which sympathy is apt to run.'
Athenæum.

'The story has been told a thousand times, but none is better or fresher than this latest version. The charm of the book is its womanly insight and more than womanly compassion.'
Liverpool Post.

OLD OAK FURNITURE. By F. Roe. With many Illustrations by the Author, including a Frontispiece in Colour. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

'A volume which is sorely needed.'—Daily Mail.

JANE AUSTEN AND HER ENGLAND. By G. E. Mitton. With many Portraits and Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

A biography of Jane Austen and a picture of the society of her time.

'A very full and complete study of the authoress and her surroundings.'—Globe.

'The careful studies of the novels and the excellent sketches of English life a hundred years ago give Miss Mitton's book a distinct value of its own.'—Liverpool Courier.

'Valuable and entertaining.'—Daily Telegraph.

THE PSALMS OF DAVID. With a Commentary by W. F. Cobb, D.D. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

'The author has amply achieved his aim, and there is scarcely a page on which some fresh and fruitful suggestion may not be found.'—Scotsman.

THE LIFE OF WALT WHITMAN. By H. B. Binns. With Portraits and Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

In this volume the author endeavours to portray one of the most striking figures of modern times, and gathers up the biographical information scattered through the pages of works which are inaccessible to the ordinary reader.

ENGLAND UNDER THE TUDORS. By A. D. Innes. With Maps. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

This is the fourth volume, but the second volume to be published, of the new History of England under Prof. Oman's editorship.

MASTER WORKERS. By Harold Begbie. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

This book describes the methods, outlook, and views on work of many distinguished personalities—e.g. His Majesty the King, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., General Booth, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. John Morley, Mr. G. F. Watts, Earl Roberts, &c.

'His sympathy is catholic; his judgments are acute; his observation is keen; his verdicts are generous and humane. This is a book of character and individuality.'—Daily Mail.

'Altogether admirable.'—Sussex Daily News.

THOMAS GAINSBOROUGH: his Life, Times, Work, Sitters, and Friends. By William B. Boulton. With 40 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

This work is a full treatment of the life and work of the great painter, whose remarkable personality, eminence as a painter, and the picturesque character of whose times and acquaintances together provide a subject of great interest.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS. By W. B. Boulton. With 49 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

'The picturesque eighteenth century lives from the beginning to the end. It has the charm of its subject, and all is in keeping.'—Daily Graphic.

THE ROYAL FORESTS OF ENGLAND. By J. C. Cox, LL.D., F.S.A. With many Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net. [The Antiquary's Books.

'Here is a treasure-house of antiquarian learning. Here, too, is a store of curious information on the woodcraft that Shakespeare and his fathers knew so well.'—Outlook.

NATURE IN EASTERN NORFOLK: a Series of Observations on the Birds, Fishes, Mammals, Reptiles, and Stalk-eyed Crustaceans found in that Neighbourhood, with a List of the Species. By A. H. Patterson. With 12 Illustrations in Colour by Frank Southgate. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

THE RIVIERA. By S. Baring-Gould. With many Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

Uniform with Mr. Baring-Gould's well-known books on Devon, Cornwall, Dartmoor, Brittany, &c.

A WANDERER IN HOLLAND. By E. V. Lucas. With many Illustrations, of which 20 are in Colour, by Herbert Marshall. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

'If the success of a book of travels is to be measured by the travel fever it excites in the veins of its readers, this volume should have a warm welcome. Dull of spirit must he be who, skimming its pleasant pages, does not feel himself moved to follow in the "Wanderer's" footsteps. It is the gaiety of our author, his simple pleasure in things seen and everything that delights the average man, which makes him so thoroughly agreeable a travelling companion.'—Athenæum.

'Every chapter sparkles with delicate fun; it is alive with wise interest.'—Times.

DAN LENO: his Life and Achievements. By J. Hickory Wood. With many Illustrations. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

'The author has carried out his task with a sympathy and ability which makes the book good reading from the opening page to the conclusion: and it is enriched with many photographs and drawings, which will make the incomparable humorist alive again in the memory.'—Daily News.

THE CITIES OF UMBRIA. By Edward Hutton. With many Illustrations, of which 20 are in Colour, by A. Pisa. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

'A series of literary impressions by a lover of Italy and of her people, a true poet in prose. Praise must be given to the splendid illustrations by Mr. Pisa.'—Daily Mail.

THE BIBLE AND CHRISTIAN LIFE: being Addresses and Sermons. By Walter Lock, D.D., Warden of Keble College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

This volume attempts to prove the permanent claim of the Bible to be an inspired book and a guide to life.

'Thoughtful and suggestive.'—Glasgow Herald.

RICHES AND POVERTY. By L. G. Chiozza Money. Demy 8vo. 5*s.* net.

A fascinating study of the wealth and poverty of the United Kingdom.

'Mr. Money is a master of figures, and he understands the facts that lie behind them.'
Morning Leader.

'The book teems with statistics, and yet it contains not one dull or uninteresting page.'
Daily News.

UP ALONG AND DOWN ALONG. By Eden Phillpotts. Illustrated by Claude Shepperson. Crown 8vo. 5*s.* net.

A volume of poems.

SEA LIFE IN NELSON'S TIME. By John Masefield. With many Illustrations. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

'A wonderful picture of sea life a hundred years ago. It is clear, strong, live work, every line of it.'—Daily News.

'A book which every grown-up Englishman should read and every English boy should possess and keep.'—Daily Telegraph.

ENGLISH LOVE POEMS. Edited, with an Introduction, by Edward Hutton. Fcap. 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

'A charming anthology . . . . all of gold.'—Daily Graphic.

'An exquisite and fragrant garland; a volume to keep close at hand.'—T. P.'s Weekly.

'It would be difficult to name a living writer whose works have exerted a deeper and a wider influence over the special range of thought and activity with which they are concerned, than have those of Captain Mahan. . . . It is in all respects worthy to rank on the same level as its predecessors.'—TIMES.

'This latest contribution is marked by all the author's characteristic painstaking, and will rank as the standard work on the subject—full in its detail, impartial in its judgments, and historically correct.'—DAILY TELEGRAPH.

'Captain Mahan has written a great book. . . . The work of an authority, impartial, expert, and informed, it is therefore final.'
DAILY CHRONICLE.

SEA POWER IN ITS RELATIONS TO THE WAR OF 1812.

By Capt. A. T. MAHAN, D.C.L., LL.D.

Captain Mahan presents in a series of vivid pictures the stirring events of the war, the points of single ship fights and squadron actions, giving due attention to the strategic interest of campaigns on the land and the diplomacy of the time.

'A fitting termination to his great work on the "Influence of Sea Power on History." His writings belong to the world.'
DAILY GRAPHIC.

'His impartiality will command confidence. . . . Abounding as they do in instruction.'—GLOBE.

'Captain Mahan's illuminating Book. . . . There is instruction and warning in plenty for the present generation in Captain Mahan's two great volumes.'—DAILY MAIL.

'Will maintain the reputation its author already possesses as the first naval writer and thinker in the world.'—WESTERN MORNING NEWS.

'The book is a highly instructive and engrossing one, and will throw considerable light on operations the importance of which has hitherto been but feebly understood on either side of the Atlantic. . . . It deserves to take a high position amongst treatises on military and naval history.'

THE MAGAZINE OF FINE ARTS

An Illustrated Review of the Fine and Decorative Arts of Other Days.

A New Art Magazine. (Next Week.)

Messrs. GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., beg to announce that they will shortly issue a new high-class monthly illustrated Magazine which will be devoted exclusively to the Fine and Decorative Arts of Past Times.

Scope of the Magazine.

THE Magazine will deal with every phase of the Arts and Crafts of other days; and in order that the articles may be as reliable and instructive as possible, the services of the leading British and Foreign experts have been engaged to treat the subjects of which they have made a special study.

Numerous Illustrations.

VERY particular attention will be paid to the illustrations, of which a large number will be given with each Part, and all the most successful modern reproductive processes will be employed to make them as attractive as possible.

The Supplemental Plates.

AN important feature of the new Magazine will be the numerous Supplemental Plates, a considerable proportion of which will take the form of facsimile reproductions in colours.

For Men and Women of Education.

EVERY ONE now recognises the essentially just claims of the best Art of past times to be placed on terms of equality with the best Literature of the past in the equipment of a man or woman of education, and The Magazine of Fine Arts will appeal to the educated man and woman because it will deal attractively, and at the same time efficiently, with the greatest Art the world has produced.

A Magazine for Collectors.

COLLECTORS of objects that owe their interest to artistic rather than to merely archæological qualities will find in The Magazine of Fine Arts much valuable information upon widely varying topics, supplied in every case by fully recognised authorities.

Invaluable to Art Students.

TO Art students The Magazine of Fine Arts will bring carefully reproduced and printed illustrations of the finest examples of every aspect of the Art of the Great Masters, as well as reproductions of the best examples of the best periods of design, which will be invaluable to them in the pursuit of their studies.

THE MAGAZINE OF FINE ARTS will be published at ONE SHILLING NET.

CENTENARY OF THE FIRM OF F. A. BROCKHAUS, OF LEIPZIG.

At the recent celebration of the centenary of the foundation of the universally respected firm of Brockhaus, of Leipzig, Dr. Erich Ehlermann, of Dresden, in presenting an address, pointed out some interesting facts in connection with the firm. Referring to the present greatly esteemed President of the German Booksellers' Association, Herr Albert Brockhaus, he said it did not often happen that at celebrations of this kind the present owners of the business were the direct descendants of the founder. After acknowledging the great services of their President to their Union and to the book trade generally, he begged him, in the name of the Union of German Booksellers, to accept an address worded as follows:—

'In celebration of the Centenary of the founding of the firm

'F. A. Brockhaus.
'To the Senior of the House,
'Herrn Dr. Eduard Brockhaus.
'And to the Partners in the Firm,
'Herren Albert Brockhaus
and
Dr. Fritz Brockhaus.

'The Union of German Booksellers present their heartiest congratulations.

'The significance of this celebration extends far beyond book-trade circles.

'Thanks to the greatness of its business undertakings, the firm of F. A. Brockhaus has become an important factor in the intellectual life of Germany. Its directors for four generations have understood how to serve its own interests by putting their tireless energy and well directed abilities at the service of science and art, and at the service of the true progress and best interests of the country.

'The Union of German Booksellers, who can count so many members of the name of Brockhaus in their ranks, wish, especially on this day, to acknowledge how much the Union and the book trade generally owe to the fruitful labours of these members.

'At the beginning of the nineteenth century, in the front rank of those who were fighting for the protection of intellectual property and the freedom of the press, stood Friedrich Arnold Brockhaus, the founder of the firm.

'His successors have aided greatly in the further organisation of the book trade in Germany and in the interests of copyright and other literary rights.

'It was Dr. Eduard Brockhaus who in 1888, with Adolf Kröner and Franz Wagner and other members of the Council of the Union, headed the movement in the sharp trade fight to maintain the retail price.

'And to-day, with feelings of the highest esteem and gratitude, we acknowledge that it is chiefly to the great services of our President, Herr Albert Brockhaus, that the German book trade has come victoriously out of the hard battles of these later years and now stands near the desired goal.

'So while looking back with joy and gratitude at the past, we are also full of confidence and hope that in the future the coming generations of the house of Brockhaus will maintain its honourable and noble traditions. May the firm of Brockhaus flourish and grow, as a blessing both for its members and for the German book trade, as worthy representatives of German assiduity, German ability, and German culture.

'Leipzig: October 15, 1905.

of German Booksellers.'

If prophets have no honour in their own countries it is pleasant to find that publishers have. Herr Albert Brockhaus, the present head of the German book trade, and his house are so well known and esteemed in English book-trade circles that it is a great pleasure to us to be able to say that we are authorised by the President of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, Mr. Reginald J. Smith, K.C., and by the President of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland, Alderman Henry W. Keay, to state that they heartily join us and our German confrères in good wishes for the welfare and prosperity of the firm of Brockhaus.

THE TIMES AND THE NET BOOK SYSTEM.

In another part of the Publishers' Circular will be found some interesting correspondence on the above subject. We are glad to see that the Publishers' Association and the Booksellers' Association are taking joint action in their mutual interests.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Messrs. Longmans & Co. will issue on Monday next a book by Mr. W. H. Wilkins, which will be entitled 'Mrs. Fitzherbert and George IV.' In it will be told, in a more complete form than has been possible hitherto, the story of Mrs. Fitzherbert's connection with the Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.). Maria Fitzherbert (1756-1837), a Roman Catholic lady of good birth, privately married George Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.) in 1785. She separated from him in 1795, when he married Caroline of Brunswick. She returned to him in 1800 by permission of her Church. She finally separated from him in 1811, and died in 1837, a few months before the accession of Queen Victoria. Her marriage was twice denied in the House of Commons, and never publicly acknowledged during her life. This book, which is written with the approval and assistance of the descendants of Mrs. Fitzherbert's family and friends, gives the text of the documents which Mrs. Fitzherbert reserved in 1833 for the purpose of proving her marriage. These materials are now published for the first time by special permission of his Majesty the King, and place the fact beyond doubt. The book will also contain a large number of other unpublished papers and letters of great interest.

The Plays and Poems of Robert Greene will be issued immediately by the Clarendon Press in two volumes uniform with the Oxford editions of Kyd and Lyly. The editor is Professor J. Churton Collins, who has spared no pains to make this edition, so far at least as the text is concerned, the final one of Greene's works. In an Appendix to 'Orlando Furioso' is given a complete transcript—a section in collotype—of a MS. of great interest and importance. The notes have been made as full as possible to illustrate the characteristics of the early Elizabethan drama.

Messrs. Hodges, Figgis & Co. (Dublin), announce, under the title 'A Patriot's Mistake,' a remarkable work, being Reminiscences of the Parnell family. It is written by the great Irish leader's sister, and reveals with pathetic candour many facts concerning the late Charles Stewart Parnell which have not hitherto been known to any but his immediate family. The same publishers have nearly ready 'Forgotten Facts of Irish History,' by John Roche Ardill, LL.D. Also a volume of sermons by the well-known preacher, Canon Carmichael, LL.D.

Mrs. Baillie-Saunders's 'Saints in Society,' the prize-winner in Mr. Unwin's First Novel Competition, is now in its seventh impression.

The Right Hon. George Wyndham, M.P., has in the press a volume on Ronsard, the famous French poet of the sixteenth century. Its full title is 'Ronsard and La Pléiade.' It contains an estimate of the influence of Ronsard and his companions on the Renaissance movement, and examples of Ronsard's verse, with some translations into the original metres, are interspersed throughout the narrative. Messrs. Macmillan will publish the book shortly.

Messrs. Greening & Co. inform us that 'the late Edith Allonby's book, "The Fulfilment," is now in the printer's hands and will be published on December 1, the date desired by the authoress in her last letter, it being her birthday. The question as to whether the book should be given to the world has been the subject of anxious consideration by the dead girl's relatives. However, it has now been decided to fulfil her last wish as far as possible.'

The character of Christmas and other gift-books has changed so much that it is a matter of general interest to learn that Mr. Walter Crane has been busy with the preparation of another of his art books in colour for the Christmas season, which Messrs. Cassell & Co. will shortly publish. Under the title of 'A Flower Wedding'—the happy pair are 'Miss Meadow-Sweet' and 'Lad's Love'—he has produced a series of drawings that are likely to be widely appreciated for their design, colour, and fancifulness. The best known wild flowers have been adapted to the forms of wedding guests. Mr. Crane's skill in this direction has long been established, and is exemplified in such works as 'Flora's Feast,' 'A Masque of Days,' and 'Queen Summer,' which have been accorded a wide welcome both at home and abroad.

On November 13 Mr. Unwin will publish a volume by Lord Hindlip on 'British East Africa: Past, Present, and Future.'

Herr Bruno Conrad has another of his interesting articles on the English Book Trade in the Börsenblatt for November 1. This time it is on 'The Lending Libraries of London,' including some of the new schemes.

Mr. John Morgan Richards is shortly publishing his autobiography with Mr. Werner Laurie. The title is 'With John Bull and Jonathan: Reminiscences of Sixty Years of an American's Life in England and the United States.' This autobiography of the doyen of the American colony in London should prove of more than usual interest.

Mr. C. Clark Burman, of Alnwick, has a collection of books on angling for sale.

The Religious Tract Society publish a neat pocket-book in leather cover, with pencil, texts for every day in the year, and much useful general information.

A volume of poems of the West Country by Dr. Eden Phillpotts was published by Messrs. Methuen on the 9th, entitled 'Up Along and Down Along,' illustrated with eight original lithographs by Mr. Claude Shepperson.

Messrs. Macmillan have arranged to publish towards the end of the year a philosophical volume by Mr. Henry Sturt, editor of Personal Idealism, and a representative of the new school of pragmatism at Oxford. Its title will be 'Idola Theatri,' and it will analyse the causes that have stood in the way of philosophical progress at the university, and will offer suggestions for future development.

On November 13 Mr. Unwin is publishing Mrs. Archibald Little's new book, 'Round About my Peking Garden.' The author describes it as 'a tribute to a time of dalliance in one of China's many pleasant places,' and it contains much description of walks and excursions in and round the Chinese capital. The book is illustrated with a coloured frontispiece and more than ninety illustrations, mostly from photographs by the author.

Mr. Ballard's book on Haeckel's 'Monism' is nearly ready. It will be published by the Methodist Publishing House.

Mr. Elliot Stock will publish about the middle of November a new work by Mr. J. C. Wright entitled 'In the Good Old Times.' It will show the changes that have taken place in the social, industrial, and moral condition of England during the last century and a half.

A new edition of Mr. Marion Crawford's 'Rulers of the South' is about to be published under a new title and in a single volume. In its new form it will be called 'Sicily and Southern Italy.' It will contain the illustrations that appeared in the two-volume work, and in style it will be uniform with the author's well-known 'Ave Roma Immortalis.'

The new volume of Messrs. Macmillan & Co.'s attractive 'Cranford' series will be Thackeray's 'Esmond,' with illustrations by Mr. Hugh Thomson. The book will be ready very soon, and should take a high place among the illustrated gift-books of the season.

Mr. George Allen has nearly ready a work entitled 'Venetian Sermons drawn from the History, Art, Laws, and Customs of Venice,' by the Rev. Alexander Robertson, D.D. It will have 71 illustrations from local subjects, and form a companion volume to the author's 'Bible of St. Mark.'

We are glad to learn from the Bookman that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has returned to his most congenial field. He has written a new historical romance in the manner of his best book, the 'White Company,' under the title 'Sir Nigel.' The story will appear serially in the Strand Magazine, and will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.

Dr. Fitchett has written a serial story for the Wesleyan Methodist Magazine for 1906 which will be eagerly read. It borrows its title, 'Ithuriel's Spear,' from Milton, who describes Ithuriel's mission to detect Satan in Paradise. The angel finds him as a toad whispering evil thoughts into the ear of Eve.

Two illustrated books have just been published by the Methodist Publishing House, 'Rambles in Bible Lands' and Mr. Lodge's 'Book of Birds.'

'The Rise of the Quakers,' the volume in the 'Eras of Nonconformity' series (National Free Church Council) which narrates the history of the Society of Friends, is already in its second edition.

We understand that Messrs. James Maclehose & Sons' edition of Kaempfer's 'Japan' will not be issued before the beginning of next year.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of 'The Queen's Poor,' by Miss M. Loane, which has recently been published by Mr. Edward Arnold.

Sir Ian Hamilton has written an account of his experiences while British Military Attaché during the Russo-Japanese War, which, under the title of 'A Staff Officer's Scrap-Book,' will be published by Mr. Edward Arnold at the end of next week. It cannot fail to be of the greatest interest.

'The Conflict of Ideals in the English Church' is the title of Canon Knox Little's new volume which Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., are publishing on November 20. Canon Knox Little is universally acknowledged to be one of the most eloquent preachers in the English Church. He holds, indeed, a unique place as a master of assemblies.

The reading public has waited long for a biography of James Anthony Froude, one of the most brilliant historians of the nineteenth century. Such a book is now announced for immediate publication by Sir Isaac Pitman & Son, Ltd. The author is Mr. Herbert Paul, whose qualifications for his task are indisputable. The fact that there is a promise of much fresh light being thrown on Froude's services to English literature, and many obscure points in his career cleared up, will enhance the interest of what will undoubtedly be one of the most attractive biographies of the year.

Messrs. Maunsel & Co., Ltd., the new Dublin publishing firm, will have ready in the course of a few days a new novel by Mr. Shan F. Bullock, entitled 'Dan, the Dollar.' It is a story of farmer life in the north of Ireland. 'Dan, the Dollar' is a returned Irish emigrant, and the story deals with the question of mixed marriages.

When listening to Lord Lansdowne's admirable speech on our alliance with Japan last Monday evening at the Junior Constitutional Club, it struck us that there would be a good sale, both here and in Japan, for a brochure giving the treaty in Japanese and English, with portraits of Lord Lansdowne and Viscount Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, and a few pictures of British and Japanese men-of-war.

Messrs. W. Heffer & Sons, of Cambridge, have arranged to publish a series of phonographic records for the teaching of English, French, German, and other languages which have been made under the supervision of Mrs. J. G. Frazer, the author of many well-known French school books. The publishers assert that, after long experimenting and elaborate precautions in the making of the records, it has been found possible to almost eliminate the objectionable metallic sound associated with the phonograph.

Amateur gardeners will find a budget of interesting and instructive information in the Christmas number of Amateur Gardening, which will be published on December 2.

Some little time previous to her death Lady Florence Dixie made all arrangements with Mr. John Long for the publication of her new story entitled 'Izra.' The book is nearly ready, and will be published very shortly.

Messrs. Probsthain & Co. (the Oriental publishers) announce that they will issue shortly a revised and enlarged limited edition of 'The Nightless City' (Yokohama). It will be strictly limited.

Mr. W. Pugin Thornton, author of 'Heads and What they Tell Us,' writes to us to point out the very striking resemblance between the last appearance of Sir Henry Irving on the stage and his death, and the description of the dramatic death of the great actor Austin Delmar in Mr. Nat Gould's last chapter of his new story 'The Selling Plater,' published by Mr. John Long a day or so after the death of Sir Henry. So striking is the resemblance that if Mr. Gould's story had been published a week later it would have been thought he had adapted the scene from life instead of anticipating it in fiction — for the book must have been printed before Sir Henry's lamented death.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of Miss Florence May's 'Life of Johannes Brahms,' which has just been published by Mr. Edward Arnold.

Colonel R. F. Meysey-Thompson has written two valuable handbooks on fishing and shooting respectively, in which the results of nearly fifty years' experience are set forth, for the most part, in the form of question and answer. 'A Fishing Catechism,' the first of the volumes, will be published by Mr. Edward Arnold immediately, and will be followed shortly by a 'A Shooting Catechism.'

Messrs. James Parker & Co. will publish immediately in 'The Digit of the Moon' series a new volume entitled 'A Draught of the Blue,' translated from the original manuscript by Professor F. W. Bain, M.A.

Mr. H. J. Glaisher, of Wigmore Street, has just ready Mr. Norreys Connell's new volume of stories, entitled 'The Pity of War.' It includes 'My Friend Yoshomai,' which attracted much attention when it appeared in the Cornhill Magazine.

Mr. Glaisher has also just issued a cheaper edition of 'The Philosophy of Dickens,' by Mrs. Baillie-Saunders, authoress of 'Saints in Society.'

Messrs. J. Baker & Son, of Clifton, will shortly publish a volume entitled 'Little Quakers,' by the authoress of 'Thoughts, Transcendental and Practical, Miss Carta Sturge.

EDUCATION IN CHINA.

'The grand old man of China,' Dr. W. A. P. Martin, who has been for the past three years associated with Viceroy Chang Chih Tung in the cause of Western Education, is about to assist in the formation of a great Union College in Pekin, an institution which will be supported jointly by the missionary societies of the Methodist, the Congregational, and the Presbyterian Churches. This is a remarkable enterprise, planned as a model for the guidance of the Chinese Government schools. Dr. Martin's fifty years' personal experiences are embodied in his Cycle of Cathay,' published in this country by Messrs. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier, who also publish his 'Lore of Cathay' and his other works on China and its people.

A GREAT AMERICAN HISTORY.

Vol. X. of 'The History of North America,' edited by Professor Guy Carleton Lee, has been published by Messrs. George Barrie & Sons, of Philadelphia, in advance of Vol. IX., which is not quite ready. This new volume in every way maintains the high level of excellence we have been led to expect from the previous volumes; it deals with that immense country known as the Pacific Slope, and with Alaska. In the prospectus we are told that 'the history of the Imperial State that lies beyond the Rockies and of that stretch of ice-capped, mountain-crowned, gold-bearing country to the north of the great States of Washington and Oregon has never been so clearly and withal so interestingly told as in the present volume.' This is, we believe, perfectly true; at any rate, we know no work which gives anything approaching the same amount of information, and it is given in very attractive form, and with illustrations of those men who have opened up the country dealt with.

'NELSON' AND 'DANTE' CALENDARS.

Messrs. Alexander Moring, Ltd., the De La More Press, have brought out very attractive 'Nelson' and 'Dante' Calendars for 1906. In the former, edited by Mr. A. D. Power, we have twelve cards (8 × 9½), each with some Nelson or naval picture and calendar of naval events; in the other, in place of the days of the month, we have incidents in the life of Dante on twelve cards, with some clever illustrations by Blanche McManus. In some of them Dante appears a bit too much like an old woman but all the accepted pictures of him have more or less that effect—due to the clothes of the period, perhaps.

THE NEW 'BACCHYLIDES.'[*]

What classical students in this country have awaited with eager and indeed impatient interest is at last an accomplished fact. When, eight years, ago Dr. Kenyon published his edition of the Poems of Bacchylides from the papyrus in the British Museum he stated that Professor Jebb had some intention of undertaking an independent edition, 'in which his admirable scholarship will be free from the trammels of an editio princeps, and in which he may do for Bacchylides what he has done for Sophocles.' That intention or promise has now been fulfilled in a manner which will delight the hearts of all real students of Greek poetry. In equipment and authority perhaps the first Grecian in England, Sir Richard C. Jebb has himself set the standard by which he is to be judged. In his great work on 'The Attic Orators,' issued so long ago as 1876, he gave the first incontestable proof of the consummate scholarship which has since placed him among the few British scholars whose reputation may be said to be European. But it is by his magnificent, we had almost said his stupendous, edition of 'Sophocles' that he is most widely and deservedly known.

In spite of our supposed insularity and barbarous disregard of culture, British scholarship has contrived to give an excellent account of itself. To take but a few contemporary instances in the field of classics we have the 'Iliad' of Mr. Leaf, the 'Odyssey' of Dr. Merry and Monro, the late Provost of Oriel, Professor Ellis's 'Catullus,' Professor Mayor's 'Juvenal,' Dr. Wickham's 'Horace,' to say nothing of the brilliant work of Professor Butcher, Mr. Andrew Lang, and Mr. Gilbert Murray. Mention must also be made of Monro's 'Homeric Grammar,' a work which is indispensable to every student of Homer. But bearing in mind all these and others whose names will readily occur to all lovers of the classics, it is not too much to aver that Jebb's contributions to latter-day scholarship occupy a place by themselves. What he did for Sophocles he has now done for Bacchylides.

The vast learning, the critical acumen, the searching thoroughness, the unfailing taste which Professor Jebb brings to bear on the treasure recently added to the riches of the British Museum need no commendation here. We shall be best serving our readers by briefly indicating not how the book is done but what it contains—that is to say, how it is likely to aid students of Bacchylides in particular or of Greek lyric poetry in general. If we did not remember that everything to which Sir Richard Jebb puts his hand is performed, one is almost tempted to say, with more than German thoroughness, we should be disposed to hold that this is the most elaborate and thorough of all his works. All that is known of Bacchylides, his life, his writings, his wanderings, is embodied in this work. There are sections devoted to the biography of the poet, his place in the history of Greek poetry, his literary and poetic characteristics, to dialect and grammar, and to metres—the total space allotted to these being some 120 pages of admirable and lucid prose. There follows a full account of the payprus, and here well merited praise is bestowed upon the labours of Dr. Kenyon, of the British Museum, whose assistance at various points Sir Richard Jebb cordially acknowledges. Autotype plates are added with the text of the papyrus carefully pieced together. Next come the masterly Introductions to the Odes, occupying nearly sixty pages. It is not until page 241 is reached that we come to the text, notes, and translation. The fragments occupy nearly thirty pages more. Finally, there is an Appendix dealing yet further with the material of the Odes, the whole being followed by a vocabulary and index. In the vocabulary words which are peculiar to Bacchylides and words which are corrupt are distinguished, a distinct service to the student.

One of the most interesting sections of the work is that in which Pindar, Simonides, and Bacchylides are compared and contrasted. Pindar must have been extremely difficult to get on with—'Gey ill to live wi,' as Carlyle's mother said of her illustrious son. According to tradition, did he not call the divine Corinna 'a swine' because she beat him in a poetic competition? Professor Jebb does not mention that little incident; but he does recall the fact that Pindar did not blush to liken himself to an eagle, and his rivals, Simonides and Bacchylides, to crows. His temper was in truth the very antithesis of Bacchylides'; the one proud, hot, disdainful—the other gentle, genial, and perhaps a trifle commonplace. Very instructive and illuminative, too, is the comparison drawn between Bacchylides and Horace. The Roman was not above borrowing from the Greek, nor can it be said that with all his art he always improved what he took. There are many passages we should like to quote in proof of the rare felicity of Sir Richard Jebb in exposition or criticism, but if we began we should not know where to end. Of his translation and notes it is not necessary to speak. They are such as his readers know in his 'Sophocles.' Higher praise it would be impossible to give.

Yet another task awaits Professsor Jebb. In spite of the excellent work done by Professor Gildersleeve, Professor Bury, and others, there is still room for an edition of Pindar to be set beside our standard editions of Sophocles and Bacchylides. Will Sir Richard Jebb undertake it?

We should add that his 'Bacchylides' is produced with the skill and excellence of material which distinguish the works issued by the Cambridge Press. The page is well proportioned, the type and paper are good, and the binding is at once substantial and handsome.

Bumpus); Stevenson's 'Twelve Months,' 12 curious full-page engravings, 1661, £23 10*s.* (Pickering);

'Fabritii Libro della Origine delli Volgari Proberti,' Venice, 1526, £20; 'Horæ,' on vellum, printed by Guillaume Godar (15 leaves wanting), £19 (Leighton). The total amount realised was upwards of £1,600.

NO DULL SEASON IN NEW YORK.

It is reported from New York that while there is no unanimous public rage after a particular book or kind of books, and no concentration of trade energies in any particular line, the volume and steadiness of trade are well maintained. Things are rapidly improving to the point when the city will have no dull season. One of the best booksellers in New York says: 'New York is rapidly getting in that regard to be like Paris. In Paris we have no dull season. When the Parisians go out of town the Americans come in. In New York when the New Yorkers go away all the other Americans come in. Nobody stays long perhaps, but the stream flows steadily. Time was, and not very long ago, when here in our bookshop, for instance, we had little to do in August and September, but now there is less and less slackening of trade. During these months the visitors in the city furnish the city with dependable custom.' This is more or less the experience of publishers and booksellers in London. Every year the tendency is to issue books earlier. One firm we know of had all its autumn books practically ready by the end of July.—Bookman.

THE FLAT-BACK BOOK.

'I do not know how it may be with the general public who buy cheap books, but all the real book-lovers of my acquaintance heartily detest the flat-back book. I am of the number myself. I never buy a flat-back book when I can get an edition of it with a round back; and if I could afford it I would rebind every flat-back book which I have been obliged to buy. I can never like the new series of the 'English Men of Letters' as I like the old, just for this one reason. Publishers' Circular, please copy. Also, please explain the raison d'être of the flat back.'—Wakefield Herald.

[The flat back is an American notion, or rather it grew into fashion there; we do not like it so well as the ordinary back, but we believe it is cheaper.—Ed.]

THE BOOK OF CLUBS.

In December Messrs. Spottiswoode & Co., of 54 Gracechurch Street, will publish the fourteenth annual edition of Mr. E. C. Austen Leigh's 'Clubs,' which gives in tabular form the date of establishment, number of members, subscription, secretary's name, and address of every British club at home and abroad, where it has been possible to obtain such particulars. It will be fully corrected and brought up to date, and is the only complete Directory of the kind published.

PRICES OF BOOKS.

On August 12 last we noticed Vols. 1 and 2 of 'Auction Prices of Books.' Mr. E. Stock has since sent us Vol. 3. The period covered by the work is forty years for England and thirty-four for the United States. The books recorded sold for not less than £1 in England or $5 in the States. In Volume 3 the entries under 'New Testament' fill 16 columns, Psalters 16, Missals 9, Primers 5, other Prayer Books 20, Ptolemy 4, Quarles 6, Penn 4½, Luther 2, Plato 2, Pliny 3½, Plutarch 4, Massinger 6, Marlowe more than 3, John Marston 2, T. Middleton 3½, John Lilly the Euphuist 3, Marvell barely a column, Sir David Lindsay 2, Edm. Lodge 5, Gervase Markham more than 4, Mandeville 2, Malory 4, Milton 20, Pope 4, Poe 7, Russell Lowell 9, Raleigh 4, Ramsey 3, Petrarch 4½, Wm. Morris 14, Locker 6, Longfellow 11½, Moore (F., T., &c.) 6, Sir Thos. More 6, Martial 2, Livy 3, Ovid 7½, Longus 2, Macaulay 2, Mayhew 3, J. Mather 17, C. Mather 25, Meyrick (Armour) 3, Pugin 4, Piranesi 1½; Margaret of Navarre 2, Poliphilus' Hypnerotomachia 3, Charles Lever 12, Reynolds (G. W. M. & J.) 3, Marryat 2½, Geo. Meredith 2, Rabelais 4, Molière 4½, Montaigne 4, Books about New England 11, New Jersey 7, Massachusets 11, New York 23, Pennsylvania 19, Philadelphia 4. The books under nine of these heads figured chiefly or solely in American sales. As a whole, Mr. Livingston's compilation will be invaluable to booksellers who deal in Americana.

TRADE NOTES AND CHANGES.

Letters to the Editor

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.]

'SOME FAMOUS WOMEN OF WIT AND BEAUTY.'

Sir,—In my work, 'Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty,' published this year, there are two essays, on Mrs. Grote and on Lady Eastlake, which consist to a considerable extent of extracts from the memoirs of those ladies. This fact is not stated in my volume, and I desire to acknowledge my indebtedness to the works 'Mrs. Grote, a Sketch,' by Lady Eastlake, and 'The Journals and Correspondence of Lady Eastlake,' edited by her nephew, Charles Eastlake Smith, from which the essays in my volume were mainly composed John Fyvie.

16 James Street, Haymarket, S.W.

'AN ATLANTIC TRAGEDY.'

Sir,—We observe in your issue of the 4th inst. that Mr. W. Clark Russell has written a letter with reference to a volume of stories which we have just published under the title of 'An Atlantic Tragedy, and other Stories.'

We should like to state that all the stories appear just as they came from the pen of Mr. W. Clark Russell, and have not been altered in any way. The title given to the volume is the name of the leading story.—Yours faithfully,

Digby, Long & Co.

18 Bouverie Street, Fleet Street, E.C.

[There can, we think, be no doubt that Mr. W. Clark Russell is fully justified in protesting, as he did last week in our columns, at the publication now, as if it were a new and complete work by him, of some old short serial stories which appeared in newspapers some time last century. In the interests of everyone concerned, if the title of one of a collection of stories is used as the title of a book, the words 'and other stories' should appear after it on the title-page and cover. Few things are more exasperating than finding that, when you think you have a new long story to read, you have only a lot of old short ones.—Ed.]

THE NET SYSTEM.

Sir,—A correspondent in your columns thinks the public need training in businesslike ways to see the beauties of the net system. I think it will take a very long course of education to teach a businesslike person the fairness or honesty of charging the same price to the person who pays on the spot and the one who pays months after. The businesslike public has got so into the habit of getting its commodities at a considerable reduction for immediate payment that it is only because the British householder is not a regular book-buyer that has preserved the publishers from the righteous retribution that should have fallen on them long ago, and which I trust the Times system will mete out to them. As a regular book-buyer, spending the better part of £100 in adding to my library annually, I strongly resent being deprived of a quarter of the value of the money I am prepared to expend for the benefit of people who pay their bills some time or never.

A Businesslike Book-buyer.

[Does 'A Businesslike Book-buyer' get, or expect to get, a discount on boots, butter, bacon, or indeed on anything except books? —Ed.]

PUBLISHERS AND THE TIMES BOOK CLUB.

Sir,—There appeared on November 6 an advertisement of the Times Book Club, headed 'An Apology,' in which the delays and disappointments said to be encountered by subscribers are attributed partially to the inability of publishers to fill orders for the books they issue.

The statements are made that 'every binder in London is keeping publishers waiting for books, which they in turn keep us waiting for,' and that 'the most important publishing houses in the country find it impossible to fill our orders with promptness.'

As these statements may cause people to think that they cannot obtain my firm's publications promptly at the booksellers' and libraries, we shall be much obliged if you will allow us to say that none of our new books have been delayed or out of stock this autumn for a single day, and that if difficulty is found in obtaining them it is not due to any such defective arrangements on our part as are suggested by the advertisement in question. —Faithfully yours, Edward Arnold.

TAXING 'COMMERCIALS' IN CANADA.

Dear Sir,—Below please see copy of a letter which we have just received, and which may be of interest to your readers:

'Montreal, October 23, 1905.

'Gentlemen,—In reply to your inquiry regarding the taxes of $300.00 on mercantile agency, I beg to say that I think this will possibly be reduced in the very near future. It was not aimed at the Old Country especially, but applies to all countries outside of the Dominion.—Very truly yours,

(Signed) 'E. M. Renouf.'

ALLEGED DUPLICATE OFFERS OF 'SOLE RIGHTS' OF TRANSLATION.

Dear Sir,—By the present I beg to call your attention a third time to the fact that in the matter of German authorisations of English books a state of the greatest uncertainty is reigning. This continual state makes German publishers who buy German translation rights from English or American publishers &c. feel very uneasy. Personally I begin to mistrust the legal value of every contract of authorisation, always foreseeing a lot of trouble by the complications caused through a second or even third sale of 'sole' translation rights.

Very truly yours,

Stuttgart. Robert Lutz.

[From a cutting from the Börsenblatt enclosed by Mr. Lutz it appears that in 1901 he bought of a Miss S. the right to translate one of Mark Twain's books ('Adam's Diary'), she saying she had bought the right from the English publisher; and now, four years later, the American publishers (Messrs. Harper) offer to sell Mr. Lutz the right to translate for an 'enormous sum.' No wonder Mr. Lutz complains. But in this case it appears to be an oversight on the part of Mr. Mark Twain in not informing the Messrs. Harper of the sale of the rights to Miss S. for Germany of 'Adam's Diary' through Messrs. Chatto & Windus, of London. It is a rather complicated business.—Ed.]

Mention the 'P. C.'—Our Readers who order books, &c. they see mentioned or advertised in the Publishers' Circular will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

THE TIMES BOOK CLUB AND THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Important Correspondence.

At the moment of going to press we have received a copy of some correspondence on the Times Book Club matter which will be of the greatest interest to our readers. It is very satisfactory in so far that it shows the Booksellers' and Publishers' Associations are working together, as is only natural they should do; but it cannot, we think, be considered as satisfactory as regards the position taken up by the Times, and we sincerely hope that it may be possible to arrive at some understanding which in a more simple and definite way will PROTECT THE NET BOOK SYSTEM. Every consideration ought to be subordinate to that.

If the defence of the net book system is broken down at any one point, intentionally or unintentionally, the result will be the collapse of the whole system. If you can drive a coach and four through an Act of Parliament, what could you not drive through the net book system if the wonderful clauses of the voluminous Times Book Club prospectus are to be the arbiters of its fate? If the publishers accept these clauses from the Times, then they cannot refuse to accept as a fair carrying out of the net book agreement any action by others based on those clauses, and that means good-bye to the net book for ever.

We hope that the publishers will not sell their birthright for a mess of pottage in the shape of big orders from newspapers.

THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

Stationers' Hall, London, E.C.
Oct. 25, 1905.

C. F. Moberly Bell, Esq.,
Manager of the Times.

Dear Sir,—The Council of the Publishers' Association has been approached by delegates of the Booksellers' Association and all its branches throughout the United Kingdom, and has received an influential deputation of thirty-two of their number in regard to the proposals contained in the circular of the Times Book Club.

These proposals the Council have carefully considered, and they would request you to give equally careful consideration to certain points arising out of the statements set forth therein, and in the circulars and advertisements of the Times.

1. New Books. — From letters which, on June 28 and October 17, you addressed to our colleagues, Mr. Murray and Mr. Heinemann, we believe that your attitude has been misconceived and that your circular has been mis-read. In the former letter you wrote: 'We do not wish to undercut either in buying or selling. We want to be the honest broker between readers and publishers, with as little opportunity for bargaining as possible.' In the letter to Mr. Heinemann you wrote that 'a man may take a book and may keep it three months, but it is always in our books at the class at which we originally put it; he can have it at the end of the three months if he likes, but he will pay the full price for it.' Unfortunately, the statements in your circular and advertisements have led the public into the erroneous belief that you are offering advantages in regard to price which are not obtainable elsewhere.

Our purpose in addressing you is to ask that this misconception of the public regarding the purchase of books be removed, with the same measure of publicity as has been given to the original statements.

The statements in question are as follows:

On the enumeration (see circular, p. 19) of the four classes of books for purchase, classes A, B, C, and D, it is stated (p. 21) that 'the subscriber may thus enjoy, when the system is in operation, the privilege of choosing from among four copies of a book at four different prices and, even at the lowest of these prices, secure a book so recently published that it would not for a long time to come be obtainable from a secondhand bookseller.'

Again, on p. 25 of the circular:—

'Every one of the books' [offered in an ordinary catalogue of secondhand books] 'is more than six months old. To judge from this catalogue persons who are not subscribers to the Times will not be able to purchase, at secondhand prices, biographies published next month until a year from now. Our subscribers will, however, find these books in class B about a month after publication, in class C about three months after publication, and find them offered under class D, at 70 per cent. less than the published price, six months before they would become available under the ordinary conditions of the secondhand book trade.'

Apart from the special classes of secondhand books instituted by the Times, the general statement is made to subscribers in the advertisements passim: 'You will be able to buy books at, upon an average, about one-half of the published price.' Again, 'for your 6*s.* 6*d.* you can, when you become a subscriber to the Times, buy books which you could not otherwise buy for less than 13*s.*' We would add a quotation from your advertisement in the Daily Telegraph of October 2: 'The books you will thus be enabled to buy while they are in course of circulation (seizing as they pass through your hands those that you want, and letting the others go back to the Times Book Club) will, if you desire to make your purchases at an average of half the ordinary price, be, for every practical purpose, as desirable as if you had paid the full price for them. There will be no labels on the bindings, and when you have gradually accumulated a useful collection of books by this economical method, you will hardly be able to tell as you look back at those you purchase in 1905 and 1906 whether you have paid the full price for them or not.'

We have produced to us a letter of the 5th inst., signed for the Manager of the Times, 'J. H. E.,' in which it is stated to a would-be subscriber in Edinburgh, 'After reading them' [the books] 'you can keep any that you wish to place in your library, buying them at various discounts, paying less than a third of the published price if you wait until a book has been in circulation for a few months. You can easily arrange your purchases so that you pay half-price for all the books you buy.'

We have also produced to us a card from the Manager of the Times of this current month, in which it is stated that 'you will furthermore be able to retain, at an average cost of about half-price, any of these books that you would like to place in your library after you have read them.'

These statements, with others similar in character, repeated through the Times advertisements, represent to the ordinary reader that books can be obtained through the Times more cheaply than elsewhere. We are assured by various booksellers that customers refuse to buy new net books at their counters, saying that they will procure them more cheaply from the Times. It is true that in a footnote of the circular (p. 20) you 'do not for a moment anticipate that every book that has been used for a month can be placed in class B, that every book that has been used for three months can be placed in class C, and that every book that has been used for six months can be placed in class D.' But we have reason to believe that the very general statement that books can be purchased from the Times Book Club at half price has been interpreted as including net books and has met with very general credence.

It is this very prevalent misconception of the policy of the Times Book Club which we would ask you to remove, and we earnestly request that you will take early opportunity of doing so.

2. Secondhand Books.—We now turn to the consideration of secondhand books. What constitutes a secondhand book has hitherto been undefined, and has been a matter of mutual understanding and bona fides in the trade. We observe that the Times Book Club has renounced the conspicuous label which, consistently used by all the circulating libraries, has always been regarded in the trade as the greatest safeguard against spurious secondhand books. It is recognised by the libraries that six months is the earliest limit of time within which a book which has been in circulation can be regarded as legitimately secondhand. We would ask you to give the booksellers, through us, the assurance that the Times will not sell any book as secondhand until it has been in been in circulation for six months.

It only remains to add that we are forcibly impressed alike by the representative character and by the unanimity of the booksellers who have approached us on this subject: the protest made was influential and of a single mind, comprising, we apprehend, all the most respected members of the bookselling trade.

In conclusion, we would assure you that we cordially welcome all means for increasing the distribution and sale of books and the encouragement of readers, but we would beg you to co-operate with us in removing misconceptions which have arisen, and may arise, in the mind of the public, and in precluding any injury to those who have hitherto carried on the book trade.—We are, Sir,

Your obedient Servants,
Reginald J. Smith, President.
Wm. Heinemann, Vice-President.
Charles James Longman, Treasurer.
John Murray, Ex-President.
Frederick Macmillan, Ex-President. of the Publishers' Association.

'THE TIMES,'
Printing House Square, E.C.
October 26, 1905.

To the President, Vice-President, Treasurer, and Ex-Presidents of the Publishers' Association.

Gentlemen,—We received late yesterday evening your letter of that date, and we reply at once.

As regards new books. We signed the agreement relating to net books as a condition of the contracts into which we entered with various publishers. Upon the conclusion of those contracts we undertook numerous engagements towards the public, involving large expense and obligations towards them.

The engagements thus taken—to the publishers on the one hand and to the public on the other—will scrupulously be performed by us in the letter and in the spirit. Nor do we anticipate that the publishers will do less or expect more. Further, as regards list books we have entered into no general engagement, but we have no present intention of allowing purchasers more than 25 per cent. on such books.

As regards booksellers, we have no engagement towards them, but we shall treat them with that courtesy and consideration which we feel certain they will extend to us. We shall do nothing that they are not themselves at perfect liberty to do.

The interpretation which you say that others place upon isolated passages of our prospectus and of various letters and advertisements does not accord with the intention we have very clearly expressed. In quoting the last paragraph of page 21, for instance, you omit any reference to the sentence immediately preceding it, in which we state explicitly that if a subscriber desires to effect a saving on the cost price he must return the new copy, and a copy of the same book secondhand will be reserved for him and sent as soon as possible.

That the public, apart from booksellers, can have entertained any idea that we were going to act in the foolish manner suggested is negatived by the fact that among many thousand subscribers using the Book Club no single one has made such an assumption, and only two or three have asked an explanation.

It is surely sufficient proof of the absurdity of the suggestion to point out that, if any such principle were adopted, no one would buy either Class B or C, but would wait for Class D in order to obtain the greatest discount and defer the payment for six months.

As regards Secondhand Book. You ask that we shall engage not to sell any books as secondhand for six months after publication.

While we must absolutely decline any such engagement for reasons which we will state, we would point out that if the reasoning in the first part of your letter is correct, then it follows that no book could be sold before six months, because no one would be so foolish as to buy a book in Class B or C and to pay for it in one or three months when by simply putting it on their shelves and waiting for six months they could call it Class D and obtain both a larger discount and a longer credit. Therefore, either the first part of your letter is wholly incorrect or the second part is wholly unnecessary.

We decline to bind ourselves not to sell books as secondhand until six months after publication for the following reasons

1. Because on the strength of our engagements with the publishers, we have entered into engagements with the public which preclude our considering any such modification.

2. Because we decline as one purchaser to be subjected to a restriction which you cannot enforce on others. The writer has continually bought new books and sold them within a very few weeks secondhand. Other people do the same—though they will do so to a less extent now that they are able to borrow books from the Times Book Club as soon as they are published—a facility which has hitherto been a rare favour.

3. Because some of the publishers themselves adopt the practice of selling new books (as Partial Remainders) within a few months of their publication at 50 per cent. reduction, or more.

4. Because new net books are already sold in some few cases by booksellers at below the net price.

5. Because the definition suggested would be grossly unjust to publishers themselves. Under it we should be justified in purchasing to-day 'The Marriage of William Ashe' and selling it at 2*s*.

You state that what constitutes a secondhand book has not been defined, but this is not quite exact.

A writer in the Publisher and Bookseller, who criticises adversely our scheme, quotes the following as the definition of a 'very competent authority.'

'An absolutely new volume which bears some slight defacing mark, such as publisher's stamp, or the leaves of which have been cut, can be sold at any price the vendor chooses to put upon it.'

The writer goes on to say, 'We do not quarrel with the first of these two definitions —an article of commerce that is in any way defaced of course ceases to be new—this axiom would hold good in any branch of trade,' but he proceeds to contest the justice of the second definition.

Now we do not go nearly so far as this defender of the booksellers. We do not consider that a single defacing mark converts a new book into a secondhand book. We consider that a book is secondhand when it has been used by more than two subscribers, and when it is returned in such a state that it cannot be sold as a new book. Even then we should not sell it as secondhand if we were still able to circulate it.

We trust that these assurances will be satisfactory, and in conclusion we would ask you why we should be called upon to make special assurances, seeing that one of the signatories of your letter of October 25 wrote us no later than the day before saying: 'Let me assure you that with the exception of the immense driving power of the Times, and the large capital at your disposal, there is scarcely a feature in your scheme which does not exist already or has not been tried before.'

Why then are we, when following an existing practice, or one that has been hallowed by tradition, to be called upon to make exceptional assurances, not exacted from others?

'The immense driving power and the large capital' are working not only in your interests but in those of authors, readers, and, we venture to say, in the ultimate interests of the booksellers themselves.

You and all publishers—ourselves and all booksellers—are but intermediaries between the large writing, and the still larger reading, public. We have none of us the right to interfere by seeking to impose restrictions on a trade which, perhaps of all trades, is of the greatest benefit to the whole population.

We are,
Your obedient servants,
C. F. Moberly Bell,
for the Times.

Stationers' Hall, London, E.C.
November 2, 1905.

C. F. Moberly Bell, Esq.,
Manager of the Times.

Dear Sir,—We beg to acknowledge your letter of the 26th ulto.

We are glad to receive your authoritative interpretation of the statements made in the circular and advertisements, &c. of the Times, and to notice that, as regards new books, you propose to follow the rules generally observed in the book trade, as we believe, to its permanent adavantage.

We must, however, point out that, although we may not convince you of the fact, we are satisfied of the existence of the general impression conveyed by the Times to the public mind that all books, whether published at net prices or not, are to be purchased from you at half-price. It has been proved to us that purchasers of books have left the booksellers in the belief that they will be able to buy more cheaply from the Times. And if a book is, as you state, to be returned by a subscriber with a view to the purchase of a second-hand copy later, why should it be 'seized' as it passes through the subscriber's hands, and why should subscribers be urged to 'keep any that they wish to place in their library,' and 'to retain at an average cost of about half-price any' of the books they borrow?

Reiteration would show that you attach importance to the argument that no one would be so foolish as to buy at the lower discounts of Classes B and C when by simply waiting he could obtain the higher discount of Class D. But we apprehend that many subscribers are attracted by the early prospect of having 'clean and uninjured copies, virtually as good as new' in Class B, and 'sound copies, of which the conditions indicate about three months' use,' in Class C. It is obvious that these two earlier classes are designed to meet the needs of those who wish to have have books at an earlier stage than they can be obtained in Class D.

Second-Hand Books.—We regret that you cannot see your way to an engagement not to sell any book as second-hand until it has been in circulation for six months. You misunderstood our request, which was not that you should refrain from selling any books as second-hand for six months after publication, but that no book should be regarded as second-hand until it has been in circulation for six months at least.

We welcome your definition of a second-hand book, as being one which 'has been used by more than two subscribers and is returned in such a state that it cannot be sold as a new book.' This definition we propose to bring to the notice of the libraries.

We deem it necessary to put on record, in reference to statements contained in your five numbered paragraphs, that

(a) If any case of underselling a book published at a net price is brought to our knowledge, we take our steps to put a stop to the practice: these steps have hitherto, through our six years' experience of the Net System, proved invariably effectual.

(b) That no one of us has any knowledge of the system of 'Partial Remainders' to which you advert. If a publisher or bookseller sells to the public a net book 'within a few months' of its publication 'at 50 per cent. reduction or more,' as you state, he infringes the Net Book Agreement and is dealt with accordingly. The case of reviewers' copies being sold at reduced prices is not one of any considerable substance.

In conclusion we would invite you to take this opportunity of laying still further to rest the misconceptions which have arisen in many quarters on the circular and advertisements, &c., issued by the Times—misconceptions which we have endeavoured to indicate to you. Your intentions, as now expressed to us, differ from the interpretation which we ourselves, the booksellers, and we believe, the public also, have placed upon the statements in your circular and advertisements. And our request is that you will do what you can to make those statements less liable to be misread.

We shall await your reply to this letter before we communicate the correspondence to the booksellers, who will doubtless wish it to be published.—We are, Sir,

Your obedient Servants,
Reginald J. Smith, President,
Wm. Heinemann, Vice-President,
Charles James Longman, Treasurer,
John Murray, Ex-President,
Frederick Macmillan, Ex-President,
Of the Publishers' Association.

'THE TIMES,'
Printing House Square, E.C.,
November 3, 1905.

To The President, Vice-President, Treasurer, and Ex-Presidents of the Publishers' Association.

Gentlemen,—Your letter of November 2 reached us at a late hour last night.

We are sorry that our 'intentions as now expressed'—which are identical with our intentions as always expressed in our pamphlet, in our advertisements, and elsewhere—should differ from the interpretation which you tell us that you and booksellers place upon them. We respectfully submit that we are better judges as to our own intentions than even you can be, and we cannot see any object to be gained by reiterating statements already made in the very plainest language at our command, nor—were the object made clear to us—are we capable of conceiving any language or form of words which could more clearly express those intentions or convey conviction to those who would appear to read into our statements a meaning the exact reverse of their literal interpretation — a meaning which we have explicitly repudiated.

The phrase in your letter under reply 'if a book is, as you state, to be returned' is—we are sure, unintentionally—offensive.

We have stated, directly or indirectly, in every separate page of our pamphlet dealing with the purchase of books that a book has to be so returned. We have said the same explicitly to you. We alone have control over the matter, and there is therefore no room for the 'if.'

Out of personal respect to the signatories of the letter under reply we will make a final endeavour to show the absurdity of the position taken up in regard to the return of books.

We understood the argument in your previous letter to be this:

Under your system a subscriber may borrow a perfectly new book, keep it for one month and then pay for it as class B, or keep it two months longer and pay for it as class C, or keep it yet three months longer (six months in all) and pay for it as class D.

Our reply was that if this were so, no one would be so foolish as to pay for it under class B or C, but would obtain it with longer credit and at a lower price by keeping it six months and calling it class D.

The way you meet this argument is by saying that a subscriber might be attracted by the early prospect of having clean and uninjured copies!

But the essence of your whole hypothesis is that the subscriber has already got a perfectly new uninjured copy in his possession. He has got what he wants, and the only question is would he prefer to pay in one month at a discount of 20 per cent., or in three months at 33⅓ per cent., or in six months at 50 per cent. The book in either case being his, being in his own possession, and being a new copy.

Surely you can see that you have unconsciously exposed the absurdity of the proposition.

Every book will be sent out by us clearly marked, as either class A, class B, class C, or class D. And it may be 'seized' as it passes through the subscriber's hand by his undertaking to pay for it the price according to the class in which it is and in which we have placed it. Any subscriber may 'keep any that they wish to place in their library' in the same way—that is to say, they may keep the book and pay for the book at the price according to the class in which it is and in which we have placed it. They may also 'reserve' any book by expressing a wish for it when it gets back into a lower class, and in this way may hope 'to retain at an average cost of about half-price any' of the books they borrow.

We have given the specific reply to your questions in your own language, but we fail to see that we have added anything to the clearness of the following from page 21 of our pamphlet.

'Every volume sent to a subscriber will be accompanied by a card specifying its class and price, and showing the three prices at which copies of that book in the three other classes may be purchased. Desiring, for example, to purchase a book of which a new copy has been sent to him, he may prefer to effect a saving by returning that new copy and asking that a Class B, C or D copy of the same book may be reserved for him and sent as soon as possible.'

As regards secondhand books I will only say that your correction of my misinterpretation of your suggestion makes that suggestion more than ever impossible. We have given our definition of 'secondhand' and by that we abide—but I have before me a 'secondhand' catalogue in which net books marked as 'new,' 'perfectly new,' 'leaves uncut,' are offered at from 30 to 70 per cent. below the net price quoted in an adjacent column.

We accept without reservation your statements marked a and b, and inform you without any hesitation that your precautions are quite ineffectual.

I am, your obedient servant,

C. F. Moberly Bell, for the Times.

P.S.—I have omitted to state that we have no objection to the publication of this correspondence; but as the matter concerns other sections of the public at least as largely as yourselves and booksellers, I submit that it would be well at the same time to obtain and to publish the views of authors, printers, and bookbinders.

OBITUARY.

We regret to learn that Mr. William C. Edmonds, of 420 Brixton Road, S.W., died on the 29th ult. The business will be continued for the present without alteration.

Notices of Books

From the Cambridge University Press.—'Beaumont and Fletcher: The Maid's Tragedy, Philaster, A King and No King, The Scornful Lady, The Custom of the Country,' the text edited by Arnold Glover, M.A. ('Cambridge English Classics'). Scholars of the Elizabethan drama are certain to warmly appreciate this well-printed, industriously edited edition of Beaumont and Fletcher, of which the first volume in a series of ten is now sent out. The text used is that of the Second Folio edition published in 1679, which contains all the then known plays of the authors which had been published previously to that date. The object the editor and publishers have had in view is, in the first place, to provide a text closely adhering in matters of spelling, punctuation, use of capitals, &c., to the original, only obvious printers' errors being corrected, which are indicated by the insertion of square brackets; and, secondly, to give in the form of an Appendix an 'apparatus' of variant readings, comprising the texts of all the early issues—that is to say, of all editions prior to and including the Second Folio. Unfortunately the death of Mr. Glover when the work was but slightly advanced has deprived the edition of one of its most valuable supports, but an excellent substitute has been found in Mr. A. R. Waller, under whose editorial guidance it may confidently be anticipated the work will progress to a satisfactory completion. In the matter of suitable binding, paper, and type the publishers have done everything that could be desired, and not the least commendable feature in connection with the production is its moderate price.

From the Catholic Truth Society.—'Theosophy and Christianity,' by the Rev. Ernest R. Hull, S.J. The writer of these papers—which originally appeared in the columns of the Bombay Catholic Examiner—inspires respect from the outset by the moderation of his reasoning and manifest desire to be impartial. Theosophy, as he points out, has been so endowed at the hands of its most popular exponents with attributes of mystery as to excite the suspicion of sober and common-sense minds, and to appeal only to those temperaments which delight in the mysterious and the weird for their own sake. Owing to this cause the subject has not attracted the attention it is fairly entitled to. Though we are far from regarding the relation of Theosophy to Christianity from the same view-point as Father Hull, we cannot but recognise the interest of his work and the earnestness he has brought to its completion.

From Messrs. Chapman & Hall.—'Truth, Wit, and Wisdom: a Mine of Information—525 Letters to the Press, 1887–1903,' from the pen of Algernon Ashton. The epistolary outpourings of Mr. Ashton, arranged under the headings of 'Personal,' 'Sepulchral' (scarcely a happy effort at nomenclature), 'Miscellaneous,' 'Musical,' 'Monumental,' 'Political,' 'Necrological,' and 'Humorous,' for the most part treat of rather trivial subjects and evince a partiality in their writer for rushing into print. It can scarcely, for instance, be expected that the reading world will greatly concern itself over the omission of Brahms from the Promenade Concert 'programs' of 1896; a misstatement in the Star as to the date when Mr. William Terriss was murdered; or the fact that 'Whitaker's Almanack' for 1900 does not contain any particulars about the London Clubs. Many of these letters run only to a very few lines. On the other hand, they may pleasantly carry the older reader's thoughts back to the events of the past, and in this, we are afraid, their sole recommendation lies.

From the same.—'The Emancipation of Egypt,' by A. Z., translated from the Italian. The author of this volume has little faith in the efficacy of European colonisation. 'Up to this day,' he writes, 'the black races of Africa cannot be said to have learned anything from Europe that is profitable to them, or that has advanced them on the road to civilisation. The white man has come to further his own gain, and where he has passed he has left desolation. . . . The history of the conquest of America would make the most stony-hearted sick with horror. There, again, Europeans failed to discover any link of sympathy with the primeval inhabitants. . . . Along the northern coast of Africa we have another signal instance of the incapacity of the European to absorb the native, or to draw him within the range of European civilisation.' Under these circumstances it is not extraordinary that 'A. Z.,' after discussing the unsatisfactory character of fugitive papers on Egypt, the attitude of the Great Powers on the Egyptian question, the action of France and Italy, British Imperial policy, the false position of Great Britain in Egypt, and other phases of the subject, should ultimately come to the conclusion that Egypt is now sufficiently competent to look after herself, and that in her neutralisation the whole solution of the question lies. The book forms an interesting survey of an important subject.

From Messrs. T. & T. Clark, Edinburgh.—'The Growth of Christian Faith,' by George Ferries, M.A., D.D. Dr. Ferries's highly scholarly work is arranged in five parts, respectively treating of the Preparation for Religion, Religion as an Established Fact of Life, the Forgiveness offered through Christ, the Historical Aspect of the Subject, and the Development of Results. The enumeration of these headings will to a certain extent afford an idea of the character of the volume, but will but poorly indicate the grasp of his topic shown in detail by the author. Under the division of Preparation, for instance, he enlarges on the religious situation and prospect, the calmness of mind necessary to the acquisition of faith, the different schools of thought in the Christian community, the influence of philosophy on religion, and the genesis of spiritual life; while the other branches of his subject are treated with equal insight.

From Messrs. James Clarke & Co.—'The Inward Light,' by Amory H. Bradford. Mr. Bradford's volume is likely to carry consolation to the mind of many a perplexed worshipper. The author has the gift—and it undoubtedly is a gift—of conveying his thoughts to his readers in simple, impressive language and with an incisive force that is bound to carry conviction. Possibly at times the reasoning may seem a little too strenuous, too confident in its infallibility, but this will certainly not be accounted a demerit by the waverer anxious for religious strengthening.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd.—'Pax Britannica in South Africa,' by Francis P. Fletcher-Vane. The author claims for this volume that it is the outcome of a perfectly unprejudiced opinion of the Cape Dutch, derived from personal experience of their characteristics. During the whole course of the war, he tells us, and for a year or so afterwards, it was his fate to be brought into direct and personal intercourse with the people. 'From the early days,' he writes, 'when I foraged for the cavalry, and in the course of this duty entered into the houses of British, Dutch, and natives, to the last when, after the war, I had to see much of the political leaders on both sides in Cape Colony and in the Orange River Colony, I learnt by human companionship rather than by any other medium.' The opinions of such an observer are bound to be treated with respect, and the conclusion at which he eventually arrives—that the British have not yet acquired a sound knowledge of the situation in South Africa—is a little disquieting. The volume, which is well illustrated, throws considerable fresh light on the Boer entanglement.

From the same.—'The Life of Reason, or the Phases of Human Progress,' by George Santayana. Two further volumes in this series treat respectively of 'Reason in Art' and 'Reason in Religion.' Both will well repay perusal, and are, indeed, worthy of the closest attention. In the former volume Mr. Santayana considers the basis of art in instinct and experience, the relationality of industrial art, the value and influence of music, the place of poetry and prose, plastic construction and representation, the justification of art and the criterion of taste, concluding with some thoughts on art and happiness; while his views in the matter of religion range over the elements of superstition, magic, sacrifice, and prayer, the Pagan customs and barbarian light infused into Christianity, the conflict of mythology with moral truth, the considerations of piety, spirituality and its corruptions, charity and the belief in a future life, with a logical chapter on ideal immortality. Reason in religion, we are afraid, is slightly at a discount, and probably the lover of art will be equally disinclined to receive the advice of the philosopher, but the followers of both might advantageously ponder over the truths here rather uncompromisingly revealed.

From the same.—'Contemporary France,' by Gabriel Hanotaux. Translated from the French. With portraits. Vol. 2 (1873–1875). The period of French history covered by this volume is one of great interest. The excitements of the war had died away, leaving the country free to look after its internal affairs. In the political firmament the great names to conjure with are Marshal MacMahon, the Duc de Broglie, and Léon Gambetta. Other notable personages who figure prominently in M. Hanotaux's pages are the Comte de Chambord, the Duc Decazes, M. Thiers, and Marshal Bazaine. In the chapter dealing with Literature we hear of Auguste Comte, Balzac, Victor Hugo, Emile Zola, Alexandre Dumas fils, Michelet, George Sand, Renan, Taine, Daudet, and Flaubert; Science is represented by Claude Bernard, Paul Broca, Pasteur, Berthelot, Jean Charcot, and others; Art can produce its Millet, Corot, and Meissonier; while Music can triumphantly point to Berlioz, Auber, Ambroise Thomas, and Charles Gounod. With such material as this to work upon it is perhaps no wonder that M. Hanotaux has produced an extremely interesting volume, but he has brought to his task a charm of style and felicity of expression which are entirely his own. A more delightful companion for a spare evening we should not desire to be closeted with.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—'The Anatomy of Melancholy, What it is, with all the Kinds, Causes, Symptoms, Prognostics, and Several Cures of it,' by Democritus Junior. Three volumes. This new edition of Burton's great work is a worthy attempt to present adequately an author who has not only afforded pleasure and amusement himself, but has constantly been the means of others doing so. As the editor points out, the book on its first appearance obtained great celebrity, which continued more than half a century. It then fell into disfavour, and at length came to be regarded as simply a happy hunting ground for the plunderers of literature, the poachers in obscure volumes. How far Sterne in 'Tristram Shandy' was indebted to Burton is successfully shown by Dr. Ferriar, and other authors of less repute have unmercifully stolen matter from his pages. In more recent years the book has been re-established in public estimation, and old copies are now eagerly sought after. Apart from its fine, handsome appearance, which should command universal approval, the present edition is marked by a new and admirable feature. This is translations of the numerous quotations from ancient writers which occur in the book, thus extending its benefits to those who have not had the advantage of a classical education. Obsolete orthography also is in all instances modified.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—'Hector, my Dog: his Autobiography,' by Egerton R. Young. Readers who are fond of dogs are certain to be greatly taken with the adventures of Hector, who from the time of his birth in perilous surroundings on the Hudson River are of a marvellously exciting and novel character. Their thrilling effect is likely to be intensified by the illustrations. Boy readers may be informed that Indians figure largely in Hector's reminiscences, and that there are wolves, bears, and other wild animals to enliven the narrative. The scene of the book is laid in Canada.

From Messrs. Hutchinson & Co.—'The Marrying of Gwendoline Jane,' by Mrs. Tom Godfrey. The heroine is not a servant-maid, but owes her queer combination of names to a compromise between the poetic proclivities of one of her forbears and the prosaic of another. She dwells in the village of Middlewich with her two guardians—'Grand'-maman,' a romantic French Marquise, and 'Grandma,' a practical English aristocrat The one wishes her to marry for love, and the other for position and pelf; and both of them are clever and rather reckless schemers. The Marquise is a delightful old lady, and her grand-daughter, of course, is charming. The wealthy suitor is a small, elegant, elderly baronet everlastingly quoting Herrick or L. Hunt or Tennyson—especially Herrick. He is said to be a bore, and sometimes succeeds in boring the reader. The conversation of the rest of the well-drawn characters—of which there is a great deal—is quite entertaining. It will strike many readers that a good play could be made out of the tale, and this struck one who read it in MS., with the result that 'Gwendoline Jane' made a successful appearance on a suburban stage before her adventures were set up in type. This love tale is a pretty one cleverly told, and deserves such a circulation as will induce its author to furnish us with further amusement in the near future.

From Mr. John Lane—'Maud' (Tennyson), with illustrations by W. Graham Robertson. Apart from the usual artistic character distinguishing the 'Flowers of Parnassus' series, the feature that chiefly impresses us in this little volume is the ability shown in the illustrations of Mr. Robertson. They combine, if we may say so, the best attributes of the old school combined with the originality of the new. There is nothing outré about them, no particular straining after effect, yet they impress as exceedingly clever specimens of their craft.

From Messrs. E. & S. Livingstone, Edinburgh—'Examination Questions set by the University of Edinburgh at the Preliminary (Higher and Lower Standards) M.B., Ch.B., and B.Sc. in Public Health Examinations; the Conjoint Board of the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh; Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh; and Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons, Glasgow.' The character of this volume sufficiently reveals itself in the title. Examination questions for other qualifications are given, but our space will not admit of an enumeration of the long list. There will always be students who from inferior ability or laziness wish to qualify as easily as possible, and to them the book will undoubtedly prove useful.

From Mr. John Long.—'A Bit of a Rogue,' by Nat Gould. ('Nat Gould's Annual.') The usual crowd common to racing novels appear in this story, but, though his characters are a little stereotyped, Mr. Gould knows so well how to place them effectively that their virtuous or rascally actions, as the case may be, acquire fresh interest at his hands. The chief actor, however, is a horse, who, by his extremely wayward, unreliable temperament earns for himself the name of 'The Rogue.' Still, he wins the Grand National at Liverpool after a battle royal with his jockey, a young gentleman rider of a thoroughly dashing, popular type, who has succumbed to the charms of his employer's pretty daughter. Then there is a deep-dyed villain who endeavours to fasten an odious charge on the buoyant hero, and a malevolent poacher, a trainer, and so on. All combine to give point and attraction to a very vigorous, bustling story. That virtue comes out triumphant at the close, and scowling villainy is defeated, need hardly be questioned.

From Mr. Andrew Melrose.—'A Spur to Smite,' by G. B. Lancaster. We have no hesitation in ranking this novel very high indeed; we have read nothing that so grips the reader's attention by its brutal inevitableness for some time. The spur is a bargain which the hero makes with another man, and which he is compelled in honour to carry out to its bitter end, although pressed far beyond all reasonableness and all law. There is plenty of incident and local colour, and there are many other interesting characters; but through all our attention is held to the duel continually progressing between the man of honour and the man without—the man who holds the spur and the one who is so fearfully driven. The story, too, does not lack the attraction of a good setting. It is well written, and if the ending seems hard and unhappy we cannot but recognise that it is what we have feared all through.

From Messrs. Novello & Co., Ltd.—'The Council School Hymn Book.' The publication of this carefully prepared work has now been completed, and we have received a copy of each of the three editions—namely, the words only, the words and tunes with complete accompaniment—the usual hymnal form—and the words with the melody only (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations combined) for the use of the children. The book shows a wise discrimination of selection, and is carefully printed and indexed. The editions with music are likely to be especially useful.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner & Co., Ltd.—'The World's Desires, or the Results of Monism: an Elementary Treatise on a Realistic Religion and Philosophy of Human Life,' by Edgar A. Ashcroft. A general feeling of dissatisfaction, Mr. Ashcroft points out, is one of the features of the present day. The world of intellect and thought and the world of blind feeling and impulse are alike yearning and longing for something not attained. What man so passionately hungers for is something to replace his old standards of faith and conduct which, in times gone by, his natural instincts and his experiences led him to establish for himself, and which were then sufficient for his state of mental evolution, but which advancing intellect and further experience are rendering untenable—in short, something which will enable him to bring his life into logical accord with his standards of belief. It is with the object presumably of aiding such an inquirer after truth that Mr. Ashcroft has written his thoughtful, if not altogether convincing work. He treats his subject under four main headings—namely, 'Problems of Human Life and Thought,' 'Our Knowledge of the Material Universe,' 'The Human Organism and Organic Life,' and 'The Human Soul'; each section being introduced by a few words relating to the nature of the special view point. The volume, if it conveys but little real consolation to the disquieted thinker, is one that well deserves to be read, and will certainly inspire to deep reflection.

From the Scientific Press, Ltd.—'Medical Electricity and Light Treatment: a Practical Handbook for Nurses,' by Kate Neale. The writer manifestly advises her readers from a practical knowledge of her subject, and in so far her work is to be treated with respect, besides which it has the benefit of a clear, explanatory style; but there are points which only the scientist can touch. These lie outside our function, and we can only say that the book seems thoroughly practical and dictated by sound knowledge. The directions of the text are enforced by illustrations.

From the same.—'Nursing: Hints to Probationers on Practical Work,' by Mary H. Annesley Voysey. Book instruction can but inadequately take the place of actual experience for those starting on a hospital nursing career, but this little work supplies many little suggestions that may well be of service to the beginner. The points chiefly considered are the care of the ward, the making of the beds and washing of patients, taking temperatures, reporting, food and feeding, surgical work, night nursing, &c., in regard to which much practical advice is proffered. Several diagrams are included which give explanatory emphasis to the text.

From the same. — 'The Nursing of Sick Children,' by James Burnet, M.A., M.D. The author of this little volume points out that the nurse who has had little or no opportunity afforded her of acquiring a knowledge of children's ailments is apt to find herself hopelessly uncertain as to how to act when such cases are brought under her control. It is to a large extent to remedy this defect that the present work is written. The book is mainly intended for the probationer, who in the author's experience has seldom time to read through, much less to master, the pages of a large text-book.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'The Case of Miss Elliott,' by the Baroness Orczy, illustrated. We have been wondering for some time when this capital series of detective stories which appeared in a popular magazine would re-appear in book form, and we have now read them again with interest. While not putting them upon a level with the tales of Sherlock Holmes, they are distinctly above the majority of his imitators; their one fault is that they seem to want action. We are conscious that the mysteries are being elucidated by a student indoors, instead of being worked out on the heels of the criminal and amidst the hurry and perhaps danger of criminal accessories. In these stories all activity ceases with an abortive inquest or trial, when police and public are baffled; then the quaint old man with the eternal bit of string sets out the details and shows the inevitable and only possible solution.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Ltd.—'The Idlers,' by Morley Roberts. As a boy Jack Bexley was not everything he might have been—which of course means that he was exceedingly wicked—but at least he had manliness and 'grit.' Moreover, some of us may not be altogether out of sympathy with his preference for the soldiering profession rather than the Church. Jack never read a book, the author tells us, if he could help it, unless it was something to do with hunting or fishing. The Field was enough for him. At the age of twenty he was probably the finest and most ignorant all-round Englishman between the Tweed and the Torridge. Such a young fellow's career affords splendid possibilities for excitement. The reader will find that these have generally been well fulfilled in the story. Mr. Bexley's doings are attended by remarkable point and novelty, and when he wins through to a happy conclusion the reader, we are sure, attracted by the single-heartedness of his character, will unfeignedly rejoice. The novel is scarcely after Mr. Roberts's best manner, but for all that is thoroughly interesting.

New Editions, &c.—Messrs. Chatto & Windus have sent us an extremely neat edition, in six volumes, of Lord Macaulay's 'History of England,' with a Preface by Justin McCarthy. Handy in size—6⅜ by 4¼ inches—beautifully printed in large type on fine paper, and tastefully bound, this edition presents recommendations which should ensure its great success with the reading world. In the same series—the St. Martin's Library—we have also received Vol. 1 of Justin McCarthy's 'History of Our Own Times,' which merits equal praise with the preceding work.—From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co. we have received 'Profils Anglais,' by Sainte-Beuve, in the pretty, daintily bound 'Classiques Français' published under the direction of M. H. Warner-Allen. The all-round production of the little volume is distinguished by the greatest care and good taste, and is worthy of high commendation.—'More Tasty Dishes made from Tested Recipes,' being a companion volume to 'Tasty Dishes,' by the same compiler, has now attained a fourth edition. Such a fact says much for its capability. The publishers are Messrs. James Clarke & Co.—We have previously testified in these columns to the excellence and practical value of 'Routledge's Miniature Reference Library,' and two further volumes of the series which have reached us, in 'Who Wrote That? (Prose Authors),' by H. Swan, and 'The Diner Out, a Classified Collection of Apt Quotations for Toasts, After-Dinner Speeches, Occasional Addresses, Menus, and other Details connected with the Proper Ordering of the Dinner Table,' adapted from 'The Banquet Book,' by Cuyler Reynolds, only increases our respect for the publication. Messrs. Routledge may deservedly be complimented on this capital series. — 'The Changed Cross, and other Religious Poems' is the latest addition to the highly attractive, artistically bound 'Devotional Series' of Messrs. George Newnes. The frontispiece to the volume is a reproduction of 'The Flower of God,' after the picture by Sir Edward Burne-Jones. — Among other new editions and reprints we have to acknowledge a 'Summary of the History and Development of Mediæval and Modern European Music,' by C. Hubert H. Parry (Messrs. Novello & Co.), which, in addition to being very thoroughly revised, includes a new chapter bringing the survey up to the end of the nineteenth century; and 'The Doctor and the Simpler Life,' by C. W. Saleeby, M.D., reprinted, with additions, from the Pall Mall Gazette and published by the 'Pall Mall' Press, Holborn.

We have been favoured by Mr. Edward Arnold with a copy of his new, cheap, and well-printed edition of Mary Cholmondeley's very successful novel entitled 'Red Pottage.'

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

HER LETTER

By BRET HARTE.

With 9 full-page Illustrations in Colours and over 30 Tinted Page Illustrations, with pretty Head and Tail Pieces,

By ARTHUR J. KELLER.

Bret Harte's famous poems, 'Her Letter,' 'His Answer to Her Letter,' and Her Last Letter,' have been delightfully illustrated by the well-known artist, Mr. Arthur I. Keller, for this beautiful new holiday edition in which these three classic American love letters are now grouped together for the first time. As Harte has always been a favourite author with Mr. Keller, the artist has approached his work with a delicate and intimate sympathy which is everywhere apparent in the charming full-page coloured illustrations, the full-page sketches in tint, and the numerous decorations. The pictures of the heroine are unusually attractive. The title-page, in colour, is a unique conception by the artist.

Size $8\frac{3}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ in., with 16 full-page Illustrations, cloth gilt extra, 10s. 6d. net.

REGULATIONS.

1. BOOKS IN PRINT ARE NOT ADVERTISED FOR, but can only appear in the ordinary Column advertisements and at the usual scale rate. Every care is taken to prevent this rule from being infringed; but we cannot hold ourselves in any way responsible for occasional oversights. Subscribers are requested to make careful inquiry at the Publishers' before sending their lists for these Columns.
2. Collective advertisements are not admissible, except in the case of very old subjects, where it may naturally be supposed the Advertisers have a difficulty in obtaining the titles.
3. All lists should be sent to the Office, addressed to the 'Manager of the Publishers' Circular,' as early in the week as possible, and in no case later than Wednesday morning. Advertisements received too late for one issue (i.e., on Thursday) are not inserted in the next unless express instructions to this effect are given. This is to avoid any misunderstanding arising from charging for extra lines.
4. Every Annual Subscriber has the privilege of an Advertisement of four titles free each week in these columns, and can have extra titles at 3d. per title prepaid. For Non-Subscribers a uniform rate of 3d. per title prepaid is charged, the name and address being counted as one title.
5. The Proprietors reserve to themselves the right of refusing any Advertisement.

LIFE IN MOROCCO.

By BUDGETT MEAKIN,

Author of 'The Land of the Moors.' With 24 Full-page Illustrations.
Demy 8vo. cloth, 12*s.* 6*d.* net. [Immediately.

Mr. Budgett Meakin is already well known as the author of a comprehensive trilogy upon the History, Geography, and Ethnography of Morocco, three volumes which are recognised as standard works upon their respective subjects. In his new book, LIFE IN MOROCCO, the subject is dealt with in a more popular and picturesque manner, narratives of native life being introduced as well as pen sketches; by which means valuable sidelights on current events are obtained.

BLACKWOODS

Beg to announce that they have this week published two new books which they commend especially to the attention of THE SERVICES AND OF ANGLO-INDIANS.

I. Colonel HUGH PEARSE'S 'THE HEARSEYS' (15*s.* net) is the story of an Anglo-Indian family which gathers up the romance of English rule in our great Dependency in the East. It is told by the author of that romantic volume, 'Memoirs of Alexander Gardner.'

II. CHASSEUR'S 'STUDY OF THE RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR' (6*s.* net) comprises the brilliant series of papers so eagerly read while appearing in Blackwood's Magazine.

BLACKWOODS

have just added to their LIST these books, suited to the most varied tastes: Mr. A. C. NEWCOMBE'S 'VILLAGE, TOWN, AND JUNGLE LIFE IN INDIA' (12*s.* 6*d.* net), a charming volume of especial interest at this moment in view of the Royal Visit. The critics generally are agreeing with an authority in the Daily Mail, who said that the book 'will be read with avidity by all who have been in India or are in any way interested in that great Eastern possession.'

Sportsmen and naturalists always welcome an animal book if it is written with knowledge and enthusiasm; and such is Mr. RICHARD BELL'S 'MY STRANGE PETS' (6*s.* net). Never was there such a collection of strange fowl, and four-legged creatures and creeping things, as Mr. Bell keeps in his Scottish home and has brought into these pages. This book is 'a mine of information, suggestions, and stories,' says the Spectator, and all the other reviewers are of the same opinion.

A new volume by Mr. ALFRED NOYES is, Mr. R. C. Lehmann says, an event of importance to all lovers of poetry. The book he refers to is called 'THE FOREST OF WILD THYME' (5*s.* net). 'In future years,' Mr. Lehmann continues in his review of it in the Bookman, 'Mr. Noyes may attack enterprises of great pith and moment in poetry, but . . . he will not easily or often surpass what he has now done in this exquisite poem.'

BLACKWOODS

also have added to their FICTION the following EIGHT NEW SIX SHILLING NOVELS:

Two stories of Afrikander life and adventures by past-masters in that field. 'THE VROU GROBELAAR'S LEADING CASES' is by Mr. PERCIVAL GIBBON, the author of that remarkably strong first novel, 'Souls in Bondage'; 'RICHARD HARTLEY, PROSPECTOR,' by Mr. DOUGLAS BLACKBURN, the author of the well-known 'Prinsloo of Prinsloodorp.' Both stories have just finished running serially through Blackwood's Magazine.

A dainty comedy of the Eighteenth Century, 'MADAME, WILL YOU WALK?' by Miss BETH ELLIS, in which the critics say 'the author of "Barbara Winslow, Rebel," has achieved a triumphant success.'

A Historical Romance. Mr. W. J. Eccott's 'HIS INDOLENCE OF ARRAS,' which the Manchester Courier says 'will remind most readers of Dumas at his best.'

A novel of present day Society. 'MISS LOMAX, MILLIONAIRE,' by Miss BESSIE PARKER. 'Delightfully clever . . . a sparkling story.'

A Story of Russia to-day. Miss GARRETT MILL'S 'IN THE HANDS OF THE CZAR.'

A New Zealand tale. 'HELENA,' by Mrs. H. O. FORBES, in which, the reviewers say, delightful descriptions of scenery give charm to the genuine human interest.

A story which puzzles the critics. 'WHERE ANGELS FEAR TO TREAD.' This is a first novel and has been criticised unfavourably by some reviewers. But the majority are loud in praise of Mr. E. M. FORSTER'S story. Says Mr. G. F. G. Masterman in the Daily News, for example: 'It is told with a deftness, a lightness, a grace of touch, and a radiant atmosphere of humour which mark a strength and capacity giving large promise for the future.'

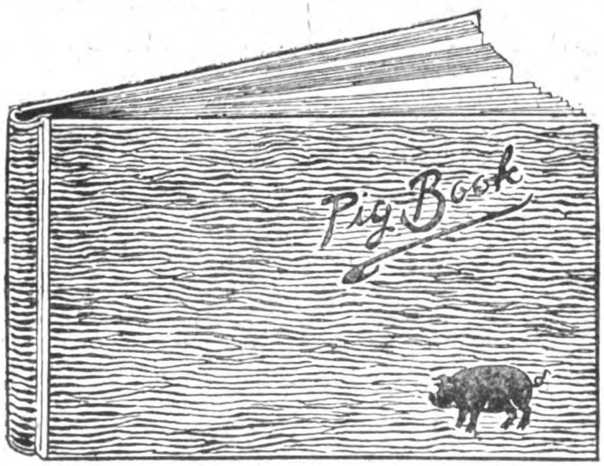
THE PIG BOOK

POURQUOI ?

Every pig has its day (even as a dog) and as there are many dog books, why not a Pig Book? We hasten to explain that a Pig Book is a book having reference to pigs. We give it this title because it sounds more polite than 'Pigs I have met.' As most people draw just as well with their eyes closed as open, the inflexible rule of the Pig Book is that the artist shall close his or her eyes, draw a pig on one of the pages, and lift the pencil before putting in (or out, as the case may be) the eye of pig. The artist then signs in order to fix the responsibility.

Some people can draw a pig, and most people think they can.

The line at the head of the title page is for the use of the owner, so that the page may read 'Mrs. Porkington's Pig Book,' or 'Chanticleer Hall Pig Book,' so to speak, as the case may be.—A. PIGGE.



'ALL IS NOT PORK THAT'S PAWKY.'

PUBLISHERS AND BOOKSELLERS

. . . AND . . .

'THE STANDARD' READING CLUB.

'The Standard' Reading Club benefits not only the book reader, but also the Publisher, the Bookseller, and the Author. The object of this new and successful enterprise of THE STANDARD is not to sell but to circulate books. It is aimed not at disturbing well-established conditions in the book trade, but in perfecting them.

THE PUBLISHER'S benefit consists in the fact that a Reading Club in which books are purchased on a more generous scale than that which distinguished the more old-fashioned circulating libraries necessarily acts as a powerful medium both for keeping the Publisher's name before the public and for putting money into his pocket.

THE BOOKSELLER'S benefit consists in the fact that, owing to new facilities for rapid distribution of borrowed books, the value of any book is more rapidly appreciated by the public, so that it finds its way more rapidly on to the shelves of the private library.

THE AUTHOR'S benefit consists in the fact that the possibility of a large audience for his work is brought nearer to him, and with less delay, than in the past.

Unlike other circulating libraries, the underlying principle of 'The Standard' Reading Club is the possession of an inexhaustible store of books from which to supply a subscriber. Much time is wasted in obtaining books, whether old or new, under a system which is based on keeping the smallest possible stock of books in the Library itself. The demands of the general reader are often capricious, and they have every right to be so, nor is he concerned with merely technical trade difficulties which are urged as an excuse for postponing the delivery of books which he may have ordered. The only way to ensure strict attention to his convenience and promptitude in ministering to it is to have a practically unlimited supply of books in the Library itself.

IN VIEW OF THE ABOVE REASONS, especially when they are considered together with the magnitude of the scale on which 'The Standard' Reading Club conducts its operations, it is perfectly clear that this institution is in every way to be regarded as a public benefit. Until now it had been a much-lamented but well-recognised grievance that many books lacked circulation because of the inadequacy of the mechanical means which were available to bring the author face to face with the reader for whom he wrote. The Quarterly, annotated Catalogue of 'The Standard' Reading Club is only one of the numerous improvements of these mechanical means.

Further information concerning the whole system of distribution, the terms of subscription, and the privileges attached thereto are to be found in the booklet which will be forwarded, gratis and post-free, on application to the Manager, 'The Standard' Reading Club, Shoe Lane, London, E.C.

'BOOK DESCRIPTION.'

UNDER this title Mr. James Duff Brown is contributing some very useful practical elementary information in connection with bibliography and cataloguing to the Library World. Mr. Brown is the Borough Librarian of Islington—famous for Gilpin, Lamb, and Curiosities of Literature—and the notes he is now publishing have been selected from a course of lectures delivered some years ago. We feel sure that if Mr. Brown would give us a little manual on the subject it would sell well both in our Empire and in America.

After glancing at the question of authorship Mr. Brown deals with and says that for many years after books were first printed from movable type the only clue to the contents of a book was to be found at the end in the colophon, a kind of valedictory address to the reader, running generally 'Here endeth,' &c., &c., 'imprinted' by So-and-so, in such and such a place, during a said year. These old colophons are often very full and often intentionally very mystifying. According to Bouchot's 'Printed Book' the earliest recorded attempt at a printed title-page was made in Venice in 1476. Misleading title-pages were just as common, Mr. Brown assures us, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries as they are now—only the other day one of the best of English novelists had to complain of a misleading title-page in our columns. 'Publishers were just as prone to re-issue old books with changed titles, and authors were just as ready to use titles which convey absolutely no information about the contents of their books, as they are to-day.'

PLACE OF PUBLICATION.

The next important point requiring notice in connection with title-pages, after authorship and title, is the place of publication. 'The difficulties in connection with these are caused in old books by the use of Latinised names, and in modern foreign books by the vernacular names.' Mr. Brown rightly complains that whereas many bibliographical works give the equivalents of the old Latin names of towns, they never by any chance give the same equivalents of their modern vernacular names. He thinks, for instance, one would easily guess that COLONIA stood for Cologne, but might never suspect that KOLN meant the same place.

DATE OF PUBLICATION.

The first book actually dated is said to be the Schöffer Psalter 1457. Until the formal title-page became generally established about 1520, most dates, if used at all, were placed in the colophon of the book. In many cases they were fully described in Latin words or phrases, such as 'Anno quingentesimo sexto supra millesium,' meaning the year 1506. Mr. Brown gives a sample of a chronogram from Hilton, who collected and translated most of these dates of publication hidden in cipher sentences, viz. :—

'stVLtVM est DIffICILes habere nVgas.'

Stultum est difficiles habere nugas.

Equal	V.	L.	V.	M.	D.	I.	I.	C.	I.	L.	V.
	5	50	5	1,000	500	1	1	100	1	50	5

By adding all these Roman numerals together, we obtain the year 1718.

ROMAN DATES.

We can hardly agree with this learned librarian that it is 'extraordinary' how few persons, including library assistants, can read the Roman numerals, so as to translate them into Arabic numerals. Life is too short to have to remember everything, and the longer one lives the more one forgets. Although M means 1,000 'in old books it is more usual to find the signs CIↃ and occasionally ∞ or ✕.'

Here are four distracting different ways of writing 1902 in Roman numerals :

MDCCCCII = 1902, or 1,000, 500, 400 and 2.
MDCDII = 1902, or 1,000, 500, 500 less 100 and 2.
MXCVIIIM = 1902, or 1,000 and 1,000 less 98.
MCMII = 1902, or 1,000 and 1,000 less 100 plus 2.

Here are some other examples :

MCCCCLXXZ. = 1472 ; MCCCCXXC. = 1480 ; MIIjD. = 1497 ; MID. = 1499 ; MCDXCIX. = 1499 ; ∞ DLXX = 1570 ; MDLXXII = 1573 ; CIↃIↃLXXVI = 1576 ; CIↃIↃXXCI = 1581 ; MVIcIX = 1609 ; CIↃIↃCCL. = 1750 ; CIↃIↃCCC. = 1800 ; MDCCC = 1800.

No wonder Mr. Brown says when a cataloguer has once mastered these difficulties, he or she need have no trouble in reading all the dates on title-pages.

MODERN DATES ON TITLE-PAGES.
A PROTEST.

We shall give the following extract without comment because it is a delicate matter to tell publishers of their sins in their own organ. All the same we entirely agree with all Mr. Brown says.

'As regards modern dates there is usually little difficulty, unless we consider the misleading practice of those publishers who date books one year ahead of their actual publication. In October, November, and December of every year hundreds of books are issued which bear the date of the following year. This might easily lead to grave errors, and may even cause endless controversy in cases where claims to priority and other evidence were involved. Wherever it is possible to ascertain the exact year of publication it should always be noted. The British Museum makes a point of indicating dates of publication where they differ from those on title-pages.'

Any signs which you cannot understand are a mystery. We wonder if secondhand booksellers are aware that many people construe the letters V D after the price of a book to mean 'very dear' as well as 'Very Dirty'—there is often considerable excuse for the error.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Mr. Fisher Unwin, as the projector of the very successful 'First Novel' series, might usefully supplement his scheme by a 'Last Novel' series. He has just published Mr. Clark Russell's last novel, 'The Yarn of Old Harbour Town,' which the author assures us will close his career as a writer of fiction. Mr. Unwin is, therefore, in a position to make a start with a 'Last Novel' series.

We would suggest to some correspondents who have written to us on both sides of the Times Book Club question that abuse, and especially abuse of individuals, is not argument, and we have no space for it.

The British Museum Library increases at the rate of about 150 volumes a day, not including Sundays, and totals nearly 1,900,000 volumes.

With the publication of the two volumes of 'Lectures and Essays,' Canon Beeching's task of arranging the literary remains of the late Canon Ainger is concluded. The subjects of the 'Lectures and Essays' are almost entirely of literary interest, and are all treated with that charm of manner which distinguishes all Canon Ainger's writings. Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will publish the book immediately.

Another work of importance promised on an early date by the same firm is the fifth volume of Dr. Courthope's great work on 'The History of English Poetry,' which covers the period between the Revolution of 1688 and the eve of the French Revolution. It is expected that another volume will see the completion of this important contribution to English scholarship.

Mr. Douglas Sladen's new novel, 'A Sicilian Marriage'—named after his 'A Japanese Marriage,' of which about one hundred thousand copies have been sold—will be published by Messrs. F. V. White & Co., in London, and Messrs. J. Pott & Co., of New York, on November 20. Mr. Sladen knows Sicily well from long residence there.

'The Scout's Alphabet' and 'Aids to Manœuvre Duties' are the titles of two new useful little works published by Messrs. Gale & Polden. We presume that the unpleasant smelling paste used in sticking the covers on is intended to throw the enemy off the scent.

'Gleanings from Venetian History,' by Mr. Marion Crawford, in two handsome volumes, is nearly ready for publication by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. The picturesque and stirring story of Venice affords Mr. Crawford full opportunity for the exercise of his great power of dramatic presentation, and for the graphic description of bygone scenes which throb with life and reality. The work is illustrated with thirty photogravure plates after drawings by Mr. Joseph Pennell, and there are 200 pictures in the text by the same artist.

We wonder if most people have noticed what a wonderful difference a good fluid ink makes in writing. We have often discarded pen after pen as bad when all the time it was the ink which had become slightly thick. Pens also get blamed at times when the metal holder is at fault—a holder which nips a pen because its curve is not the same as that of the pen often prevents the latter doing its best work.

Messrs. Methuen publish Mr. F. S. Robinson's book on 'English Furniture' in their 'Connoisseurs' Library.' This is the only work on the subject covering the entire period down to the beginning of the nineteenth century.

In the 'Stories from Shakespeare for Children,' which Messrs. Dent & Co. are publishing, a new volume will be 'King Lear,' with illustrations by Mr. T. H. Robinson. Mrs. Hoffmann has written this volume, as she has all the other volumes in the series.

Messrs. Macmillan & Bowes, Cambridge, are preparing for publication early in December a reproduction of Loggan's 'Cantabrigia Illustrata.' The book will be in folio, the plates averaging 11 by 9 inches, each with archæological and historical text on the opposite page by J. W. Clark, Registrary of the University, who also contributes an Introduction and Life of Loggan.

A volume of 'Counsels and Ideals from the Writings of William Osler,' Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford, is announced by Mr. Henry Frowde.

Messrs. Brimley Johnson & Ince, Ltd., are publishing immediately a new work by Mr. G. Lowes Dickinson, author of 'Letters from John Chinaman,' entitled 'A Modern Symposium,' illustrating, from an original outlook, the present confusion of political parties.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will publish on January 12 next Mr. Winston Churchill's work on 'Lord Randolph Churchill.' It will be in two octavo volumes and will contain several portraits.

'The Holy Christ Child,' a Devotional Study of the Incarnation, by the Rev. A. C. Knowles, Rector of Germantown, Philadelphia, will be published by Messrs. Masters & Co. in a few days.

Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son's colour-printing department sends us a sample of their work which is not only excellent in quality but great in quantity. It is a bold picture of an ocean liner—British, we hope—size 1½ feet by 2 feet.

The two volumes of the 'Poems of Shakespeare' published on the 9th complete Messrs. Methuen's Little Quarto Edition of Shakespeare. A mahogany revolving bookcase, which should prove as useful as it is handsome, is supplied for these forty dainty little books.

NATIONAL BOOK TRADE PROVIDENT SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Committee of Management held in Manchester on Friday, November 10, Mr. Young J. Pentland in the chair, it was unanimously agreed to remove the registered office of the Society to London. Mr. Brady intimated his resignation as Secretary, and Mr. Reginald W. Thornton, Chartered Accountant, 17 Philpot Lane, Fenchurch Street, London, E.C., was appointed to succeed him. The registered office of the Society will now be at Mr. Thornton's chambers.

HARMSWORTH INVADES AMERICA.

Sir Alfred Harmsworth has opened a New York office at 150 Nassau Street, in charge of C. Murray and N. H. Dubbs, and proposes to begin a campaign for a subscription book known as the 'Harmsworth Self-Educator.' Other lines of books are to be added to this publishing venture, we understand, should the proposed undertaking prove successful enough to warrant such an extension. A heavy advertising campaign will begin shortly, it is said. Incidentally, there is a belief that Sir Alfred intends to invade the American magazine field, either with a selection from his sixty-five British publications or new ones adapted to this country.—N.Y. Publishers' Weekly.

HOW NATURE HAS DISCIPLINED THE JAPANESE RACE.

'Were Kuropatkin able to fulfil his rash threat of invading Japan, the nation would probably rise as one man. But otherwise the knowledge of any great disaster would be bravely borne. From time unknown, Japan has been a land of cataclysms—earthquakes that ruin cities in the space of a moment; tidal waves, two hundred miles long, sweeping whole coast populations out of existence; floods submerging hundreds of leagues of well-tilled fields; eruptions burying provinces. Calamities like this have disciplined the race in resignation and in patience; and it has been well trained also to bear with courage all the misfortunes of war. Even by the foreign peoples that have been most closely in contact with her, the capacities of Japan remain unguessed. Perhaps her power to resist aggression is far surpassed by her power to endure.'—Lafcadio Hearn, in 'The Romance of the Milky Way and other Stories.'

'BOZ.'

'"Boz," my signature in the Morning Chronicle . . . was the nickname of a pet child, a younger brother, whom I had dubbed Moses, in honour of the Vicar of Wakefield, which, being facetiously pronounced through the nose, became "Boses," and being shortened "Boz." "Boz" was a very familiar household word to me long before I was an author, and so I came to adopt it.'—Charles Dickens.

A BOOK-BUYING INCIDENT.

A writer in a Scotch paper, signing himself 'W. S.,' tells an interesting story. Looking over a book-sale collection in the city of Glasgow, prior to the sale by auction, in one of the bundles he saw three tiny green-cloth volumes, and the author's name attracted his attention. They were tied together with a piece of twine, and labelled 'By Charles Turner.' He marked this lot in the catalogue and attended the sale next day. The auctioneer held up the three tiny volumes and said, 'Poems by Charles Turner.' One shilling was offered—his heart began to beat. The price slowly rose to 2*s.* 6*d.*, at which price the bundle was knocked down to him. And this is the sequel: When, later on, he opened the packet he found the following 'treasures': 'Sonnets,' by Charles Turner; 'Small Tableaux,' by Charles Turner; and 'Sonnets, Lyrics, &c.,' by Charles Turner. But who, the reader may ask, was Charles Turner? He was the elder brother of Lord Tennyson, and often is spoken of in literary circles as Tennyson Turner. The 'Sonnets' were published in 1864 by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., and the same firm published in 1868 the volume entitled 'Small Tableaux'; while Messrs. Henry S. King & Co. published the 'Sonnets, Lyrics, &c.' in 1873. Each of the tiny volumes is as clean as when it was issued from the press at the published price of 4*s.* 6*d.* each. But the volumes are enhanced in value to a greater extent than the monetary value, for each volume contains a beautiful and touching autograph inscription by the author to his friend ——, of Glasgow, a well-known litterateur, known beyond that city, too, for an interesting and suggestive study of the poet Wordsworth. The books had evidently been among his choicest book treasures, for, besides having the pencilled notes of the recipient, one of the volumes actually contains the obituary notice of the poet Tennyson Turner inserted. Further, there is a printed notice of the visit the poet made in 1772 on the Ayrshire coast at Seamill, and also his visit to Lochgoilhead, with his friend ——, and tells of how greatly impressed he was with the mountain scenery of our noble firth. One of the volumes contains a printed essay of R. H. Stoddard, the American essayist, on the poet, which is of some value. Think of it; all for half-a-crown! The writer showed the volumes to another—a bookish auctioneer—who said, 'You can any day get ten guineas for them, and some of the London collectors might even give more.

ARUNDEL SOCIETY.

The Arundel Society was organised in 1848 to promote the cultivation of art, by Thomas Howard, Earl of Arundel, its object being to publish engravings of rare and important objects not within the reach of the general public.

Mention the 'P. C.'—Our Readers who order books, &c. they see mentioned or advertised in the Publishers' Circular will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

SIR ALFRED BUYS THE GENTLEMAN.

Sir Alfred Harmsworth has bought the Gentleman's Magazine, and does not intend to alter its character much—we have more than enough of 'modern' magazines.

ON BEHALF OF THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Mr. George Seymour Snowden's West Kent Amateur Comedy Company will appear at St. George's Hall, Langham Place, W., on Thursday, December 14, at 8 p.m., in 'The Upper Crust.' The entertainment will be given on behalf of the Booksellers' Provident Institution. Tickets, price 1*s.*; reserved and numbered seats, 2*s.*, 3*s.*, and 5s., may be obtained from Messrs. W. & R. Chambers, Ltd.; Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.; Messrs. Macmillan & Co, Ltd.; Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., Ltd. (other houses will be asked); Mr. G. Larner, Secretary Booksellers' Provident Institution; and Mr. Geo. Seymour Snowden, 64 Tressillian Road, Brockley, S.E.

Publishers who have not sent blocks, &c., by the time this note is in print will, we fear, be too late for representation in our Illustrated Christmas Number of the Publishers' Circular.

THE TRUE STORY OF GEORGE ELIOT.

A first-cousin of George Eliot, the Rev. William Mottram, has written a book on 'The True Story of George Eliot in "Relation to Adam Bede,"' published by Mr. Unwin. It shows how the chief characters in the novel were drawn from the author's nearest relatives. 'Adam Bede' was her father; 'Dinah Morris' her aunt, the forgotten story of whose strange, noble life, written by herself, is largely quoted from in the present book; 'Bartle Massey' her schoolmaster; 'Mrs. Poyser' her mother, 'Seth Bede' her uncle, and 'Hetty Sorrel' an unhappy girl in whose tragic fate George Eliot was deeply interested. The scenes of the story are those among which she spent the earliest and most impressionable years of her life. The true story of all these characters, and of how the romance she wove round them grew up in the mind of the great novelist, is for the first time set forth in this book.

FORTUNES MADE IN BUSINESS.

Under the heading 'Fortunes Made in Business' the Daily Mail says: 'Mr. Henry Sotheran, the well-known bookseller, who died on July 30 last at the age of eighty-five, left estate of the gross value of £101,674 6*s.* 6*d.*

LONDON VANISHED AND VANISHING.

In London, perhaps to our material advantage, but to our great loss from the points of view of the artist and the lover of historical associations, we are perpetually being reminded that 'the old order changeth, giving place to the new.' The streets, the waterside, and the suburbs were a generation ago much as Dickens knew them in his youth; but recent changes have been so drastic that, except for the existence of important public buildings of ancient foundation, often cruelly restored, the old landmarks are almost all swept away, while those that remain are in constant danger of destruction. 'London, Vanished and Vanishing,' which is both written and illustrated by Mr. Philip Norman, contains a permanent record in colour of many of these picturesque landmarks, and will be of permanent value to those who study a most interesting subject. The volume will be published towards the end of the month in Messrs. Black's series of 'Beautiful Books.'

'IL LIBRO D'ORO.'

Mrs. Frances Alexander, who has translated from the Italian the more than 120 miracle stories and sacred legends which comprise the volume entitled 'Il Libro d'Oro' (just brought out by Messrs. Little, Brown & Co.), is in her ninety-third year. She is the mother of Francesca Alexander, whose 'Story of Ida' and collection of Italian legends published under the title of 'The Hidden Servants' are widely known. Mrs. Alexander resides in Florence, Italy. — Publishers' Weekly.

THE LADY AUTHORESS AND THE TIMES.

According to the Daily Mail, an 'immense circulation' lady authoress has told her publisher if he refuses to support the Times she will no longer support him. Will the Times publish for her in future?

ROYAL PLAYING CARDS.

According to a Spanish contemporary, King Alphonso's mother, Queen Christina, possesses one of the most interesting collections of playing cards in the world. Among others there is one set made of genuine ivory. It was the property of Prince Eugene and accompanied him through all his wars. Another set consists of Delft porcelain, the plates being not much thicker than usual writing paper; while there are other valuable cards made of linen, palmleaves, sugar-cane fibres, silver plates, &c. The collection is said to embrace over 1,000 very rare and therefore valuable games.

THE PROMISES OF THE TIMES BOOK CLUB.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

THE public must be the ultimate judges in regard to the controversy now being carried on concerning the Times Book Club.

In order to avoid the almost certain prospect of grave misunderstanding to which the complicated form and the verbiage of the prospectus are liable to give rise, perhaps it would be well to lay before our readers a careful analysis of the proposals, along with a statement of the facts.

The prospectus does not give a correct impression as to the facilities which have been accessible in the past, and is confused and confusing as to those now offered.

THE PROPOSALS.	THE FACTS.
1. You will obtain the newest books without irritating delays.	Subscribers are already complaining that they are kept waiting for new and popular books.
2. We shall not only order new books upon a scale much more liberal than is ordinarily adopted, but will make it a practice to order fresh copies whenever the demand proves to be greater than we had expected.	It is well known that the Times Book Club has in many cases ordered fewer copies of a book on subscription than Mudie's or Smith's. Every circulating library has been in the habit of ordering fresh supplies to meet the demand.
3. The books will not be disfigured by labels.	In the interests of authors this is by no means an advantage, as a label has proved to be a useful distinction between new and secondhand copies.
4. The books will be newly chosen.	So are those of every good circulating library in the kingdom.
5. You can keep any book that you wish to buy after you have read it. When you desire to place a volume in your library you need only notify us by sending a postcard and the book will be charged to your monthly account in accordance with the scale of discounts explained in this pamphlet.	So you can in the case of books from any lending library; all depends on the terms on which you can keep it and pay for it.
6. After you have read a book to the last page you may buy it upon terms so advantageous that you may during the period of your year's subscription obtain a discount ranging from 20 per cent. to 70 per cent. on the published price of every book you buy.	Not only subscribers to any library, but the public, whether subscribers or not, have for many years been able to buy surplus copies of most books six months or later after publication, at discounts extending to 80 per cent. off the advertised prices.
7. You will as a subscriber to the Times be able to buy books at—upon an average—about one half the published price.	So you can, in the case of most books, from library surplus copies.
8. A book such, for example, as a biography or book of travels, published 'list' at a guinea, will, if it is kept by a subscriber to whom it has been delivered fresh from the publisher's hands, be charged on his monthly account at 15s. 9*d.* instead of 21*s.*—that is to say, at a discount of 25 per cent.	It is impossible to say what a 'list book' is: to the trade the context would seem to indicate that it means a non net (or 'subject') book, but the public can hardly be expected to draw such a distinction—and may regard the word as including net books. If this is the case it is an infringement of the net book agreement. If it applies to non-net books only, you can buy them on precisely the same terms at almost any booksellers'.
9. The saving on net books will, as has been seen, be considerable when they are not absolutely new, although the trade agreement adopted by publishers prevents a discount upon new copies.	It is true that in one passage the Times writes: 'Desiring to purchase a book of which a new copy has been sent him, the subscriber may prefer to effect a saving by returning that new copy and asking that a class B, C or D copy may be reserved for him.' This does not prevent him, however, from keeping the new copy and buying it at a discount: it only offers him the alternative of a cheaper and more worn copy (cf. quotation 5 above).
10. The subscriber may thus enjoy the privilege of choosing from among four copies of a book at four different prices, and, at even the lowest of these prices, secure a book so recently published that it could not for a long time to come be obtainable from a secondhand bookseller. The Times books will differ from the usual secondhand books. An inspection of any ordinary catalogue of secondhand books will show that their average age is over a year.	The 'four classes' are here held out as one of the chief attractions of the Times scheme; they are dealt with in a later extract. The main contention here is that books do not find their way into surplus catalogues until an average of one year after publication, and that purchasers will obtain them sooner 'by a long time' through the Book Club. This is not true. Books are sold off secondhand, as a rule, six months after publication, and on terms quite as favourable as those offered by the Book Club.
11. The four prices mentioned above are as follows:
A. Absolutely new. Net books offered at net prices, subject books at 25 per cent.	These terms can be obtained at almost every booksellers' shop
B Clean and uninjured copies (in circulation about a month) at 35 per cent. discount off 'subject' (or non-net) books and 20 per cent. off net books.	Many libraries have endeavoured to sell off some of their books thus prematurely, but the proceeding was regarded as injurious to the interest of authors, and so a period of six months has been regarded as the limit of selling off, and has been, in general, honourably observed by the trade.
C. Sound copies of which the condition indicates about three months' use. Net books at 33⅓ per cent. off. Subject books at 50 per cent. off.
D Copies of which the condition indicates about six months' use. Net books at 50 per cent off. Subject books at 70 per cent. off.	There is nothing which has not been already conceded for a long time by the other circulating libraries. Indeed, in some of their catalogues even greater reductions than these are offered after six months from publication.

A close examination of the much-vaunted and advertised scheme, therefore, reveals the fact that in its main features it is precisely the same as that which has been carried on, without the great flourish of trumpets, for many years.

The main differences between it and the existing system are:

(i.) That it has been much more widely advertised.

(ii.) That the annual subscription is less, when the inclusion of the Times newspaper is taken into account.

(iii.) That there may be some increased facilities in the transmission and supply of books, although time alone can prove this.

(iv.) That under classes B and C the public are offered facilities for buying secondhand books much sooner than heretofore.

The ordinary reader may say, 'If the difference is, after all, so little, why are the booksellers opposed to the scheme?'

The main objection to the scheme lies in paragraph iv., and it is in this that the danger alike to authors, publishers, and booksellers lies. For many years past it has been a standing complaint of all owners of copyrights that the life of books has been tending to become shorter and shorter. This has been due partly to the increasing number of books published, partly to the increasing rapidity with which books pass into the secondhand lists and are offered for sale at greatly reduced prices.

By a common understanding, six months has come to be regarded as the minimum 'close time' for new books. This limit has been honourably observed by the leading libraries, but the Times now seeks to abolish it.

We observe that the attention of the managers of the Times Book Club was called to this point by the Council of the Publishers' Association, and their reply is that the proposition is 'foolish' and 'absurd.' 'No one would be so foolish as to buy a book in Class B and C and to pay for it in one or three months, when by simply putting it on their shelves and waiting for six months they could call it Class D and obtain both a larger discount and a longer credit.'

If the Times regards those who would avail themselves of the privileges of B and C foolish and absurd, why were these classes instituted and held out as incentives to subscribers? Moreover, the managers overlook the fact that subscribers by holding back a book till it reaches Class D are thereby limiting their power of borrowing for some months, and that they have therefore an extra inducement to purchase in Classes B and C.

And so it is for such illusory privileges as these that the public is asked to support a scheme which will tend to do very serious injury to the bookselling trade, and to aid in forming a huge American trust for dealing in literature. The Times managers in their replies to the publishers choose to regard the dangers as non-existent and the fears expressed as absurd, but in that case surely they should be ready to remove from their circulars the many statements which, at the least, are ambiguous and misleading.

Truly the motto over the door of the new premises in Oxford Street should be Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes.

BOOKS, LIBRARIES, AND LITERATURE IN DAYS OF OLD.

THE following extracts are from a long and most interesting lecture by Mr. Richard Cameron, F.S.A.Scot., the well-known secondhand bookseller, of Edinburgh, who, despite the fact that he is over eighty-two years of age, delivered it in the most spirited manner. The occasion was the opening of the thirteenth session of the Edinburgh Booksellers' Assistants' Association on the evening of Thursday, October 26, in the Protestant Institute, George IV. Bridge, Edinburgh.

Sir John M. Clark, Bart., presided, and there was an excellent attendance.

Mr. Cameron, at the outset, said that the subject, 'Books, Libraries, and Literature in Days of Old,' was both interesting and instructive, but it covered so extensive an area that it might well occupy many evenings to do it anything like justice. There were, he said, accounts of books and libraries in nearly every age of the world's history, and also of learned and eminent individuals to whom the writing, the study, and the collecting of books became an almost necessary part of their existence.

LIBRARIES OF THE ANCIENTS.

An interesting account was given in regard to the manufacture of books by the ancients, long previous to the invention of the art of printing, together with the various sorts of materials which were used. There were plates of lead and copper; tables of stone; bricks, tiles, and even oyster shells, employed to engrave upon such things as men wished for their own purposes and to transmit to posterity.

But as flexible matter, in process of time, came to be written upon, such as bark of trees, palm leaves, and latterly paper and vellum, it was found more convenient to make books in the form of rolls. These were composed of several sheets, or lengths, fastened to each other and rolled upon a handle, the whole forming a kind of column, or cylinder, which was to be manipulated by the handle, it being reputed a crime, especially with important books, to take hold of the roll itself. The ends of the handles were usually carved and mounted with silver, ivory, or even gold or precious stones. The title of the roll was put on the outside, and the whole when extended might be fifty yards in length. When in the library these rolls, or books, had the appearance of small pillars on the shelves.

The magnificent libraries of the ancients were filled with literary treasures composed of such manuscript rolls, but, unfortunately, a very large proportion of them perished by fire and pillage during wars and invasions, or by the corroding agency of time.

The discoveries which were made by the famous Layard in his excavations at Nineveh of what has appropriately been termed libraries of clay have clearly shown that the mode of keeping and preserving records in Assyria and Babylon was on prepared bricks and tiles, or cylinders of clay baked after the inscription was impressed.

Monastic Learning.

The overthrow of the Roman Empire in the fifth century by the barbarians of the North introduced some remarkable changes. Institutions which had been originated and promoted by civilisation were swept away, while learning, with its attendant privileges and benefits, seemed as if about to be obliterated. It was then that the monasteries began to be extensively established, and it was in those monastic institutions that learning found a haven of safety amid the violence and anarchy which reigned without. In those sacred asylums learning was permitted to enjoy tranquillity and repose, even by the savage hordes of the North who had overthrown the Empire. Those monastic institutions were under the supervision of the various orders of monks, and exercised an important influence in the world for upwards of a thousand years thereafter, being the principal agency in changing the social and political aspects of great nations.

Paper and Print.

The method of manufacturing paper was not known till about the twelfth century of the Christian era, but the art of printing was not invented till about two centuries later, consequently, previous to these two important discoveries, the labour and expense of multiplying copies of manuscript books rendered them extremely scarce and expensive.

But amid the almost universal darkness of those times, the Art of Printing was invented: an Art, which is worthy of being reckoned as the grandest and most powerful agency that has ever dawned upon the world. It has proved itself to be the great and beneficent pioneer of progress and civilisation, and admirably fitted to grapple with and extirpate both ignorance and superstition.

Shakespeare, Bunyan, and Goldsmith.

It is to be regretted that few of the early printed books have come down to modern times. It is on record that there are many books referred to in early literature which are now unknown, and which must have been worn out by use or have otherwise perished. But such may also be said regarding books of much later date than the really early ones. Take, for instance, Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress.' Why, the first fifty editions of it have long been scarce. Of the first edition, which was printed in the year 1678, only one copy was known to be in existence many years ago, and was then valued at £50. But, at a sale in London in 1901, a somewhat defective copy of the first edition of Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress' brought the enormous sum of £1,457.

The early editions of Shakespeare are now very rare, the small quarto editions of his plays which were issued in the poet's lifetime being now almost unprocurable at any price.

The First Edition of Burns.

Then, as is well known, Scotland has produced many eminent individuals whose admirable literary works have always been greatly appreciated throughout the world. Among such the works of our national bard, Robert Burns, occupy a front rank position, and the first edition of his poems has advanced enormously in value. In the year 1786 Burns ventured to issue his poetical works, so far as then written, in order to assist in defraying the expense of his then projected emigration to Jamaica. The volume was printed at Kilmarnock, the impression being six hundred copies, thin 8vo., bound in blue paper covers, the price to subscribers being three shillings each. At this modest price Burns realised a profit of £20, but, fortunately for Scotland, the book itself was the means of preventing the emigration of the bard, and he was thereby induced to remain in his native country and bring out a second edition.

From about the year 1850 copies of the now famous Kilmarnock edition reached the price of from £6 to £10, according to condition, and this was then considered to be a high price. But in those bygone days it was the custom for people to get their books neatly bound, and to do this the bookbinder had to cut or trim the edges of the leaves. Consequently very few copies ever turn up in their original state as first issued. Out of the 600 copies issued in 1786 only two copies in their primitive state have turned up in Scotland in recent times. The value of the book, however, in any state has now immensely increased. In the year 1898 a copy in the original blue covers and uncut edges was disposed of at auction in Edinburgh at the price of £572, and was bought by a London bookseller for stock. The second copy, also in the original blue paper covers, was for many years in the possession of a gentleman in Paisley, who purchased it for £10. He was, however, in 1903 induced to part with it at the price £1,000 in order that it might be permanently placed in the Burns Cottage Museum at Ayr.

It may safely be affirmed that no other work in the annals of British authorship can at all compare in enhanced pecuniary value with this the first edition of the poems of Scotia's national bard, Robert Burns. Issued in 1786 at the humble price of 3*s*., and in 1903 to realise the handsome sum of £1,000!

It is gratifying to know that this literary treasure is not leaving the country, but is to be retained in Scotland in all time coming.

Book Collecting the Most Interesting of Hobbies.

For the preservation of early printed or otherwise valuable old books we are mainly indebted to the collectors of large private libraries, to such individuals as may be said to have had a 'hobby' for book collecting. In modern times there have been many who have had 'hobbies' of one kind or other, and in many respects a 'hobby' is an excellent relief from the worry and excitement of business.

But of all known 'hobbies' book collecting, if judiciously gone about, is perhaps the most interesting, instructive, and entertaining. Some book collectors will only be satisfied with the finest and most perfect copies of the class of books they desire to possess. Others are not so fastidious, and wish the books, although not so fine. Some endeavour to obtain ancient Illuminated Manuscripts, or Missals, early printed books, rare editions of the Bible, Shakespeare, Burns, Bunyan, and others. Many, however, collect private libraries of useful books, so that in book collecting there is ample scope for diversity of tastes.

Sir Hans Sloane and Robert Harley.

Some may suppose that the formation of large private libraries can be of little practical public importance, but this would be a wrong idea. Many of the books which are issued, even for the humblest readers, are indebted to the rare and costly books in private collections. There have been eminent book collectors who have rendered most excellent service to the nation by bequeathing their libraries for the public benefit. Such a one was Sir Hans Sloane, who died in the year 1753, at the age of ninety-three. He possessed a rare library of some fifty thousand volumes, and his splendid benefaction formed the nucleus of the magnificent library of the British Museum in London, which now contains almost fabulous numbers of the rarest and most valuable books and manuscripts in the world. The grand national collection is at the daily service of the public, and is largely made use of by authors and others from all parts of the kingdom. Immense benefit is thus derived from the admirable literary stores of this most serviceable institution.

From among the many eminent book collectors who have passed away reference may here be made to a few. There was Robert Harley, who afterwards became Earl of Oxford. He began about the year 1705 to collect what ultimately turned out to be the most splendid library ever formed in this country. He was unremitting in his endeavours to procure celebrated old illuminated manuscripts and rare old printed books. He expended large sums of money in pursuit of them, and sent agents abroad to collect for him. After his death, which took place about the middle of the eighteenth century, the valuable illuminated portion of his library was purchased by Parliament for the British Museum, at the price of £10,000, where it has ever since been available for public use. The immense collection of printed books ought also to have been secured for the nation, but from some cause or other this was not done and the great Harleian library was dispersed at auction.

Letters to the Editor

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.]

THE TIMES BOOK CLUB.

SIR,—You ask 'A Businesslike Bookbuyer' whether he gets, or expects to get, 'a discount on boots, butter, bacon, or indeed on anything except books.'

He will no doubt reply for himself, but I should like to say that I expect to get and do get a discount on every one of those articles and on nearly every other thing that I buy. I get discount from my tailor (Standen), from my hatter (Lincoln & Bennett), and my wife assures me that she gets it on milk from Welford Dairy and on all groceries from Macbean. What else is the meaning of store prices?

But I will give another instance which is perhaps more directly to the point. Some years ago I published through my friend Mr. R. B. Marston a book at my own cost. Mr. Marston was good enough to make for me the arrangements with the printer and with the papermaker, and in each case he arranged for a discount, of which I got the benefit. When, however, it came to the selling of the book—which I, in culpable ignorance, had allowed to be published at a 'net' price—the bookseller was not allowed to give a discount for cash—consequently, of course, he did not get cash, neither did I, and I had to wait for my money and to lose no little of it in bad debts.

You, sir, ask whether we get or expect to get a discount on anything except books, and I ask you whether in anything connected with the production of books you ever fail to ask and to get a discount if you pay cash?—

Yours faithfully,

AN AUTHOR, BOOKSELLER, AND READER.

[Curiously enough, before our correspondent wrote to us and in anticipation of some reply of this kind, we asked Mrs. R. B. Marston if the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, and the rest allowed discount on her weekly bills with them, and she replied that they did not. The 'stores' question is too big to be dealt with in a note of this kind, but both Mr. and Mrs. R. B. M. have always preferred to support local tradesmen, and have had no reason to regret doing so, and have gained rather than lost by it. Some tradesmen allow 5 per cent. discount for cash, but 'A Businesslike Bookbuyer' wants 25 per cent., and the Times Book Club dangles 50 per cent. and even more than that before the British public as an inducement to buy the Times; but did any one of the millions of people who have paid 3*d*. for a copy of the Times during its existence ever expect a discount of even 5 per cent.?

A 5 per cent. discount for cash is not the same as a 25 per cent. discount which the booksellers are expected to give on non-net books—and long credit as well very often. Our view is that the competition of such institutions as Civil Service Stores and the Times Book Lending and Selling Club is essentially unfair competition and bad for everybody concerned. Avowedly the inducement is to get people to give up going to the established libraries and bookstalls by offering cheaper supplies and the Times newspaper. It is amusing to find that already the Times finds it impossible to carry out its promises. The chief real complaint against the other libraries was that you had to put on your list not only the books you wished to read, but twice as many, to give the library the option of sending those they have in stock. The Times now asks its club members to give nine titles when only three are wanted—and blames our old friends the printers, the binders, and even the publishers for the delay in delivery.—ED.]

SIR,—I have thought it may assist our comprehension of the latest phase of advertisement if we endeavour to arrange in parallel column the suggestions which, to the unprejudiced critic, may appear to be mutually inconsistent.

Thus I cull from the correspondence in your pages the following statements here abridged (the bracketed words being my own).

'We do not wish to undercut either in buying or selling'	'The subscriber may . . . at the lowest of these [four different prices just specified] secure a book . . . recently published . . . that could not for a long time be obtainable secondhand.'
'A man may take a book . . . and . . . have it at the end of three months . . . but he will have to pay the full price for it.'	'Our subscribers will find . . . books . . . offered . . . at 70 per cent. less than the published price six months before' [they would be available secondhand, i.e., by previous definition] in six months.
'If a subscriber desires [to buy cheap] he must return the new copy, and [another] the same book secondhand will be reserved for him.'	And you may 'buy books in course of circulation . . . seizing . . . those that you want and letting the others go back to the Times.'
Yet the Times 'does not for a moment anticipate that every book used for six months can be placed in class D.'	'After reading them you can keep any that you wish . . . paying less than a third of the published price if you wait . . . a few months.'

What is the net result of all these assurances? To define a 'secondhand book' may indeed be to twist a rope of sand; but surely it is clear enough that, in plain English, while 1 (a) the Times have no intention of underselling the regular trade—nothing of the kind—yet (b) they offer the public books still 'in circulation,' and long before they can be classed as secondhand—(if this process is not to be vastly accelerated, why the pointed reference to 'ordinary conditions'?)—at half-price or less, and in a condition undistinguishable, often as not, from new.

2 (a). The subscriber, we are assured, must return the new copy before claiming any reduction; yet (b) he may, if he prefers, seize those he wants and only return the others.

Lastly, 3 (a), he will have books offered him, while practically new, at 70 per cent. discount in less than six months; although (b) the Times itself does not anticipate 'for a moment' that it will be able so to offer them!

I am confident, Sir, that I voice the feeling of the general public when I assert (1) that the Publishers' Association is entirely right in their view of the general meaning conveyed and intended to be conveyed by the prospectuses, circulars, and advertisements of the Times Book Club; (2) that this esteemed body will prove themselves greener than any Pickwick wrapper if they are restrained from any action in their power by any protests or autocratic explanations whatever.

I remain, Sir (inclosing my card),

Yours, A BOOKBUYER.

SIR,—You want to know where I get 'discount' on boots, bacon, and butter? Let me advise you to go to the nearest co-operative stores, and, though it is not called 'discount,' compare its prices with those of ordinary credit tradespeople. It is after making one's purchases at the provision, drug, and similar departments (I name these specially as the average reductions for ready money approximate the old book discount of threepence in the shilling) that one feels resentment on going to the book department and being told that unless one wants a novel or a child's book one has to pay the same price as at the most fashionable credit bookshop. It is as preposterous as though the same stores told one that their reductions for ready money only held good in the confectionery and toy departments.

BUSINESSLIKE BOOKBUYER.

[We have given our opinion on the 'stores' question in answering another correspondent; but, as we have there said, if the ethics of store trading are to be introduced into this discussion it will never end, and do no good. You cannot ear-mark butter as you can books.—ED.]

DEAR SIR,—One of our publications—viz. 'The Life and Adventures of Charles Edward Stuart,' published in four volumes at 25*s*. each net—is catalogued on p. 578 of 'The Times Book Club' catalogue as at 18*s*. 9*d*. per volume.

As this particular work was subscribed to the trade as a net book, we beg to point out that the above-mentioned item appears without our sanction. As a matter of fact, we have refused to supply 'The Times Book Club' with any of our publications.—Yours faithfully,

For the Caxton Publishing Company,

BOOKSELLING AT FOLKESTONE.

DEAR SIR,—It does not appear to be generally known to the trade that I have purchased the business of the late Mr. C. F. Crux and also that I have discontinued selling newspapers. I should be much obliged if you would put a few lines to this effect in your valuable paper, to which I have been a subscriber for many years.

Yours faithfully,

MORE 'SUCCESSFUL BOOKSELLERS.'

SIR,—Owing to the very large number of orders we have received for copies of 'The Successful Bookseller'—which, by the way, we attribute largely to the wide circulation of your journal—we have decided to increase the edition in order to meet the demand for this work.—We are, faithfully yours,

THE SUCCESSFUL BOOKSELLER
PUBLISHING CO.

[The more Successful Booksellers the more we shall be pleased, especially in these days of Book Clubs.—ED.]

BOOK THIEVES.

DEAR SIR,—Some ten days ago I had the misfortune to lose a number of books. I herewith enclose a list of same, and would request you as a favour to kindly publish this in the CIRCULAR, pointing out to the trade that such books, if offered secondhand, are probably my property, and requesting booksellers to do what they can to trace their origin.

Thanking you in anticipation,
I remain, yours faithfully,

Notices of Books

From Mr. Edward Arnold.—'A Trombone and a Star,' by C. T. Podmore. The chief characters in this supremely ingenious novel of theatrical life are Mr. Bridge and his daughter Ada, the father being the trombone-player in the Frivality Theatre orchestra, while the daughter enacts the good fairy in the annual pantomime presented at that Thespian resort. Ada by her modest and skilful impersonation obtains the sympathetic interest and friendship of Richard Heneage Darnborough, a rich musical enthusiast, who is desirous of helping her in securing a more prominent position in her profession. His offer is respectfully declined, for the father has had sad experience of the dangers and jealousies relative to such a position, and moreover dreads the separation from his beloved daughter. Darnborough, however, does not despair of subsequently gaining consent to his project, and the remaining portion of the story relates to his persistent efforts on Ada's behalf. The characters introduced throughout the novel are living personalities, notably the old trombone-player, and the book itself is one that impresses the reader by the manifest humour and pathos which appear in its pages.

From the same.—'A Flood Tide, by Mary H. Debenham. In this novel of eighteenth-century life and manners we are introduced to the Fordyce family of the Manor of St. Mary in the Moat, and which, the author informs us by way of prologue, is 'one more story on the hackneyed old theme—the righting of a wrong.' This wrong is not only the result of an ancestral feud, but the eventual transference of the Crossbrook Manor, an adjoining property, in payment for a gambling debt incurred by Everard Fordyce. When the story opens Vincent Fordyce and his sister Pamela, who are the inheritors of the estate, while sojourning in London, make the acquaintance of Mademoiselle Marie Manon, niece of an old French poet living in lodgings in Soho. She is the daughter of a Parisian actress whom Everard married after his flight from Crossbrook, and is likewise the sole representative of the younger branch of the ancient family of Fordyce. Manon, otherwise Mary Fordyce, and her uncle, Monsieur Galet, are unfortunately the centre of an Anglo-French conspiracy, from which they emerge through the promptings of an unselfish love shown by Vincent and Pamela. This portion of the novel, with its exciting and critical situations, proceeds without pause until the final chapter, and the 'still waters' are reached after what has indeed been a stormy experience to all concerned. The novel, which has much charm of style, also testifies to the sincerity and living force of the art of fiction when in skilled hands.

From the same.—'The Brown House' and 'Cordelia,' by Margaret Booth. The stories contained in this volume will be found interesting to readers of bright and pleasing fiction. The first-named relates to a generous gift made by the venerable Mr. Brunt to his great-great nephew Gregory Basing and his sister Virginia, who are subsequently joined by Henriette Mackenzie, their cousin, as a participator of their deceased relative's bounty. The doings of these young people form the basis of this pleasant study of village life. The love affairs of Isabel and Cordelia Fane provide sufficient opportunity for the author's development of the various episodes of the narrative, while the characters are clearly though sketchily indicated throughout the latter story.

From Messrs. S. Bagster & Sons.—'His Divine Power, or the Holy Spirit of God,' by the Rev. H. T. Potten. This volume deals with a theme of great importance in relation to the Christian Church during the past centuries as well as that of to-day. The author writes most eloquently regarding the urgent need of spiritual zeal and power in the Church, likewise among the people, supporting his thesis by the teachings of history and from the records of heroic and saintly lives. It is in every way an inspiring book for thoughtful and serious minds.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—English School Texts. We welcome four more volumes of this series, containing 'Robinson Crusoe' (abridged), Kingsley's 'Heroes,' Lamb's 'Adventures of Ulysses,' and 'The Story of Sinbad' (from 'The Arabian Nights'). All are edited by Dr. W. H. Rouse, and the editor's work is judiciously and well done. We should advise every parent to put these volumes within reach of his children.

From Messrs. Chatto & Windus.—'The Speculations of John Steele,' by Robert Barr. John Steele, the predominant character in this story, starts life as 'station master, telegrapher, ticket agent, and man-of-all-work,' in a lone shanty known on the railway map as Hitchen's Siding. (Hitchen's Siding, it may be mentioned, is vaguely fixed up somewhere in the United States.) Here he is the means, by his resolution and presence of mind, of averting a terrible train accident, and as a reward finds himself transferred to the despatcher's office at Warmington, where his go-ahead, impetuous disposition gains him both enemies and friends. He certainly stops at nothing, and it being necessary to his plans that he should obtain a personal interview with the mighty Rockervelt, he actually kidnaps that tremendous potentate, but scarcely scores by his intrepid action. In later life John Steele abandons active railway work for the fascination of speculation, and in his new employment of amassing—and losing—millions, exhibits the same courage and sagacity remarkable in his previous career. However, he does not always get the best of it, and on one occasion when decoyed by a rival combination to a mining camp, he stands perilously in danger of losing his life. The weakness of John Steele apparently lies in his partiality for the fair sex, and it is satisfactory to find him happily married at last. But imagine being united to a woman who can in the most nonchalant manner put her name to a cheque for ten million dollars! What a banking account she must have had! Everything is on a rather large, distorted scale in this novel, but undoubtedly the same vigour which leads to exaggeration lends force to the story.

rom the same.—'Dilys: an Indian Romance,' by F. E. Penny. Mrs. Penny's story, in addition to the advantage of fine local colouring, possesses distinct claims to novelty of incident. Dilys Tregethin is the daughter of a Cornishman resident in India, who by an extraordinary series of happenings finds herself brought up amid gipsy surroundings, and is eventually carried off by the tribe. Deprived by death of both father and mother, her sole relative is an aunt in England, who makes strenuous efforts to trace the missing girl. Even when discovered, she again mysteriously disappears on the eve of the departure of aunt and niece for this country. Dilys has by this time developed into an heiress, and the next move in the problem of her recovery is that the younger brother of a lawyer in England is despatched with instructions to find and bring her back—even to marry her if such a step be necessary. It is really at this point that the story proper commences. The delegate armed with matrimonial weapons in the course of his inquiries meets the fiancée of a friend, a police officer at Cuddalore, and an ardent, mutual passion is the result, but happily the entanglement is straightened out by the attachment of the police officer for Dilys, whom he first meets in the disguise of a gipsy. The book is remarkable for several highly amusing character sketches. Among these is an old army pensioner, addicted to occasional outbursts of drinking, whom his native servant, a fellow of infinite sagacity, is only able to keep within doors by depriving of his white duck trousers, which strangely enough at such times are always required for the wash.

From the same. — 'The Princess and the Kitchen Maid,' by Dorothea Deakin. In this novel is brightly related the experiences of Maud, a young lady who unfortunately, through the incapacity and want of business foresight on the part of trustees, loses money her father entrusted to them on her behalf. She then resolves to gain a livelihood by accepting a situation as maid-of-all-work, even in opposition to the advice of a sympathetic friend, Christian Forester, who wishes to make her his wife. Bravely casting aside all regrets, Maud enters with keen delight into her appointed tasks, and by her cheerful ways obtains the regard and even affection of those with whom her mistress has daily dealings. Among these, Peter Leyland, a thriving young dairyman, finds most favour, becomes her accepted lover, and finally induces her to be not only his dairy partner, but in truth for life also. The charm of this story is apparent throughout, and we have found its perusal lively and amusing in the extreme.

From the same.—'Sacred and Profane Love: a Novel in Three Episodes,' by Arnold Bennett. This is indeed a remarkable story of the modern psychological type, having for its main theme the infatuations of Carlotta Peel, an imaginary and popular novelist, to whom the compositions of Chopin, she avers, were the chief factor in her emotional life. Her intercourse with Emilio Diaz, the brilliant pianist and musical composer, as well as the other personages that surrender to her influence, are well delineated and form exceedingly realistic conceptions. There is no lack of incident or interest in the book, but we have refrained from relating the whole plot, which, however, reaches an effective termination in true dramatic sequence.

From Messrs. T. & T. Clark, Edinburgh.—'The Christian Doctrine of Salvation,' by George Barker Stevens, Ph.D., D.D., LL.D. This learned and important work is the latest volume in the 'International Theological Library'; it is, even to the lay reader, a book of profound interest and irresistible appeal, both on account of its subject and also because of the large-minded way in which the subject has been treated. The author's aim has been to present a Biblical, historical, and constructive discussion of the Christian doctrine of salvation, the theme having been regarded and treated primarily as a subject of investigation. 'I have tried to judge the various opinions reviewed, and to test my own by means of the fundamental Christian concepts of God and of man.' The first part consists of an examination of the Biblical basis of the doctrine, and consists of one-fifth of the whole work; the second part, of much the same length, sets forth the principal forms of the doctrine, and here Professor Stevens gives abundant evidence of his intellectual energy and clearness of thought; the concluding part, of three hundred pages, is entitled 'Constructive Development of the Doctrine,' and is of the deepest significance. The work is written throughout in a clear, forcible style, and the author's arguments are always logical and convincing.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd.—'Cement and Concrete,' by Louis Carlton Sabin, B.S., C.E. During the last year or two quite a literature has been written on the subject of cement and concrete, and the most thorough and exhaustive works are those which have hailed from America. Mr. Sabin himself is an American, and he received his first practical training from one of the American pioneers in cement engineering. This in itself is no small recommendation, and if the reader requires more substanial proof of Mr. Sabin's ability and knowledge he has only to study this masterly work. To-day the young engineer frequently finds a good working knowledge of cement to be one of the essentials of success, and to gain this knowledge by practical experience alone is both slow and expensive; the student can have no more lucid or thorough work to assist him than this. The author has avoided a dogmatic statement of facts and a too detailed and extended series of tests; he gives, where practicable, sufficient tests to prove the statements made, and shows clearly the connection between theory and practice, the laboratory and the field. The book is divided into four parts, the first of which is the least important; the three last parts deal respectively with the properties of cement and methods of testing, the preparation and properties of mortar and concrete, and the use of mortar and concrete. There is a complete index, and many useful tables give the work additional value.

From the same. — 'The Reckoning,' by Robert W. Chambers. This story forms the fourth in a consecutive series by this author, having for their background the disastrous war of 1776–81 that resulted in the independence of the North American Colonies. Carus Renault, the hero of this romance of revolutionary times, is virtually a spy at headquarters on behalf of the Colonial Commander, Colonel Willett, although ostensibly acting as secretary to his kinsman, Sir Peter Coleville, the British representative in New York city. When the story opens there is living in the household, Elsin Grey (la belle Canadienne), who, notwithstanding her secret alliance with Captain Walter Butler, a merciless British officer, soon ingratiates herself into the good graces of Renault in order to discover his secret movements. Her behaviour leads to complications in which Renault is found to have sent a letter to General Washington, and by so doing is in jeopardy of being hung as traitor, but is saved from this ignominious death by the cool strategy of Elsin Grey. Subsequently Renault flies from New York, accompanied by Elsin, and they ultimately join Colonel Willett at Albany, who then employs Renault on a secret and dangerous military mission from which he happily returns in time to save his beloved, but persecuted and suffering Elsin, and likewise to take an active part in the stubbornly contested battle of Johnstown, wherein the colonial forces are victorious. The lovers then return to Albany, and on their arrival learn of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, at Yorktown, and the close of the war. Such are the chief features of this long romance, whose merit consists in the author's clear and graphic depiction of events in this period of our history, likewise in his portrayal of the Rebel and Loyalist characters who are the mainspring of a story that palpitates with life throughout.

From the same. — 'Wild Wings, Adventures of a Camera-Hunter among the larger Wild Birds of North America on Sea and Land,' by Herbert K. Job. Ornithology has engaged the attention of naturalists and travellers to a greater extent since Gilbert White of Selborne fascinated us with his unique record of the life of moor and woodland. Evidence of this comes to us in the increasing number of works devoted to this branch of natural history that are issued from time to time in this country and in America, as well as articles of frequent appearance in the public press of both countries. The volume now in our hands is an instructive and intensely interesting one, relating to some of the familiar habits of birds who help to give life and incident to the American landscape. It is the result of outing trips made by an enthusiastic lover of birds, and one who, as author, is also desirous that others should learn from the printed page somewhat of the fascination which the wild birds had for him 'in their grace and beauty and fulness of abounding life.' The progressive chapters, which are written in a style consistent with the subject, are devoted chiefly to the Pelican, the Heron, the Buzzard, the Egret, the Hawk, and the Owl. The book, which has an introductory letter by Theodore Roosevelt, contains many artistic illustrations from photographs taken from life by the author in his various journeyings and explorations.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'Sir Roger de Coverley and other Essays from the Spectator.' That fine old English gentleman whom we love, as Thackeray says, 'for his vanities as well as for his virtues' has not been better represented by pencil than in this handsome little book. This most delightfully human of characters, invented by Steele and developed by Addison, figures in thirty papers in the original Spectator and here in about a score, out of the sixty or more selected with good taste and judgment by Mr. Arthur Symons. The capital pictures, which are by Mr. H. M. Brock, number half a hundred. One of them, opposite page 300, shows the interior of an eighteenth-century bookseller's shop, and illustrates a paper of July 1712 which Steele feigns to have written in the back room of the shop while 'a very learned man with an erect solemn air' was being asked by the bookseller to pay for a book he had borrowed and lost; and, instead of giving him coin, gave him advice 'not to fret and fume,' but to 'be patient; the book is lost, but do not you for that reason lose yourself.'

From the same. — 'Essays in Revolt,' by Herbert M. Thompson. It is not necessary to agree with all the author says to recognise that here we have a very carefully considered discussion on what should be taught in our schools, and the best and most comprehensive way of teaching it. Mr. Thompson is very certain of his own views, but at the same time he is eminently fair in dealing with the opinions of others, and with the systems which have hitherto prevailed. His essay on history teaching seems to us altogether admirable. To advance from what is known to what is unknown is the common-sense method, and must surely be right, and there is no doubt that the history nearest to our own times receives far too little attention. On the subject of classical study his arguments are sound: too much study is devoted to them; but we should not discard Latin and Greek to the extent which Mr. Thompson seems to advise. Concerning the first essay, 'Moral Instruction in Schools,' we quite see the force of the arguments used, but we are not in agreement with the author on many points. The subject is, of course, a very difficult one to deal with, as indeed are all questions turning upon religion, and to find the happy middle path seems wellnigh impossible. One is almost obliged to take sides, and any criticism must necessarily be biassed. The book is exceedingly thoughtful, and is a valuable contribution to the literature upon the subject. It demands careful reading in its entirety, and the reader should be wide-minded enough to appreciate it, in spite of the many things in it with which he will not be able to agree.

From Mr. Henry J. Drane.—'A Solicitor's Love Story,' by A. Charles M——. The author in his Preface says that 'Business has a great deal to answer for.' This remark applies to much in the novel he has written. Even Sir Thornibull Nutil, the prominent and crafty inventor and financier's troubles are the outcome of his scheming transactions, while the retribution that at last overtakes him is to be traced to the same source. The numerous subsidiary characters concerned in the development of the author's plan, embracing Mr. Moths, the family solicitor, and his adopted daughter Amy, her lover Arthur Temmeron; Calco Gridd, the faithful confidential clerk; Betsy Brosentuft, the spinster schoolmistress, and Jabez Frogmarsh, her helper and eavesdropper, together with the associates of Sir Thornibull Nutil, make up a gallery of distinctive modern types that divide the interest of this remarkable but intensely realistic story of Manchester life.

From Mr. Alexander Gardner, Paisley.—'Bobbie Guthrie, a Scotch Laddie,' by A. Nicol Simpson. The village of Nockven was celebrated in its way for having among its residents many esteemed worthies of a pawky type. It is, however, with Sam'el Guthrie, the miller, and his wife Jean that we are most intimately concerned, for their son, Bobbie, the wayward boy and 'village pest,' is the hero of the story in more senses than one. Notwithstanding his misdemeanours he manages to secure the goodwill and friendship of the kind-hearted Dr. Webster, and also the affections of Marjory Rae, the deacon's daughter. The crisis in Bobbie's life is reached when he volunteers for active service in the South African War, and by his valorous deeds and consequent honours makes genuine amends. The hero's return to Nockven, and marriage to the 'girl of his heart,' form the natural conclusion to a well-told story which we have read with unabated interest throughout.

From the same.—'Logie: a Parish History,' by R. Menzies Fergusson, M.A. Vol. II. The first volume of this exhaustive work dealt with the Ecclesiastical History of the Parish, and in the second an account is given of the Lands and their Owners. The information has been obtained from historical sources — the charters and writs of the various estates, and public and private records. Among the holders of land will be found the Stuart sovereigns, some of the ancient religious houses, and many of the noblest and oldest families connected with the Scottish nobility. There is a large amount of genealogical information of great value, and the documents and books examined and quoted from are of considerable interest. One of the most attractive features of the work is the illustrations; these are numerous and of excellent quality. Mr. Fergusson is to be congratulated on the care and industry he has spent on this Parish History; to future historians his two volumes will prove invaluable, for from the first page to the last his work is thorough and accurate.

From Messrs. Gay & Bird.—'Kokoro,' by Lafcadio Hearne. Hitherto this work has only been imported from America, and we heartily welcome this popular edition, for which there should be a large sale. Japan and its people, at the present time, have the eyes of the world upon them; and perhaps no Western writer has understood them so well and got so thoroughly into their inner life as Lafcadio Hearn. These sketches, hints, and echoes, as the author calls them, tell us far more about the people than any history could do, and help us to understand how it is that the last forty years have seen such changes in Japan. Knowing both East and West well, the author is able, so to speak, to translate Eastern thought into language the West can understand, and his essays on ancestor worship and the religion of Japan are certain to give us a wider and better conception of this truly marvellous people. And quite apart from his intimate knowledge, there is a graceful charm about the writer which is irresistible, and he displays a depth of thought which makes this work altogether a remarkable one.

From Mr. L. Upcott Gill.—'Handbook of English Antiquities,' by George Clinch, F.G.S. Here is a very large subject pressed into a very small space, and not without some success. It would be hard to get more information into the space, but it is somewhat doubtful if there is quite sufficient for the collector and the student, for whom the book is designed. The author has endeavoured, we think, to cater for too wide a circle and to cover too large a field. As an introduction to the study of English antiquities, however, it may be useful, and the work is very fully illustrated, which enhances its value.

From Messrs. Greening & Co., Ltd.—'After-Dinner Ballads' and 'The Maiden,' by Hubert C. S. Colborne. The latter is a poem in the Ingoldsby manner up to date, and this, with some of the ballads, would be quite suitable for delivery by popular entertainers.

From the Hermes Press.—'Osrac, the Self-Sufficient,' by J. M. Stuart-Young. This volume of poems and reminiscences is a tribute to the memory of Oscar Wilde. While mature neither in conception nor execution, the verses have the true ring about them; occasionally they reach a height of indisputable eloquence, and here and there is a stanza of real beauty and feeling. Mr. Stuart-Young became acquainted with the poet a short time before the catastrophe which ended so abruptly that brilliant and tragic career; though the recollections here set forth are but slight, they are nevertheless interesting and of some value. One closes the volume with sad reflections: the pity and tragedy of it all seem emphasised by the record of this friend, who instead of reproach has kind words of sympathy to offer, and who in the place of recrimination brings regret.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—'Charlotte Brontë and her Sisters,' by Clement K. Shorter. Mr. Shorter has now come to be looked upon as a profound Brontë scholar, and, undoubtedly, if close attention to the career of the famous sisters and their surroundings entitles to such distinction, is he well qualified for the honour. In his present contribution to the series of 'Literary Lives,' so ably edited by Dr. Robertson Nicoll, he is mainly content with a refurbishing of old material, mainly derived from the Haworth edition of Mrs. Gaskell's celebrated 'Life' and his own previously published book on the subject, but such information as has since come to light concerning the Brontës has also been incorporated in the narrative. The main object has been to allow Charlotte Brontë to tell her own story through the medium of her correspondence, much of which has been disclosed since Mrs. Gaskell's time. That the volume possesses great interest there can be no question, and the excellent portraits with which it is adorned give further distinction to the work.

From the same.—'The Last Things,' by Joseph Agar Beet, D.D. This volume is a careful revision of a work published in 1897, which was withdrawn by the author in deference to the wishes of many of his friends in the Wesleyan Church. The ideas expressed may to some extent be revolutionary, but at least they do not go beyond what many religious people hold and believe; in fact, there is a sense of disappointment in the somewhat indefinite way in which Dr. Beet concludes an able exposition of the Scriptures concerning the final separation of good and evil, and the doom of the wicked. Beyond a scholarly attempt to show that the doctrines of eternal punishment, universalism, annihilation, and probation after death are not consistent with the teaching of the Bible, or rest upon a very unsubstantial basis, he does not go; and, of course, it may be argued that a position of ignorance in the matter and a trust in God's mercy is the only possible one to take. At the same time the lay mind cannot refrain from asking more from its teachers. If they are able to refute what we have believed, it is impossible not to demand that they shall give us something that we can believe in its place, for to be left unsatisfied and without an anchorage is dangerous. The book has, however, much—very much—to commend it, and earnest seekers after truth will find in it much food for reflection.

From the same.—'The Claim Jumpers,' by Stewart Edward White. This is a well-written and breezy love story set in South Dakota. The 'Mountain Flower,' otherwise 'Lawton's Girl,' otherwise Miss Fay, is a very charming personage, and quite worthy of so good a fellow as Bennington de Laney. Owing to the love affair which absorbed the hero, the claims he was looking after were nearly 'jumped,' and the manner in which this attempt was met and defeated is briskly told. Bennington shows grit under difficulties, but the love story is the thing, and very good it is, too. Like Miss Fay, we are rather curious to know how Bennington would have acted if things had turned out differently.

From Mr. T. Werner Laurie.—'Notes from my South Sea Log,' by Louis Becke. These random sketches of trading, fishing, and seafaring in the South Seas are very charming, having an atmosphere all their own. There is a lot of information to be gleaned from the book, and knowledge acquired this way is always pleasant. There is plenty of humour, too, and the story of Saunderson and the devilfish will appeal to most people. It would seem that the author has no great love for missionaries, especially American ones, but perhaps in this respect he may be rather prejudiced. We are not called upon to judge him from this standpoint, and we can thoroughly recommend this 'log' of his to all lovers of sport, and, indeed, to all who appreciate breezy sketches of open-air life, and are glad to have the opportunity of laughing heartily occasionally.

From Mr. John Long.—'The Selling Plater,' by Nat Gould. The reader is always certain of a succession of lively incidents in Mr. Gould's novels, and 'The Selling Plater' in this respect is no whit behind any of its predecessors. The characters too are strongly outlined, and alike in their deeds of virtue and villainy are uncompromisingly consistent. Altogether a rattling good story, told with fascinating vigour and welcome vivacity.

From the same.—'Flashes from Cape Diamonds,' by Jack, the Connaught Ranger. The various brief prose sketches contained in this book are from the pen of a ready writer who is already familiar with the multifarious life of South Africa. They are mostly written in a piquant manner, and we recommend those entitled 'The Irish Postmaster,' 'Tit for Tat,' 'How to Raise the Wind,' and 'Without Fear of Contradiction,' that will be found by the reader veritable transcripts of Hibernian life and character.

From the same.—'The Tenderfoot,' by W. J. Sheppard. The hero of this story, Jim Croft, was the son of one of the brave early settlers in the young Colony of South Australia, and in every way a veritable squatter. He succeeds his ill-fated father in the ownership of a successful sheep and cattle run at Maroura, and is the recognised lover of Jess Vane, the daughter of a reckless Melbourne financier, and who proves herself to be a delightful and faithful fiancée. Early in the story there arrives from England one Harry Vincent, the son of a distinguished Tory gentleman, with a desire to study colonial methods and also to improve his failing health. Vincent's acquaintance with the Croft household results in his becoming betrothed to Helen Craft, the settler's sister. Subsequently Jim Croft joins an exploring expedition to the interior of the Colony, and upon the death of his companions is compelled by stress of circumstances to reside in the camp of a native tribe. His relatives, fearing the worst, at once organise a relief party, including John McKenzie and Bill Bonnar, experienced and friendly bushmen, who are also accompanied by Harry Vincent. After many exciting adventures among the aborigines, in which they all share, Jim Croft, who is the means of saving the life of his prospective brother-in-law, is at last rescued. This portion of the novel has passages showing unusual descriptive power, and altogether the author is to be congratulated in writing a book which makes very good reading.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—'The Model Kitchen,' by Lucy H. Yates. The intelligent housewife who is something more than a mere automaton is bound to find great interest in this work. She will find opinions expressed in regard to the equipment of a kitchen, the arrangement of a store-cupboard, gas cooking stoves, the use of many utensils, the right selection of and combination of foods, the cooking of vegetables and dressing of salads, the advantages of French fireproof china, and so forth, with which she may occasionally disagree, but which will undoubtedly earn her consideration and respect. The book is particularly well illustrated for a volume of its size, and has a good index—two further recommendations that can be placed to its credit.

From Messrs. Luzac & Co.—'Sri Brahma Dhárá.' This book contains the teachings of the Mahatma Śri Agamya Guru Paramahamsa, and will well repay a careful perusal. The mysticism of Indian thought is difficult for the Western mind to follow, but the plan of this volume—questions and answers between pupil and teacher—renders it as easy as it possibly can be made. The unreality of the material, or spiritual, is the foundation of the teaching, and if some of the ideas strike us as quaint and rather illogical, the fact is hardly remarkable when we remember the different trend of thought between the East and the West. On the other hand there is much that is deep and fundamentally true, as, for instance, the answer to the question, What are virtue and vice? 'The bent of mind towards self-command is virtue; and towards self-interest, without care for others, is vice. In other words, the checking of the ego is virtue, and the fostering of it is the definition of vice.' A word of warning: the term 'Mahatma' does not indicate a supernatural and rarely visible being, as many of us are inclined to think; a Mahatma is a teacher, and does not claim to be a mysterious person.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—'The Last Chance,' by Ralph Boldrewood. We regret that we cannot speak very well of this tale. The first hundred pages or so show the author's usual capacity for describing mining life, but it falls off towards the end, and is padded out by some fifty pages of guide-book and sentiment that is quite unworthy of this author.

From Mr. Elkin Mathews.—'Ways of Verse,' by Arthur Lewis. Truth to tell, the poems in this little volume do not greatly impress us. There is a scholarly instinct in them, but there is little that lives in the memory, little of that spontaneity which marks the true singer and demands attention. We are of course judging by a high standard—poetry is of small worth unless it can be so judged—and we do not mean to suggest that the book will not repay perusal. That we do not find ourselves in tune with it is not to say that others may not. Certainly 'In Hermitage' has some power, and the verses entitled 'Doloroso' ring true. We quote the last stanza:

> I am alone—and that is there—
> And I may kneel beside the cot,
> And reach and touch; but to despair.
> No voice—no answer to be got
> From that which is, and yet is not.

From the same.—'Studies in Rhyme and Rhythm,' by Charles F. Grindrod. We like the verses contained in this volume. They are generally musical, and there are few signs of effort. The series of 'Love Sonnets' and 'The Ode to Sorrow' are the chief items, and they are both very good; but we like some of the short verses better. The 'Wine Song' is attractive, and so is 'Good Night,' and indeed many others might be mentioned. It is a little volume which is well worth keeping.

From Mr. John Murray.—'An Elementary Greek Grammar for Schools'—Part I.: Accidence, by John Thompson, M.A. It is perhaps a little difficult to introduce any new methods in the teaching of Greek grammar, and perhaps too great a tendency towards novelty is to be discouraged; but there are one or two features in the present volume that are distinctly worthy of approval. Prompted, as the author points out, by the great importance of the appeal to the eye in the case of young students, special attention has been paid to the type and the arrangement of the printed matter. Attic Greek only has been included, and the usages of poetry distinguished throughout from those of prose. Unnecessary and unusual forms have been left out, and the author has endeavoured to state all the requisite facts, both of accidence and syntax, in the clearest possible manner, while at the same time taking every advantage of modern scholarship, so that the book may be thoroughly up-to-date. The principles and methods, for instance, of Brugmann and Delbrück are followed rather than those of Curtius and Schleicher. Mr. Thompson's work, which is published in two parts—the first containing the Accidence, with two Appendices on Accents and Some Sound Changes, and the second the Syntax—will, we are confident, be found of invaluable service as a school manual.

From the same.—'The British Trade Year-Book, 1905,' by John Holt Schooling. Mr. Holt Schooling is a master in the science of statistics; he prepares them with elaborate care, and the results of his investigations are always presented in an original and vivid manner. That a little knowledge is a dangerous thing is clearly demonstrated in this particular science; the man who is not an expert may fall into the most treacherous pitfalls if he attempts to manipulate figures. The purpose of the volume before us is to exhibit the course of British and international trade widely surveyed over a period covering the last twenty-five years; Mr. Schooling has purposely refrained from setting forth the results for individual years, as these would be misleading and confusing. It must not be supposed that the author has made a contribution to the fiscal controversy; he has simply recorded carefully collected and collated facts, and presented them to the reader in a simple, straightforward manner. However, the book will no doubt prove of great service to sincere partisans of both sides of the controversy, for it corrects more than one popular error and clears up many a hitherto disputed point. The following are the headings of some of the more important chapters: 'Imports,' 'Exports,' 'Bullion and Specie,' 'Manufactured Goods,' 'Our Trade with Foreign Countries,' 'Taxes on Imports,' 'An International Comparison of Imports and Exports,' and 'The Leading Articles of Export. There are a large number of excellent tables and several Appendices. A highly useful volume of great interest to all engaged in, or concerned with, trade.

From the same.—'China and Religion,' by Edward Harper Parker, M.A. China has been to Professor Parker a lifelong study; it would be no exaggeration to say that its language, history, and religions are as familiar to him as the language, history, and religions of his own country. With the knowledge of a scholar he combines an uncommon literary gift, and his writing is always lucid and attractive. In his latest volume he has presented to the general reader, in comparatively simple sketch form, the whole history of the religious question as it has affected the Chinese mind. The first chapter deals in a picturesque manner with China's primitive religion, and the interest of the reader is at once aroused; succeeding chapters deal in turn with Taoism, Confucianism, Buddhism, Fire Worship and Manicheism, Nestorianism, Islam, the Jews, the Roman Church, Protestantism, the Orthodox Church, and Shintoism. Professor Parker has been very successful in his presentment of obscure and sometimes involved material; though his exposition is so simple that it may be apprehended by any person of average attainments, it is nevertheless always the exposition of a scholar. The book is well illustrated and indexed.

From Messrs. G. Newnes & Co.—'Dante Gabriel Rossetti,' by Ernest Radford. It was fitting that an account of this gifted artist should occupy a place in the 'Art Library,' issued by this firm, for he not only had an ardent sympathy with the spirit of beauty belonging to an earlier world, but held for many years a distinguished position in the ranks of those painters who have raised and changed the spirit of modern art. The editor's Introduction to the book gives an account of this and other interesting facts relative to Rossetti's career, while the accompanying illustrations from the artist's famous works are all commendable reproductions.

From the same.—'The Plays and Poems of Christopher Marlowe. This dramatist familiarly known as Kit Marlowe, was the most illustrious of all the contemporaries of William Shakespeare, and the man who first realised the power of tragic expression there was in blank verse. His plays grow into fuller appreciation as Englishmen value their literature more. It is only fitting, therefore, in these prosaic days that readers should have an opportunity of perusing such compositions as 'Edward the Second,' 'The Jew of Malta,' and others, in a complete and convenient form. The volume is an addition to this firm's 'Thin Paper Classics,' and is issued in the same choice form as its predecessors.

From Mr. David Nutt.—'India and the Apostle Thomas. An Inquiry, with a Critical Analysis of the "Acta Thomæ,"' by A. E. Medlycott, Bishop of Tricomia. The ecclesiastical tradition regarding the Gospel having been preached in India by Thomas the Apostle has gained some credence. The subject is again fully discussed in this erudite volume, and will no doubt receive appreciative attention from Biblical scholars and others. The book contains illustrations and a sketch map of San Thomé, Mylapore, and Environs.

From Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co.—'Andrew Bennett's Harvest, or the Shadow of God's Providence,' by Lydia Phillips; 'Caravan Cruises, or Five Children in a Caravan—not to mention Old Dobbin,' by Phil Ludlow; 'Dick's Desertion, a Boy's Adventures in Canadian Forests,' being a Tale of the Early Settlement of Ontario, by Marjorie L. C. Pickthall; 'Fern Dacre, a Minster Yard Story,' by Ethel Ruth Body; 'Missionary Heroes' (Stories of Heroism on the Mission Field), by Charles D. Michael; and 'Patsie's Bricks,' by Lilian S. Mead. These several stories are well written and also appropriately illustrated. They are eminently suitable for the perusal of young readers of both sexes, inculcating, as they do, the virtues of generosity, self-sacrifice, filial love, and humanity, as well as persistent endeavour towards all that tends to the building up of true character in the affairs of life and Christian faith in that beyond.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner & Co.—'The Human Touch, a Tale of the Great South-West,' by Edith M. Nicholl. The principal actor in this romance of American life is David Kingdon, a wealthy ranchman, who has contracted an unsuitable marriage. News, however, reaches him that his wife Clairette was found drowned. After a time David again enters into the married state, his affections being fixed on Sylvia Newman, but their happiness is, however, shortlived. The report of Clairette's death is premature, so that husband and wife are re-united. Sylvia at once recognises her illegal position, and, upon quitting Kingdon, subsequently finds a new home with a faithful servant, Aunt Julie, and here a son is born to her. There is a silver lining to every cloud, for among the bright spots in Sylvia's life at this trying period are the sympathetic visits paid to her by David's lifelong friend, Mrs. Johnson. The dramatic interest of the novel is concerned further in the development of a bitter race feud between Kingdon, Vincent Berry, and his father, 'Long Tom,' which reach tragic issues in the wounding of the former and death of Vincent. However, 'all's well that ends well.' A divorce takes place between Clairette and David, whereupon the latter returns to his sometime 'lost but only love.' This romance has the dual merit of being well conceived as well as interesting, and it is a creditable specimen of the new school of American fiction.

From Messrs. Lovell Reeve & Co.—'The Uses of British Plants, traced from Antiquity to the Present Day; together with the Derivations of their Names,' by the Rev. Prof. G. Henslow, M.A., F.L.S., &c. The writer of this compact manual not only deals in a scientific way with this special branch of botanical study, but has endeavoured to render his book an interesting guide to the general reader for a better conception of the domestic value of the various plants and wild flowers to be found in English fields and hedgerows. The book is lavishly illustrated throughout the text.

From Messrs. Seeley & Co.—'The Little Colonel in Arizona,' by Annie Fellows Johnstone, with illustrations. This story reminds the reader a good deal of Miss Alcott in that it deals with the doings of a group of American children and their efforts to live a healthy everyday life with high ideals. A family of boys and girls, with their delicate widowed mother, settle in Arizona for the benefit of the latter's health, and the elder children have to do most everything, as funds are very limited. We are interested in learning how they overcome their difficulties, physical and mental, and we get to know each member of the family group fairly well. We can appreciate how Jack's resolve to fill his father's place, seldom forgotten, influences a high-spirited boy, and how Joyce becomes a second mother to her brothers and sisters; fat and happy little Mary, too, we have met many a time among our juvenile acquaintances. We also get a capital idea of life in Arizona, on the borders of civilisation, where many things are lacking that might be considered necessaries. We believe that there is a great probability of Miss Johnstone taking the place, at present vacant, of Miss Alcott.

From Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co.—'Hafod Glyn, and other Poems,' by F. S. Perkin. (Uttoxeter: W. H. Hearson; London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton & Co., Limited.) The poems contained in this little volume are the outcome of the contemplations of a writer who has visions of those things which are 'true and lovely and of good report.' Although not having reached the Parnassian heights, he is nevertheless a recognised son of the muses. The titular poem, 'Hafod Glyn,' has some vivid descriptions of the sylvan features of the South Wales landscape. Among the minor poems we mention for commendation 'Heavenward' and 'The Sparrow's Appeal' for their optimistic tone and tender sympathy. The little book is attractive both in outward and inward appearance.

From Messrs. Swan Sonnenschein & Co., Ltd.—'Oak Farm,' by Georgie Martin. This is a pleasant little love story, and the few characters are well developed. Mildred Denis, to save her brother from disgrace, consents to marry—and, indeed, does marry—a villainous specimen of humanity, Joe Blake, and under what circumstances the marriage was declared null and void the reader may well spend an hour or two in finding out. There is no pretension about the little story, but it is worth reading.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'The Journeys of Antonia,' by Christian Dundas. In the hurry of catching a train at the Gare de Lyons, Antonia Bernard is separated from her cousins, a married couple, with whom she is travelling. She waits for them at the first stopping place, but as it is night when the next train comes in she has to run up and down calling her cousin's name, George. A voice answers her, and when too late she finds herself travelling with a stranger, George Morrier. Both Morrier and Antonia are injured in a railway smash which occurs in the early morning, and when they are rescued from the débris they are taken for man and wife. Since George Morrier is a married man, separated from his wife, who is most anxious to get him to divorce her, this leads to complications. The troubled love story which follows is amusing, and the book contains some capital character sketches. When Mrs. Morrier visits Poppet Smith in her flat, however, we do not quite understand how she could have mistaken her for Antonia, since she seems to have gone to considerable trouble to find out what the latter was like. Still, this is a small matter in a good and amusing novel.

From the same—'A Specimen Spinster,' by Kate Westlake Yeigh. This is a most delightful book, full of humour and pathos, the author being as successful with one as she is with the other. Mary, or Polly Wogg, by which name she is generally known, tells her own history and that of her neighbours at 'The Corners,' and she is a charming person for ever accusing herself of all kinds of selfishness, while everyone who comes in contact with her has reason to bless her, the reader included. Every character introduced is a distinct study, and the love story of Dick Gray and Maud M'Gregor is charming. It is a very long time since we have chanced upon a novel which has pleased us so much, and we shall be much surprised if it does not achieve wide popularity.

From Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co.—'Ayesha, the Return of She,' by H. Rider Haggard. The author in a note informs us that he does not regard this book as a sequel, but rather as the concluding half of an imaginative tragedy. The distinction seems very fine, but we need not quarrel with it; the story of Ayesha (pronounced Assha) is as good as 'She.' We are taken to the unknown regions north of Tibet, where we find a fertile country apparently inaccessible, but we enter by a series of lucky accidents and find the re-incarnated She. Marvellous adventures attend us throughout, told with all the glamour that Rider Haggard can throw around us, and terminating only with the passing of Ayesha again into the flames with her lover. Those who enjoyed 'She' will also thoroughly enjoy 'Ayesha.'

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Ltd.—'Cliff's End Farm, and other Stories,' by Florence Warden. Miss Warden is not at her best in short fiction—she scarcely gets into her stride, so to speak—and her methods require for their due exploitation a wider range. But no one could accuse her of want of vigour, even when confined to a limited exercise-ground; and in this respect her present stories will favourably compare with four-fifths of the effeminate fiction now published.

REPRINTS AND NEW EDITIONS.—We have received from Messrs. Gale & Polden, Ltd., a third edition of Captain Lascelles Davidson's 'Catechism on Field Training.' This edition has been thoroughly revised and edited by Major S. T. Banning to bring it into line with changes in the regulations, and the fact that another edition has been called for is sufficient to prove the utility of the book.

We have received from Mr. Henry J. Drane a copy of 'Six Months of Hell, being Extracts from my Diary,' by G. Fauvel George. This narrative of the author's personal experiences while in the service of the South African Constabulary gives us anything but a rose coloured view, of life in 'Great Britain's latest acquisition.'

We have received from Messrs. A. Constable & Co. a copy of their new English edition of John Fox's novel 'A Cumberland Vendetta,' in which this American author relates in a graphic manner the long and bitter feud between the members of the Lewallen and Stetson families, in the mountain districts of Kentucky, with its tragical termination.

We have received from Messrs. J. Wright & Co., of Bristol, a copy of 'Golden Rules of Sick Nursing,' by W. B. Drummond M.B., F.R.C.P. This booklet, which is intended to serve as a pocket companion for the use of those engaged in private and district nursing, is a veritable multum in parvo on an all-important subject.

We have received from Mr. T. N. Foulis, of Edinburgh, a copy of the brochure named 'The Art of the Theatre,' together with an Introduction by Edward Gordon Craig and a Preface by R. Graham Robertson. This artistically gotten-up pamphlet consists of a dialogue between an Expert and a Playgoer concerning the craft of the stage director in his relation to the present and future development of the theatre as an artistic whole.

Mr. T. N. Foulis has sent us Part 1 of 'I Go A-Walking,' a publication which deserves to meet with success. The aim of the work is to describe a country walk, and to picture the habits of the birds and animals met with. The notes are chiefly taken from the Rev. C. A. Johns's book, 'Wild Birds and their Haunts,' and the photographs are many and excellent. This first part describes a walk 'Through the Country Lanes,' and will be followed at intervals by walks 'Through the Meadows,' 'By the Stream and Lake,' 'Through the Woods,' 'O'er the Moor,' and 'Homewards.'

We have been favoured by Messrs. Constable & Co. with a copy of their new pocket edition of the late George Gissing's 'Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft.' In this choice and handy form one of the best books written by its lamented author will thus obtain a wider circle of readers.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co. we have received a copy of their new and attractive edition of Richard Jefferies's romance, 'After London.' The pathetic efforts made by the deceased writer to obtain his foothold in literature should lead to a renewed interest in this delightful story of English life.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

MR. MURRAY'S NEW BOOKS

A NEW AND BEAUTIFUL COLOUR-BOOK.

THE HIGH-ROAD OF EMPIRE.

Water-colour and pen-and-ink sketches made in India. By A. H. HALLAM MURRAY, Illustrator of 'On the Old Road,' 'Old Time Travel,' &c. Dedicated by Gracious Permission to H.R.H the Princess of Wales. With 47 Coloured Plates. Medium 8vo. 21*s.* net. (A small edition on large paper will be published at £2 2*s.* net.) [Ready next week.

This is a companion volume to Mr. Hallam Murray's 'On the Old Road through France to Florence,' which met with great success last year.

The MILITARY LIFE of H.R.H. the DUKE of CAMBRIDGE

Written under the authority of the late Duke from documents in his own possession. By Colonel WILLOUGHBY VERNER, late Rifle Brigade, assisted by Captain ERASMUS DARWIN PARKER, late Manchester Regiment. With Portraits. 2 Vols. Medium 8vo. 36*s.* net. [Now Ready.

Some two years before his death H.R.H. gave instructions for the preparation of this biography, which was carried out under his supervision until the time of his last illness. At a time like the present, when Army Administration forms an important subject of public discussion, this work cannot fail to be of the greatest and most opportune value, apart from its biographical interest.

FURTHER MEMOIRS OF THE WHIG PARTY, 1807-1821.

Some Notes on Current Politics. By LIONEL PHILLIPS. Demy 8vo. 12*s.* net. [Now ready.

Mr. Lionel Phillips, who is well known as one of the creators of the gold industry in the Transvaal, and a leader of the old Reform Party in Johannesburg, has given in this work his estimate of the chief South African problems of to-day. The book is the result of a recent visit to the country. After describing the changes which impress a visitor returning to the Transvaal after a long absence, Mr. Phillips reviews shortly how the mines work since the war, and then describes at length the nature of the mining industry, and the labour question. There is an account of the results of the Chinese labour agreement, a chapter on the native question, and the Boer character. The book concludes with a long and careful analysis of present political parties and a forecast of the working of the new constitution.

JUST OUT. RE-ISSUE. WITH OROGRAPHICAL MAP OF THE WHOLE NILE BASIN.

OUR SUDAN.

By JOHN WARD, Author of 'Egypt: its Pyramids and Progress,' &c. Dedicated by request to Lord Kitchener of Khartoum. Crown 8vo. 400 pp. 720 Illustrations, 21*s.* net. A New Issue has been found necessary. The only work on the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

LETTER FROM SIR RUDOLPH VON SLATIN.

'Dear Mr. Ward,—Your delightful and most interesting book on the Sudan has reached me. I congratulate you heartily on the excellent manner in which the work is written and illustrated. All of us who have done our little best to regenerate the country, after its terrible misfortunes, have received more than kind treatment at your hands. . . . I don't suppose anyone realises more than I do the change that has come over the Sudan since my old and tyrannical master, the Khalifa, disappeared from the scene. Your description of the "Peace and Progress" is, in fact, a sequel to my "Fire and Sword in the Sudan."—With kindest regards, believe me, yours sincerely, R. V. SLATIN.'

THE CHILDHOOD OF FICTION; or, Folk Tales and Primitive Thought. By the Rev. J. A. MACCULLOCH. Demy 8vo. 12*s.* net. [Ready next week.

This is a remarkable and learned work giving the origins of myths, fairy tales, and traditions in all parts of the world; grouping them under certain classes, and tracing them to their sources. Of all the familiar fairy tales there is probably not one which is not described and traced in these pages.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE'S LIST

SPECIAL LINES FOR THE CHRISTMAS SEASON.

NOW READY.

THE STORY OF NOAH'S ARK: being a book of 26 full-page and double-page Illustrations in colour, with pictorial title-page, cover design, and text, by E. Boyd Smith. Large oblong. Price 6*s*.

A book of rich quaint humour, which will be as readily appreciated by a man of fifty as a child of ten, telling the story of what actually happened at the preparatory 'round up' of the animals when Noah prepared for his famous voyage. Noah's experiences were exasperating and funny in the last degree; what with strikes among the ark builders, the disbelief of his people, and the hopeless difficulty of preventing the cats from catching the mice, and the dogs from chasing the cats!

AN APOLOGY

In reply to our recent offer we have received from the trade requests for quite an extraordinary number of prospectuses advertising the various books on our Autumn List. We must apologise for the delay in the delivery of these circulars, and must confess that we were not quite prepared for so ready a response to our suggestion. We have, however, prepared three separate and very handsome catalogues (we call them catalogues for want of a better name) which we trust will meet all the requirements of those who are taking and have always taken the kindest interest in the welfare of our publications.

All three catalogues will be ready by the end of next week.

FICTION THAT COUNTS,

including all the novels published by us this year. This is no ordinary catalogue, it is a book—a book of 160 closely printed pages containing more literary matter than many a 6s. novel and illustrated throughout in the most profuse manner (some of the illustrations are in colour); it gives, in fact, a short introduction, together with long and representative extracts from nearly 30 novels. Of course 'FICTION THAT COUNTS' is expensive to produce—it is quite heavy, it costs 3d. to post—but it is simply bound to sell books if placed in the hands of those who are in the habit of buying books. We cannot send you a great supply of 'Fiction that Counts,' besides you could not give them the space in your shop, but we will be very pleased to forward to your address carriage paid a considerable number if you will see that they are distributed to the very best advantage; but of course you will, you wouldn't order them otherwise.

AN ILLUSTRATED GUIDE TO OUR ART PUBLICATIONS.

This is an exceedingly pretty catalogue, it is quite a picture gallery in itself, and contains illustrations from and particulars of 'The Old Testament in Art,' 'Women Painters of the World,' 'From Bethlehem to Olivet,' 'The Work of Lucy E. Kemp-Welch,' 'The Work of Frank Brangwyn, A.R.A.,' 'The Etchings of Van Dyck,' 'Ingres.'

These are, as you know, just the books for Christmas presentation, and if you only send the catalogue to those of your customers who have bought 'The Gospels in Art' you will want a good supply.

A SPECIAL CHRISTMAS CATALOGUE OF THEOLOGICAL AND RELIGIOUS PUBLICATIONS.

This will give the fullest and latest particulars of the many theological works on our Autumn List, and some others besides. It is beautifully set up, and tells the inquirer just what he wants to know about each individual book. We expect this catalogue to be largely in demand.

May we trouble you to fill in and despatch the attached order form by return of post? Be sure to address the envelope to 'The Advertisement Department,' Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, 27 Paternoster Row, LONDON.

BOOKLOVERS AND BIBLIOMANIACS.

'The innocent and delicious fever of the bibliophile,' says Charles Nodier, 'becomes in the bibliomaniac an acute delirious malady.' There is but one step from the sublime to the ridiculous. The booklover often becomes a bibliomaniac when his intellect is waning or his fortune is increasing, two serious disadvantages to which the best of men are exposed—more often to the first, perhaps, than to the second.

In La Revue, one of the most attractive of French periodicals, we find a long and interesting account of how an innocent bibliophile may become a bibliomane, then a bibliolâtre, then a bibliotaphe, and likely enough a biblioklepte—booklover, worshipper, buyer, stealer.

We are reminded that Dibdin, one of the most celebrated of English bibliographers, congratulated himself in one of his letters on having been able to remain alone in the Library of Strasburg 'without having to suffer any reproaches of conscience'—i.e., without succumbing to the temptation to pocket one or two precious volumes.

Referring to the extremes to which an inordinate love of rare books will push these frenzied amateurs, Texier in his book Les choses du temps présent says: 'Of all beings created by God the booklover is without exception the most egoistical and the most ferocious. The love of gold is nothing to that of books. The public will never understand all the unhealthy passions which agitate the mind of the book-lover in the presence of some "unique" copy or even of one described as "rare" in a catalogue. To obtain possession of the coveted item he will stick at no villainy or even crime. The following account will prove better than anything I can say into what excess a man of good breeding may be beguiled who is unable to resist the bibliographic demon. "Two gentlemen, great book amateurs, employed Whittingham (le premier imprimeur de l'Angleterre) to print for them at their joint expense a book of which the edition was to be limited to two copies; they ordered the vellum, bought new type, watched the printing, and spared nothing to make these two books, enriched with original engravings, two marvels of modern typography. The edition having been printed, folded, and stitched, was taken to a binder, who put the two copies into magnificent and similar bindings, and our two amateurs entered each into possession of his treasure.

'Do you think that these two men were happy? Not a bit of it: this one coveted that one's volume. Not long afterwards one of them had to go into the country; the other, with his own volume under his arm, immediately marched off to the house of his absent friend, and begged the wife of this friend to allow him for a moment to compare the engravings in his friend's copy with those in his own. Not suspecting anything, the wife consented, and, while pretending to examine the copy carefully, he managed unobserved to tear out two or three leaves, and he then returned home triumphantly with his book, which had thus become unique. On the return of the proprietor of the lacerated volume he heard of his friend's visit, suspected something, examined his book, and brought an action against the lacerator, who had to pay £2,000 for "damages." The Society of Bibliophiles proposed to expel the culprit and erase his name from their list; but he appeared before them and said proudly, "Which of you would not have done as much as I did?" "That's so!" said one of the members; and his name was not struck out.

'The true bibliomaniac thinks, with Cæsar, that nothing is done as long as there is anything left to do, that all he has is nothing if he cannot get the treasure of another. One of my friends, a great hunter of rare books, told me,' adds M. Texier, 'that after seeing the Duc d'Aumale's library he was seized with an invincible desire to set fire to his own. . . . Envy, jealousy, appetence of other people's treasures, such are the least of the bibliomaniac's defects.'

Of course our contemporary has no difficulty in showing that the true booklover knows nothing of all this envy, hatred, malice, and uncharitableness, and turns to some more amusing effects of book-loving. We have only space to refer to one or two.

William Budé, the celebrated Greek scholar (1467–1540), found time even on his wedding-day to spend at least three hours among his beloved books—'which did not, however, prevent his becoming the father of seven sons and four daughters.' It was Budé who, when the servant disturbed his studies by rushing in to say the house was on fire, said, 'All right, tell your mistress; you know I do not bother myself about household affairs.'

Another celebrated Hellenist and philosopher of the seventeenth century, Adrien Turnèbe, was so taken up with his books that he forgot to be present at what should have been his own wedding.

Among instances of singular deaths caused by books is the case of the Marquis de Chalabre, who succumbed to despair at not being able to obtain a work which did not exist—a Bible which, for a joke, had been 'invented' by Charles Nodier.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

His Majesty the King of the Hellenes has graciously granted permission for the revised edition of Lord Byron's Poetical Works in one volume, edited, with a memoir, by Mr. E. H. Coleridge, and shortly to be published by Mr. Murray, to be dedicated to his Majesty.

Mr. Holman Hunt's work on 'Pre-Raphaelitism and the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood' will be published early in December by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. It will be very elaborately illustrated with forty photogravure reproductions of many of the artist's most famous pictures, and besides these there will be over 150 illustrations in the text. No pains have been spared to give an appropriate form to one of the most important books on English art that has appeared for many years. It gives, for the first time, a true and complete history of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, and corrects the manifold inaccuracies of previous historians and commentators.

Mr. Kipling's charming story 'They,' which appeared last year in 'Traffics and Discoveries,' is to be issued shortly by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. in a volume by itself, with fifteen coloured illustrations by Mr. F. H. Townsend.

Dr. Gordon Lang, suffragan to the Bishop of London and one of the most popular canons at St. Paul's Cathedral, has found time during the past year to write a companion volume to his work, 'The Miracles of Jesus,' published five years back, when he was Vicar of Portsea, and now in its tenth thousand. The new book, which Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., announce, is 'The Parables of Jesus,' and is devotional rather than critical and didactic rather than apologetic.

Messrs. Morgan & Scott are bringing out 'a consolidated and enlarged' edition of Moody and Sankey's 'Sacred Songs and Solos.'

We learn that Mr. Charles P. Sisley, who has edited the London Magazine for the past two years, is resigning that position early in the New Year. Mr. Sisley introduced a number of improvements into the pages of the London, which under his control, has maintained a high standard of literary and artistic excellence.

'Jules of the Great Heart' is the title of a new novel by Mr. Lawrence Mott which Mr. Heinemann will publish immediately. It is the story of the life of a 'free trapper' in the Hudson Bay Company's territory, and is full of exciting incident set against a picturesque background. Jules is said to be a splendid character, and the various types of trapper drawn with great skill.

Messrs. Anthony Treherne & Co. will publish early next week a little volume entitled 'Henry Irving.' It is from the pen of Mr. Austin Brereton, who enjoyed the friendship of the great actor for many years, and who, in 1883, was his first biographer. The book contains an authoritative chapter on the early life of Henry Irving, which was revised by him shortly before his death, together with a facsimile of some of his additions thereto in his own handwriting. Mr. Brereton also gives some personal reminiscences of Sir Henry and an account of his appearances at Drury Lane, together with a complete chronological history and other interesting details. The illustrations include two portraits of Sir Henry.

In view of the general interest excited by the experiments of Mr. Barker, at Cambridge, in connection with spontaneous generation, special attention is likely to be attracted to Professor Charlton Bastian's book on 'The Nature and Origin of Living Matter,' which Mr. T Fisher Unwin will publish on November 30.

Admirers of the late George Macdonald will be glad to hear that a selection from his writings, under the title of 'Daily Readings from George Macdonald,' will be published very shortly by Mr. Fifield in two dainty editions. The same publisher will issue on December 10 a new Pocket Copyright edition of George Macdonald's 'The Diary of an Old Soul,' with a photogravure portrait of the author.

Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd., have published a new and revised edition of 'Imperialism: a Study,' by J. A. Hobson.

The second edition of 'Mrs. Gaskell and Knutsford,' by Rev. G. A. Payne, will be issued in a week or two by Messrs. Clarkson & Griffiths, Ltd., of Manchester. It will contain a new chapter and additional notes.

Mr. John Murray has published a new edition in one volume, at half a guinea net, of the very successful 'Creevey Papers,' which were so ably edited by Sir Herbert Maxwell.

M. Maurice Barrès begins a delightful article, entitled 'Un Voyage à Sparte,' in the Revue des deux Mondes for November 15. It is a wonderful envisaging of the spirit of Ancient Greece with that of modern France, and a needed protest against some of the methods of archæologists. In hopeless attempts to restore some ancient masterpiece of man, they merely destroy the accumulated interest of centuries of the work of time.

Under the title, 'A Passive Resister of the Seventeenth Century,' Mr. George Cuttle has compiled from the Diary of John Evelyn a series of extracts illustrating the passive resistance of the clergy to the decrees of the Government in Puritan times. A short note is added giving some particulars concerning Evelyn's life and movements. Mr. Elliot Stock is the publisher.

Mr. H. E. Malden's 'School History of Surrey' is the first volume of a series designed to enforce the idea, so all-important in young people's education, that history begins at home. The volumes are meant to bring history into connection with scenes which their readers know, to illustrate manners by local examples, and to teach that every place has its interest and its story. Maps and illustrations are freely added, and each county volume is written by an author who has made a special study of the county he treats. This series is to be published by Messrs. Methuen.

The extremely handsome new Magazine of Fine Arts, which has just begun what will certainly be a prosperous career, is devoted to the fine and decorative arts of other days. Part 1, now ready, contains much interesting matter and many fine illustrations—the wonder is how it can be done at such a popular price as one shilling. Doubtless its chief patrons, art amateurs, have plenty of time on their hands and can afford to expend some of it in cutting open the leaves. We hope Messrs. Newnes will print the title and date along the back of each part, otherwise when placed on a shelf or table with other magazines its present blank back tells one nothing. Illustrations, including coloured and other plates, will be the leading feature of the new magazine.

Messrs. Brimley Johnson & Ince will issue immediately 'The Two Arcadias,' a volume of plays and poems by a new writer, Rosalind Travers, with an Introduction by Richard Garnett, C.B., LL.D.

Mr. William J. Hay, John Knox's House, Edinburgh, has just issued in volume form the first series of 'Old Houses in Edinburgh,' embracing twenty-seven of Mr. Bruce J. Home's delightful drawings.

Mr. Hay will publish in December 'The Hammermen of Edinburgh and their Altar,' being extracts from the records of this Incorporated Trade from 1494 to 1558 A.D., with Introductory Notes by John Smith; also a little illustrated brochure entitled 'Rob Lindsay and his School,' by one of Rob's old Pupils.

'The Recollections of Mr. William O'Brien' is another book which Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will have ready early in December.

Mr. Heinemann will publish at the end of this week Beyerlein's celebrated play Lights Out, which is at present being performed with such enormous success at the Waldorf Theatre. It will be uniform with Mr. Heinemann's edition of Mr. Pinero's plays.

Lady Napier of Magdala has written the leading serial story for Chambers' Journal for 1906. It deals mainly with the troublous life of young people, who come through many trials and disappointments, but ultimately emerge more or less satisfactorily. The scene alternates between the West Highlands of Scotland, English country homes, and the mazes of London Society. It is entitled 'A Stormy Morning.'

Mr. John Lane announces for November 28 Mr. A. F. Calvert's 'Moorish Remains in Spain.' The other volumes he will publish on that date—all reprints—are as follows: 'The Reformation in England,' by S. R. Maitland, author of 'The Dark Ages,' reprinted in the 'Crown Library'; 'The Macdermots of Ballycloran,' by Anthony Trollope, with an Introduction by Algar Thorold, reprinted in the 'New Pocket Library'; and the 'Isabella' of John Keats, reprinted in the 'Flowers of Parnassus.' A notable feature of the last-named are Mr. Paul Henry's eight illustrations.

The Methodist Publishing Room is publishing next month a volume of some five hundred pages, entitled 'Haeckel's Monism False,' in which all three of Haeckel's works in English, together with Mr. McCabe's brochure entitled 'Haeckel's Critics Answered,' are dealt with and replied to by Mr. R. Blatchford.

THREE TONS OF NEGATIVES.

Sir Benjamin Stone, M.P., in the course of his life-long devotion to his collection of national photographic records for the benefit of future generations, has used up no less than three tons of glass in photographic plates. The collection consists of 25,000 full-plate pictures, and it tells the whole story of the life of this generation with a vividness and accuracy quite beyond the reach of mere verbal descriptions. On imperishable glass these negatives will be capable, a thousand years hence, of reproducing the same pictures that can now be printed from them, and we may well envy our descendants the far greater privileges they will enjoy than we ever possessed. What with Sir Benjamin Stone's pictures and the various phonographic records of the voices of living people, they will know us almost as well as we know ourselves. Sir Benjamin has made a selection from his Parliamentary, State Ceremony, and Popular Custom pictures for immediate publication by Messrs. Cassell & Co., forming a most valuable and entrancing work.

A LIFE OF DR. LIDDON.

A. R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd., announce for publication on December 1 the next volume in their series of biographies, 'Leaders of the Church, 1800-1900,' which will deal with Dr. Liddon, and is contributed by Mr. George W. E. Russell, the general editor of the series. Mr. Russell writes of Dr. Liddon as his 'loved and honoured master,' and in many respects the portrait thus painted is likely to be welcomed by Dr. Liddon's friends as conveying, perhaps, a fuller and juster conception of his character and life than has yet been presented.

BOOKS, LIBRARIES, AND LITERATURE IN DAYS OF OLD.

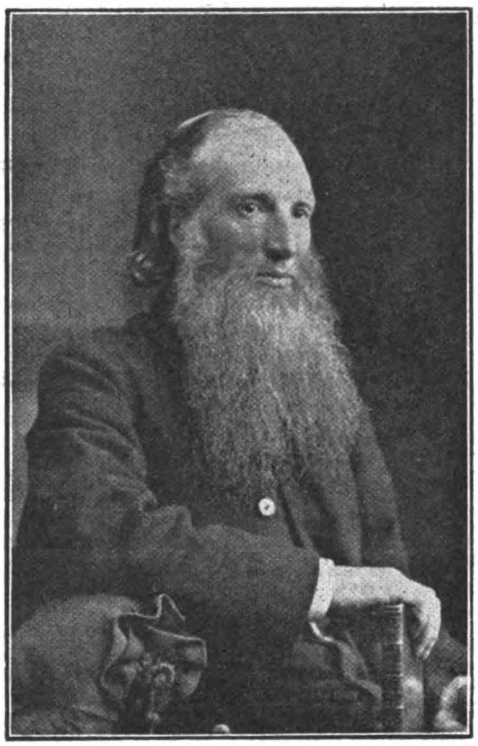
The following extracts are from a long and most interesting lecture by Mr. Richard Cameron, F.S.A.Scot., the well-known secondhand bookseller, of Edinburgh, who, despite the fact that he is over eighty-two years of age, delivered it in the most spirited manner. The occasion was the opening of the thirteenth session of the Edinburgh Booksellers' Assistants' Association on the evening of Thursday, October 26, in the Protestant Institute, George IV. Bridge, Edinburgh.

Heber's Library.

Then there was the remarkably fine library of Richard Heber. From small beginnings in the way of purchases, Mr. Heber gradually acquired a keen desire for rare and curious volumes. He resigned his seat in Parliament and travelled throughout Europe in order to add to his literary treasures. He has been known to take a journey of four or five hundred miles to obtain a single volume of unusual rarity. When he died in the year 1833 he possessed eight houses filled with books, two of which were in London. There were also collections in various towns on the Continent. He had become a thorough bibliomaniac, and he was also a man of great learning. It may also be noted that he exercised a princely liberality in affording rich and poor alike the use of his collections. After his death his magnificent literary treasures were dispersed at auction, and the sale extended over two years. It is said to have been the most extensive book sale that ever took place in the world, the amount realised being upwards of £57,000.



MR. RICHARD CAMERON, F.S.A.Scot.)
(The well-known Secondhand Bookseller of Edinburgh.)

How the Duke of Roxburghe became a Collector.

Then there was the celebrated John, Duke of Roxburghe, who became an eminent book collector towards the end of the eighteenth century. It was an incidental conversation at his father's table regarding the First Edition of 'Boccaccio's Decameron' which gave him his first idea of book collecting. The first edition of this work was printed at Venice in the year 1474, and was considered so rare that its very existence was doubted. The Duke remembered having seen the volume on the Continent, and to have been offered it for £100. He at once resolved to obtain it, and, to the surprise of his friends, he actually secured the precious volume. It was this circumstance which led him on to be the founder of one of the most celebrated private libraries in the country. After the Duke's death his library was dispersed at auction in the year 1812, and the sale lasted forty-two days. An amusing account of the Roxburghe sale is given by Mr. John Hill Burton in 'The Book Hunter,' which will well repay perusal. A special gem in the sale was the rare first edition of 'Boccaccio's Decameron,' which cost the Duke £100. After keen competition the volume was knocked down to the Marquis of Blankford at £2,260.

Sir Walter as a Collector.

These cases might suffice as illustrations of eminent book collectors, but another, of whom Scotland and the world may well feel proud, ought still to be noted—namely, Sir Walter Scott, who, more especially in his earlier years, must have been a keen book collector. His famous library at Abbotsford contains many rare and curious works now seldom to be met with. From his interesting novel, 'The Antiquary,' it appears evident that Sir Walter was thoroughly acquainted with and enjoyed the collecting of such books, as no one but a skilled adept could so graphically describe the old-fashioned pursuit in all its details as he has done. In the celebrated dialogue between Mr. Oldbuck of Monkbarns and his young friend Mr. Lovel, Sir Walter appears to exactly portray himself and his own library at Abbotsford. After having shown Mr. Lovel his collection of curiosities, and explained them, 'he said it was chiefly on his books that he prided himself,' and his collection was indeed a curious one, and might well be envied by an amateur, 'yet it was not collected at the enormous prices of modern times. Mr. Oldbuck did not follow modern collectors in such excess of expenditure, but, taking a pleasure in the personal labour of forming his library, saved his purse at the expense of his time and his toil.'

Broadsides and Ballads.

In the early stages of printing in England and Scotland ballad songs and broadsides were great favourites. In those times there were many professional bards and minstrels who gained their livelihood by recital and song. They travelled about the country, and were always made welcome, whether at castle or hamlet. The manners, customs, sports, pastimes, traditions, and romances of olden times were portrayed in curious effusions and in most inspiring strains, to the delight of their hearers.

'Gude and Godly Ballads.'

A considerable number of the early printed broadside ballads, which, in olden times, were issued in England, have been preserved in the British Museum and other large libraries, but copies of such seldom occur for sale. It is, however, somewhat remarkable, as regards that class of literature printed in Scotland, in those bygone years, scarcely a vestige of it would seem to have survived to modern times, although large numbers must have been printed and circulated. Such old ballads and songs were immensely popular in Scotland in those days, but the clergy, becoming alarmed, used their endeavours to effect a change. They constructed and printed spiritual parodies on the old ballads, and weaving into them religious ideas, and, adapting them to the ordinary popular airs, strove to induce the people to prefer them to the old favourite ditties. These new effusions provided by the clergy were entitled 'The Gude and Godly Ballads,' but whether the object in view was attained it would be difficult to discover. Large numbers were printed, but it is a curious fact that scarcely any of them have come down to modern times, they, along with the old ballads which they were designed to supersede, having been completely worn out or destroyed.

THE COMMERCIALISATION OF LITERATURE.

How has the literature turned out been fitted, both in composition and handling, to the reasonable conditions of the market? In addition to the effect that the system has on the author's literary production, it deprives him of benefits that he ought to have from the publisher's practical criticism and his business enthusiasm. The number of books that can be sold is not a fixed quantity. There is no more a book fund than there is that old superstition of the economist's, a 'wages fund.' The amount of books sold depends more on the kind produced than probably the amount of any other satisfaction. It takes a pretty attractive book, in town, at least, to keep many people away from other attractions. A good book may not be an attractive one. Whether it is or not, almost anybody can tell better than the author. If it is not, a good publisher is apt to see how it can be made so; and a very good publisher how it can be made so without prejudice to its artistic quality. But to give his best advice he must have his heart in the work, and must know not only the book, but his man, and be in sympathy with him. This is not an affair of hours or days, but of a long intimacy, such as has occasionally adorned the records of literature and human nature.—Henry Holt, in the November Atlantic.

THE NEW 'WHO'S WHO.'

The 1906 edition of the indispensable 'Who's Who' will be published by Messrs. Black on December 8. It will contain a couple of thousand more biographies than its predecessor, and, by way of still further increasing the utility of the book, the number of a man's sons and daughters will be reorded; also his motor-car number, telephone number, and telegraphic address where necessary.

The other Year-Books published by the same firm—viz., 'Who's Who Year-Book,' 'Englishwoman's Year-Book,' and 'The Writers' and Artists' Year-Book'—the last named just acquired by them—will all be published about the same time.

HONOUR AMONG PUBLISHERS.

It's a hard question, this of reconciling the author's right to the benefits of competition with the maintenance of anything like a professional courtesy between publishers. But how about the same question among lawyers and doctors? A continuity of relation is as important in the one case as in the others. An intelligent publisher will do justice, even as a matter of mere business policy, without needing to be forced by competition. But certainly professional courtesy should not be carried as far as I once carried it in my young and quixotic days, when an eminent author brought me a work, of his own accord, and I declined it because he would not assert that he had cause of complaint against his then publisher. He now publishes 'all over the place,' and, of course, has no publisher with any abiding interest in him; and his books do not support each other as they would if tied together Partly in consequence of this his sales are small though his fame is large.—Henry Holt in the November Atlantic.

THE KING AND OLD HOUSES IN EDINBURGH.

Viscount Esher has sent the following letter to Mr. W. J. Hay, Netherbow, publisher of Mr. Home's 'Old Houses in Edinburgh.' 'Windsor Castle, November 15, 1905, Sir,—I am commanded by the King to thank you for the volume of sketches which you were good enough to send, and which his Majesty has graciously accepted. They are a most interesting contribution to the history of the ancient city in which the King takes a deep and warm interest.—I remain, yours faithfully,—(Signed)—Esher.'

HOW ARE THE MIGHTY FALLEN.

When his Majesty was shooting at Windsor recently he had a fall caused by putting his foot into a rabbit hole, and sprained his ankle. The Daily Mail, of course, had large type headlines next morning, putting the affair unintentionally in rather a comical light, thus:

The King Sprains his Ankle.
Dramatic Performance at Windsor.

THE LATE SIR HENRY IRVING.

'The Romance of Sir Henry Irving' is the title of two volumes of reminiscences of Sir Henry Irving, upon which Mr. Joseph Hatton is engaged. It was begun years ago under the sanction and with the assistance of the great actor himself, but afterwards for various reasons abandoned. On Sir Henry's announced farewell of the stage the work was resumed, and it is to appear in the first place as the leading serial of the Grand Magazine commencing in the Christmas number. There is a talk of a more or less official biography, so to speak, by Irving's two sons; but it is not unlikely that Mr. Hatton's work will be of the more popular character. One may well think so, recalling his 'Irving's Impressions of America,' published one-and-twenty years back by Sampson Low, Marston & Co.

THE PRICELESS VALUE OF MYSTERY.

'Have you noticed that we may be deeply interested in a work which is not at all clear? Darkness fascinates children and fools. I confess that I have done with a book whose poor little thought I can hold naked in my arms. It has lost its mystery.'

Maurice Barrès.

It is for this reason that we hope the mystery of the North and South Poles will never be discovered. The nations ought to keep those regions as international reserves of world mystery, almost the last of the unknown which is not unknowable.

THE COPYRIGHT ASSOCIATION.

Mr. H. R. Clayton, of the firm of Novello & Co., of Berners Street, has been appointed Hon. Sec. of the Copyright Association, in succession to the late Mr. F. R. Daldy, who had held the post for upwards of thirty years.

Letters to the Editor

THE TIMES BOOK CLUB.

Sir,—Feeling, in common with many publishers and practically all booksellers, that the Times Book Club, according to its present scheme, must have a baneful effect on the English book trade, and as a consequence on English literature, we ventured to address the accompanying letter to the Times newspaper for publication. The letter was not published. But we received a courteous acknowledgment from Mr. Moberly Bell, in which he said 'the columns of the Times have never been open for discussions between one trader and another.' It seems that the Times newspaper ceases thus to be a forum for the discussion of urgent questions, and we, maintaining this is no mere trade squabble, therefore ask you to be good enough to give us the hospitality of your columns.—Faithfully yours,

Anthony Treherne & Co., Ltd.
W. Webster, Managing Director.

P.S.—The following is the letter we sent to the Times, which was not inserted:

THE TIMES BOOK CLUB.

Sir,—The columns of the Times newspaper have always been open for the discussion of matters of public interest and importance, and persons of all shades of opinion have, through your courtesy, been allowed to express their views. We are, therefore, perhaps greatly daring, asking you to permit us to draw attention to the many evils that in our opinion are almost certain to accrue to the writers, the publishers, the sellers, and the readers of books through the scheme now being put before the public by your great newspaper. We, sir, are only a small firm of publishers, and we therefore express our opinion with what we hope is a proper diffidence; but we are convinced that in this matter the interests of the whole book trade are identical, and that this interest goes far beyond the mere question of trade, and embraces and is concerned with the future of English literature.

From our own point of view the terms under which the Times Book Club proposes to purchase from the publisher has made it impossible for us to accept the orders we received, even though a part of the proposed discount should be returned in the shape of advertisements in the Times newspaper itself. We may perhaps parenthetically remark that it would have seemed to us unnecessary to bring this indirect pressure to bear on the English publishing trade to avail themselves of the advertising columns of the first newspaper in the world.

Looking at the matter from another point of view, it is evident from the merest casual study of the scheme that new books are to be offered to the public under conditions which no retail bookseller would be allowed by the Publishers' Association to follow, or indeed which, even if he were permitted to do so, would make no reasonable profit possible.

It appears on the face of it, particularly when the enormous sums to be spent on advertisements are taken into consideration, that the public are being given something for nothing, and as it is not possible to assume that the Times Book Club is merely a philanthropic institution, it is clear to us that its profits are to be obtained from another source which must, sooner or later, be the pockets of the publishers. For if the scheme is a success, the retail booksellers will be ultimately pushed out of the market altogether and a huge Book Trust will come into existence. This trust will hold the publishers in the hollow of its hand. It will dictate prices, and it is quite certain not to remain content even with the present huge discount that it demands, and which we and many other publishing houses find incompatible with profitable business. The next step will doubtless be that the Book Club will then begin business as a publisher, and that the whole trade will thus become focussed under one authority, with the obvious result that not only will everyone connected with the production of books suffer pecuniarily, but the interests of English literature will be seriously threatened.

We quite recognise that the scheme in its inception was merely intended as an ingenious method of advertising a newspaper. When one, however, had studied its details, and particularly one remembers the American auspices under which it has been floated, one feels that everyone concerned in the production of a book, from the author to the bookseller, must in self-defence use every means in their power to render it abortive.

We are not so foolish as to resent new means for the distribution of our wares, or to turn our backs upon new methods for their distribution, but the Times Book Club is unfair in its inception and menacing in its developments. If it succeeds, the bookseller and the present circulating libraries will disappear, and the author and the publisher will become the slaves of a monopoly which experience must lead them both to dread.

It is, perhaps, bold for us to ask how the book reader will fare, though it is equally sure that he will have to take what he is offered aud be thankful, and good business will force the Trust to get back its immense outlay by giving him the cheapest. The output of new and speculative volumes will cease. Literature will be strangled.

Your extensive advertisements make it impossible for us to hope that any of your contemporaries will care to publish our protest, and it is, therefore, to Cæsar we appeal even against Cæsar himself.—Your obedient servants, (Signed)

Anthony Treherne & Co., Ltd.
London, W.C.: Nov. 16, 1905.

Sir,—The article by your correspondent (on p. 152) on the promises of the Times Book Club confirms the impression which I have all along had, that, apart from the newspaper itself, the Times promised very little which could not already be obtained from a circulating library; and I confess that, as an 'ordinary reader,' I fail to appreciate the grounds of the opposition offered by publishers and booksellers. It seems to be a case of 'the little more and how much it is,' for apparently the sole point to which objection can be sustained is that subscribers are able to obtain certain books secondhand from the Times Book Club more rapidly than they could from other circulating libraries or the trade in general.

Now, sir, what I wish to ask, out of curiosity, and as one having no immediate interest in the matter, is whether the critics of the Times have not overlooked a somewhat essential point? I can understand that, if a bookseller or a library or a newspaper were to buy books from the publishers on the same terms as other booksellers, and were, without the usually recognised delay, to sell those books to the general public at a reduced rate, then the booksellers, at any rate, would have a legitimate grievance. Where the grievance of the publishers would come in, I confess I do not perceive, but for the sake of argument I will concede to them the same grievance as booksellers. But—and this is the point upon which I desire information—does the Times Book Club undertake to sell such books on these objectionable terms to the general public? Do not the subscribers to the Times form a club—called in fact the Times Book Club—and has not that club the right of distributing among its own members, in any way it pleases, the books which it purchases from the publishers? If, for example, the books were to be presented to the subscribers, who would have a right to object? If the publishers sell their goods to the Times Book Club at a rate which is not profitable to themselves they have only got themselves to blame Naturally the booksellers object, just as the local fishmonger objects when I order my fish direct from Grimsby. But the fisherman (who represents the publisher) has no grounds for objecting, and, much as I sympathise with my neighbour the fishmonger, I fail to see what right he has to restrain me from taking the course that gives me more satisfaction.

As a book-reader and book-buyer, I apologise for intruding in a publishers' and booksellers' journal; but, before becoming a member of the Times Book Club, I beg for further light on the ethics of the situation.—Yours faithfully,

Bibliographer.

['Bibliographer' apparently does not attach much value to the Times itself; he does not appreciate the points made by 'A Correspondent' in our issue of November 18, p. 152—viz., that the wording of the T.B.C. advertisements gives people the impression that they will get something far better than they can get it elsewhere, and more promptly. We think he will find that the Times Book Club members are not the only people who can buy books from it, and, in fact, that anybody can do so. The price we free-born Britons pay for our beef and pork is fixed by American Trusts—huge concerns which kill independent trading by underselling, and then make the public pay 'through the nose.' If this statement had been made only a few years ago it would have been laughed at as absurd. It seems equally absurd at the present moment to suppose that we shall not see the same thing in the case of Books if the Publishers play into the hands of the American Syndicate and help it to kill the legitimate book trade and established circulating libraries. If publishers imagine for one moment that the Syndicate will not turn round on them and take away their bread just as soon as they feel strong enough to do so, their trust in 'Trusts' is great indeed.—Ed.]

Where is the Bargain?

Dear Sir,—In the discussion about the Times Book Club, I do not see that the following point has been mentioned. The inducement is that we shall pay £4 a year (which is approximately the price of the Times) and also enjoy the advantages of their lending library. This advertisement is intended to catch new subscribers to the Times, and is not a gratuitous concession to those who are already buyers.

The new subscribers are recruited from readers of other papers. Instead of paying 26*s.* a year for the Telegraph, say, they pay £4 for the Times. It cannot be said that the intrinsic values of these two papers are proportional to their prices, so I will put down the difference, £2 14*s.*, as the cost of the yearly subscription to the Times Book Club.

Thus far I consider only the cost to the subscriber. Look now at the cost of printing and distribution of the extra copies of the Times supplied to new subscribers. It cannot be a penny a copy, but let us put it at that, so that we arrive at the conclusion that the £2 14*s.* paid extra by the new subscriber is estimated by the Times as the proportion of the £4 to be credited to their Book Club accounts.

On thinking out the question from this point of view I do not think the public is getting much of a bargain.—Yours truly,

EDWARD WALKER.

THE T.B.C. BOOK CATALOGUE.

DEAR SIR,—While many features of the Times Book Club have been discussed, one at least seems to have been overlooked. The Catalogue contains in its thousand pages the names of a large number of books now sold at remainder prices, which are quoted at ordinary booksellers' rates—as are all the others. What advantage (for we must naturally conclude that it is an advantage, somehow or other, although not mentioned in the prospectus) does this arrangement confer upon the subscriber?—Yours, &c.,

'ADVENA.'

THE NET BOOK AND DISCOUNTS.

SIR,—My letter with reference to Mr. C. K. Shorter and the net system seems to have caused some anxiety to a correspondent signing himself 'A Businesslike Bookbuyer,' who states it will take a very long course of education to teach a businesslike person the fairness or honesty of charging the same price to the person who pays on the spot and the one who pays months after. Surely 'A Businesslike Bookbuyer,' who spends about 100*l.* annually in books and pays cash, cannot expect an extra discount off a net book simply because another customer does not pay for some months. The fault here is with the bookseller, who should not allow such long credit, and who, I think I can safely say, does not do so willingly, but is forced to do so by his good customers, whom he is afraid of pressing for account for fear of losing their custom.

It is the present system that is wrong, and I cannot see why 'A Businesslike Bookbuyer' should get discount for paying promptly, which is simply the right thing to do. Does he take a discount off his butcher's or bread bill for paying prompt? I think not. Then again I do not understand him when he says: 'I strongly resent being deprived of a quarter of the value of the money I expend.' 'A Businesslike Bookbuyer' has not used much thought in writing this; he certainly does not lose a quarter of the value, as a 1*s.* book sold at 9*d.* is in reality a 9*d.* book, as it is made to sell at 9*d.*; but a 1*s.* net book is necessarily of better value, as it is made to sell at 1*s.*

Again, 'A Businesslike Bookbuyer' says: 'I trust the Times system will mete out to the publishers the righteous retribution that should have fallen on them long ago.' I certainly do not understand this, nor do I think anyone else can.

'A Businesslike Bookbuyer' has yet to learn that the net system has come to stay, and will be a great benefit to both the booksellers and public.—Yours faithfully,

J. T., A PUBLISHERS' TRAVELLER.

THE IMPRINT IN FOREIGN BOOKS.

SIR,—In your article 'Book Description' you quote Mr. J. D. Brown's statement that the names of towns on the title-pages of some modern foreign books are often more difficult to render into their English equivalents than might be their old Latin forms. An instance is given of the old Roman station Cologne appearing in its modern German guise of Köln. It is quite true that, accustomed as we are to the form Cologne, the vernacular or German name Köln appears strange to us at first. But why do we persist at the present day in calling Köln 'Cologne'? The peculiar fact is that, whilst the Germans, French and Italians are content to call English-speaking places by the modern name, we ourselves give to foreign towns some ancient form—such as to Braunschweig, 'Brunswick'; Köln, 'Cologne'—or else we seem to delight in altering the spelling a bit!

I would suggest that we ought to give to all towns abroad the names by which they are known locally—i.e. to German towns their German term; to Italian towns the Italian name, and not the French equivalent (Firenze, not Florence; Torino, not Turin, &c.).

That this needed reform will come about in time there is little doubt. As a beginning I note Leipsic is much less frequently used now in place of the correct 'Leipzig.' I think we could very soon get accustomed to 'Wien' instead of Vienna, 'Munchen' instead of Munich, 'Aachen' instead of Aix-la-Chapelle. It would certainly do away with a deal of confusion if such a practice were adopted.—I am, sir, yours faithfully,

F. W. T. LANGE, Librarian.

[We quite agree with Mr. Lange that it is surely time we English began to use the same names for foreign towns as used by those who live in them—Gand instead of Ghent, Genes instead of Genoa, &c.—then, perhaps, the French will call Dover 'Dover,' instead of Douvres; and instead of Londres, say 'London,' and speak of England, instead of 'Angleterre.'—ED.]

THE LATE SIR HENRY IRVING.

'A STRIKING RESEMBLANCE.'

SIR,—In your issue of the 11th inst. there is a paragraph referring to the striking resemblance between the last appearance of Sir Henry Irving on the stage, and his death, and that of the great actor Austin Delmar, in the last chapter of my latest novel 'The Selling Plater.' Mr. W. Pugin Thornton, author of 'Heads and What they Tell Us,' states 'So striking is the resemblance, that if Mr. Gould's story had been published a week later it would have been thought he had adapted the scene from life instead of anticipating it in fiction.'

The MS. of 'The Selling Plater' was in Mr. John Long's hands several weeks before Sir Henry Irving's death. The book was finished during Sir Henry's season at Drury Lane (in May last). One night, during a performance of Becket, something seemed to tell me our great actor would die during his impersonation of this character. His final scenes were so terribly realistic that I sat spell-bound, almost certain he was going to collapse—this feeling was also experienced by my wife and sons. We were in the stalls and saw clearly every movement and facial expression. Even those acting with him seemed to hover round him, fearing he might fall.

In 'The Selling Plater' Austin Delmar dies at the end of 'The Merchant of Venice' after playing Shylock. I chose this play, and not Becket, because Sir Henry Irving alone played in the latter, and there were other Shylocks. Becket would have been too 'personal'; that is the reason I did not use the name.

One critic is doubtful of the good taste of this chapter in my book. Perhaps when he learns I finished the MS. in May and Sir Henry Irving died in October, he will change his opinion.

Sir Henry Irving would have been the last to take offence at what on my part was merely a tribute to his wonderful acting, as the following letter will show. It is dated May 22, 1905, from 17 Stratton Street, W.:

'My dear Mr. Gould,—A thousand thanks for your most cordial letter. It is most gratifying to me to know that you retain such friendly memories of—Yours very sincerely, HENRY IRVING.'

I may add that when Sir Henry died I was in Brussels, and when I saw the heading announcing he was no more I was not far off guessing the manner of his death.—I remain,

Faithfully yours,

NAT GOULD.

PRAYER DIDN'T HELP.—A clever woman asked an English bookseller for a volume of Robert Browning's works, 'I haven't got it, madam,' replied the bookseller. 'I make it a rule never to stock any books I can't understand, and I can't make head or tail of Mr. Browning. Can you?' Scarcely knowing whether to be amused or annoyed, but prepared to take another volume, the lady said, 'Have you Praed, then?' 'Yes, madam,' quoth the bookseller, 'I've prayed, and that don't help me.'—Publishers' Weekly.

MENTION THE 'P. C.'—Our Readers who order books, &c. they see mentioned or advertised in the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

THE additional demand alluded to is a positive charge, after a declaration of the salary upon oath, of fifty pounds per annum superadded to that salary, as a portion of the amount expended upon themselves when away from home, in pursuit of business, which, to use their argument, you must acquire or you could not disburse, and it must necessarily therefore form a portion of your income.

Whether our legislators intended this additional and, as it appears to me, unfair and unjust surcharge to be pushed to the very letter I am not prepared to express a decided opinion; but, if so, their officers for carrying it into effect ought certainly to render the burden as light as they possibly can by affording the requisite information, and also by a respectability of demeanour which, I regret to say, they too often altogether lose sight of.

We were expressing our dissatisfaction freely to-day, not so much with reference to the tax itself as to the conduct of its officers or inspectors; when, lo! a perfect specimen of the genus surveyor, or collector, who had till this moment sat a listener, announced himself as her Majesty's servant, Mr. Gabel, and much insulted! Poor creature! how he foamed and frothed at our remarks, imagining that we had all the time been acquainted with his office, and had been directing our conversation to, or at, him; instead of which, had he kept his own counsel, not a soul would have conjectured, or thought of inquiring, who or what he might be. But his rude personality and bullying, so perfectly in keeping with his order, availed nothing with us; and, having been advised in future to have a private room, or make himself less objectionable, by the adoption of a more manly line of conduct, when tolerated in a private one—which a commercial room ought to be considered, and in truth is—he, wincing at some home thrusts made by one of our party, left the room precipitately.

Such is one among a thousand instances of the folly of men, not actually commercial, wishing to thrust themselves into the commercial room; for there conversation is never straitened or confined, as in other assemblies, but unrestrained as though all were familiar and intimate friends. And yet it not infrequently happens that they are unacquainted even with each other's names. Nevertheless, their discourse or conversation is frank and unreserved, without the least inclination to be either personally offensive or captiously disputative; all finding themselves equally at home, and their conduct and bearing regulated by gentlemanly feeling, prudence, and the established rules of good society. In the commercial room, indeed, the most retired opinions of persons and circumstances are frequently canvassed in the strictest confidence and secrecy; for supposing themselves to be all brethren, subject to no espionage, inquisitorial inspection, or impertinent intrusion, its occupants receive and give information, which, if overheard by a stranger, might lead to results of an unpleasant if not of a dangerous character, though intended for the public good.

AN UNFORTUNATE YOUTH—LOST POCKET BOOK.

Crown Inn, Huntingdon, 8 P.M.—A young man entered, apparently a little groggy, and, although before the usual smoking hour, perfumed the room with a cigar which he brought in. Ordering brandy and water, he condemned the 'boots,' abused the waiter, and, full of complaints, hiccuped, and muttered some unintelligible jargon. Then, utterly forgetting the decencies of society, he placed his back front as though he intended it to be roasted by the fire. During that operation, dividing his coat tail, his hands involuntarily came in contact with the pockets of the said garment; and, staring first at us, then vacantly around, evidently deficient in something of no small importance, he put his hands first into his breast pocket, then into each of his other great and undercoat pockets —ordered the things out of his chaise, unlocking his writing case and driving box, without finding the missing and evidently valuable something to us unexplainable. Without giving utterance to the cause of his unsettled appearance, or what was passing in his mind, he gazed mechanically around, and, as though inspired by a sudden hope, summoning his recollection as to where he had deposited the treasure, he flew hastily to his wardrobe box, hoping there to meet with what he sought, and emptying it earnestly of its contents, shaking and unfolding every article singly, and then carelessly and hastily throwing them down in hopelessness, without effecting the desired discovery. He then burst into a loud and melancholy lamentation, and in broken accents, apparently sobered by his loss, he informed us that his pocket book and cash were missing; and what is unusual for a man, especially a business man, found relief in a flood of tears! Without further explanation, he arose again suddenly, as though inspired with fresh hope, and commenced a new search, turning out the contents of all his pockets, strewing the table with gloves, neckcloth, a pocket handkerchief, pencil case, pocket knife, a silk purse which seemed to contain a few sovereigns, a few shillings in silver, and coppers probably received at the various tolls, with the many other items which constitute a traveller's goods and chattels. The re-search, however, was fruitless. Then, seeming to challenge his memory to find some other secret recess in which possibly he might have deposited his book—his brow overcast—despair depicted in his countenance—he passed his hand through his hair, and rested it upon his clammy forehead, when, all at once, his features were illumined, and there appeared to cross his mind a ray of hope, vivid as lightning. Anxiously unstrapping his hat box, nervous and excited, his hand tremulous, his whole frame agitated by the commingled feelings of hope and fear, he hastily turned out the contents; but, alas! it was not there. Without uttering a word—ringing, or causing to be rung, every bell—the waiting maid, boots, ostler, host and hostess, were all put into requisition; the chaise was reloaded, the horse hastily put to; and, whither he went, or how or whether he ever recovered possession of his lost property, from that day to this I have never heard. Certain it is, I and those present present with me never saw a being in so painful a dilemma—one who appeared to feel more intensely his unfortunate position—or who so much excited our sympathy and commiseration.

Notices of Books

From Mr. Edward Arnold.—'The Laws of Health,' by David Nabarro, M.D. The aim of this book—intended primarily for the older pupils in elementary schools, though its usefulness may be expected to extend far beyond this class—is to impress upon readers those rules of living which tend to the maintenance of good health, both physical and mental. Such important matters in this connection as the use and abuse of alcohol, the care of the teeth, the value of perfect ventilation and of exercise, the feeding of infants, the care of the eyes in childhood, the necessity for personal cleanliness, &c., are discussed in a clear, forcible manner that can scarcely fail of good effect, and the entire volume is one of which a very favourable opinion may be expressed. A certain amount of physiology is incorporated with the work, and where necessary diagrams are included.

From Messrs. George Bell & Sons.—'Gulliver's Travels,' by Jonathan Swift, D.D., edited, with Introduction and notes, by G. Ravenscroft Dennis, has now been added—we are sure to the general appreciation of readers—to the handy especially well-furnished 'York Library.' The present edition of the wanderings of the mighty Gulliver is in four volumes, and is the same as that published in 1899 as Volume VIII. of 'The Prose Works of Jonathan Swift' in Bohn's Standard Library.

From Messrs. Blackie & Son, Ltd.—'Old Mortality,' by Sir Walter Scott, Bart. This may be spoken of as a well-printed, suitably bound edition of Scott's great novel, which has the further recommendation of being issued at a very moderate price. Moreover, there is a short Introduction by Wm. Keith Leask, M.A., admirably calculated to whet the reader's appetite for the impressive incidents that follow, and a large number of concise, explanatory notes.

From the same.—'Elementary Physics: Practical and Theoretical (Third Year's Course),' by John N. Brown. This volume advances the student's knowledge of physics a further stage. It deals mainly with the experimental side of the subject, and the ground covered is extensive, embracing the principles of dynamics, hydrostatics, and heat. The questions and exercises, to say nothing of the numerous diagrams dotted over the book, form a useful feature.

[*] In 1847 Joseph Masters, of Aldersgate Street London, published for the author, Throne Crick, of Leicester, a little work entitled 'Sketches from the Diary of a Commercial Traveller,' from which we give some extracts.—ED P C.

From the same.—'Bacon's Essays,' edited by E. H. Blakeney, M.A. Here is a well-printed, strongly bound edition of the famous Essays which can easily be slipped into the coat pocket; which, in contradistinction to the many daintily produced volumes of the classics, is evidently prepared for use and not mere ornament. Mr. Blakeney's biographical Introduction is commendably brief and to the purpose, while the notes, extending over nearly one hundred pages, concisely clear up any obscurities connected with the text. For the benefit of younger students, not yet familiar with Bacon language, Mr. Blakeney has added a short index verborum and an index auctorum.

From the same—'Poems,' by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, with an introduction by the Right Rev. W. Boyd Carpenter, 18mo. in two styles, cloth and leather; 'Essays,' by Michael, Lord of Montaigne, translated by John Florio, with an introduction by Charles Whibley. These are two new volumes of 'The Red Letter Library.' The Bishop of Ripon has written an interesting and appreciatory introduction to the first, which he concludes with these words; 'Two months before his death he wrote his last poem, "Hermes Trismegistus." In it he wrote:—

"Happy they whose written pages
If amid the crumbling ages
  Still their name survives."

Longfellow's lot is even happier, for his name will certainly be remembered, and the world will not willingly suffer his works to perish.' Mr. Charles Whibley's Introduction to Montaigne gives a very brief account of Montaigne's life. 'Who would not,' he says, 'if he could, live in a tower, and compose a leisurely and deliberate masterpiece, which should not only be the perfect expression of himself, but should carry down this amiable memory to a distant posterity?' By the way, there is nothing in the Introduction or on the title-page to show that the volume contains only a small selection of the Essays.

From Messrs. Chatto & Windus.—'The Waters of Destruction,' by Alice Perrin. It is in India that Mrs. Perrin, whose previous remarkable novel, 'The Stronger Claim,' will be pleasurably remembered, again lays her plot, and again she depicts with a realism that as the story progresses becomes almost painful the evils arising from a mixed marriage. The man this time is an Irrigation Officer, one Stephen Dare, who is stationed on the Kali Nadi—the River of Destruction. Stephen, on his first arrival in India, has thought the life rather pleasant, but on being sent to this lonely spot, where he has only one white man, and he uncongenial, to consort with, speedily becomes depressed. For some time he has been looking forward to obtaining home-leave, and in England he hopes to meet the girl who in the days of his boyhood has won his heart. At the opening of the story the required permission for three months' absence has come to hand, and he is joyfully making his preparations for departure. Then the blow falls. He receives intelligence from home that his mother is in the greatest distress; his step-father, an artist of the usual unpractical variety, has been stricken with blindness; the whole family are in want of immediate assistance. It thus becomes necessary that he shall abandon all his plans for a holiday, send every penny he can scrape together to his people at home, and resign himself for an indefinite period to a life which has become positively hateful to him. While under these conditions he becomes acquainted with an extremely pretty native girl, succumbs to her physical charms, and eventually, inspired thereto by a perfervid missionary, marries her. The results, as already mentioned, are portrayed with almost painful realism. How the matter ends we have not space to tell, or to enter into the many interesting details of the plot. It must be sufficient to say that it is a story distinctly deserving to be read, and which in the essentials of consistent treatment, a knowledge of artistic effect, and a complete acquaintance with the life depicted, is much above the average of present day novels.

From Messrs. James Clarke & Co.—'Kit Kennedy,' 'Flower-o'-the-Corn,' 'Cinderella,' by S. R. Crochett; 'The Black Familiars,' by L. B. Walford. The publishers, we think, have acted wisely in issuing a cheap 'Copyright Edition' of these novels before the works have actually passed out of their hands. Moreover, the tasteful 'get-up,' good printing, and other attractive accessories of the books call for unqualified praise, and no better appearance has been shown by many volumes issued at treble the price. We wish Messrs. Clarke's venture every success; it is a step in the right direction—publishing fiction by recognised authors in a suitable handsomely appointed form at a moderate price without descending to the level of the catch-custom-at-any-sacrifice order.

From Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co.—'Lord George Bentinck,' by B. Disrael, with an Introduction by Charles Whibley. Now that the question of Protection is to the front, and the battle fought some sixty years ago is likely to be fought all over again, the re-issue of this political biography of one who played a great part in that fight is very opportune. It is a striking piece of work, and in its present form should find many new readers. Mr. Whibley's Introduction is excellent, and if he shows some partisanship we are far from quarrelling with him on this score. The man whose opinion can only serve to get him to the top of the fence is never of much account, and in politics he is an absolute danger. Time alone will show whether the issue of the battle in our day is to reverse, or uphold, the issue of the fight in 1846, but a careful study of this biography may possibly help many to form a definite opinion concerning the fiscal question.

From the same.—'The Fighting Man of Japan: the Training and Exercises of the Samurai,' by F. J. Norman. The author of this brochure is an old soldier who has had exceptional opportunities—being for many years resident in Japan and instructor in some of the leading colleges—of making a thorough study of the 'noble sciences of keujutsu and jujutsu,' and in such capacity he is anxious to convey his knowledge to his fellow-countrymen. His work, which is well illustrated, is divided into four chapters, successively treating of the 'Commencement of Japanese Military History,' 'The Education of the Japanese Military and Naval Officers, &c.,' 'Keujutsu, or Japanese Fencing,' and 'Japanese Wrestling, Sumö and Jujutso.' Considering that fencing and wrestling obtain such a large share of public attention at the present day, Mr. Norman's book should attract wide notice, and may confidently be recommended to those interested in the subject.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co.—'Stories from Shakespeare for Children' retold by Alice Spencer Hoffmann: 'King Lear' and 'King John.' The same delicate treatment is displayed in these versions as in previous volumes of the series. 'King Lear' is effectively illustrated by T. H. Robinson, and 'King John' by Dora Curtis. Both volumes are produced in the usual dainty manner of the Bedford Street house.

From the same.—Selections from the 'Conquest of Mexico' and 'Peru,' by W. H. Prescott, put into a continuous narrative, and edited by Oliphant Smeaton. Fcp. 8vo., pp. 272. It has been a matter of surprise to us that the works of W. H. Prescott have not long ago been seized by some enterprising publisher for the purpose of reproduction in a popular form. The present volume only professes to be a selection, forming a continuous narrative, and in a handy and compact form it conveys to the reader a fair idea of the charm of Prescott's style and of the story he has told. But selections are never satisfactory. It seems to us that a far more satisfactory volume might have been produced if the editor had taken a little more trouble and connected what he calls a 'continuous' narrative by a few editorial links or notes. What he apparently has done has been to take the original volumes, strike his blue pencil through the various pages, leaving enough matter to form the present volume, and then this matter is left to close itself up without a word from the editor. What he has thus left for the reader is good, but a little editorial care would have prevented the jar which one constantly feels in coming across passages referring one back to a previous chapter which does not exist—e.g., page 24: 'In a preceding chapter I have noticed the popular traditions respecting Quetzalcoatl.' There is no such chapter in this volume. A few editorial lines would have supplied the lacunæ. On page 27: 'The late affair of the conspiracy.' What was it? There is nothing to show. On page 52: 'Vulgar tradition already alluded to.' Where? Again, in the first battle that Cortes had with the Mexicans, the Tlascalans were his fiercest opponents, but without any further explanation than that they had quarrelled among themselves, they are found in 'The Massacre at Cholula' to be fighting on Cortes' side. In the Introduction Prescott is said to have blamed Cortes for the execution of Guatemozin. There is nothing of this in the text. On the contrary, they appear to have parted company in a friendly way. A few editorial words might have explained these things. This sort of carelessness irritates one, because it might have been so easily remedied; a very pleasant and delightful book should not have been so marred. 'Defied' for 'deified,' and 'diety' for 'deity' are examples of careless proof-reading. Notwithstanding these blemishes, the book, being wholly in Prescott's own words, cannot fail to prove very attractive to all readers.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—'The Garden of Nuts,' by W. Robertson Nicoll, M.A., LL.D. Many of these mystical expositions will doubtless be familiar to the reader, as they are reprinted from the British Weekly; and they are well worthy the permanent form this volume gives them. The essay on Christian Mysticism which forms the first part of the work seems to us, however, to be the most important part of the book, and the more people who read it the better. Religious controversy is perhaps as prevalent to-day as ever it was, though the manner of it may have changed somewhat; and in reading this essay the real futility of many of the differences which exist between us is very forcibly shown. Into the Brotherhood of the Holy Assembly differences cannot enter, though the roads which lead to it are many; and those seekers after truth who have to battle with a multitude of difficulties and doubts will find a consolation, not of mere words, but of thorough conviction, in this valuable essay. We do not like the title of the book in spite of the author's explanation. It is neither explanatory nor adequate, and might well cause the book to be overlooked, which would be a great pity.

From the same.—'The Makers of English Fiction,' by W. J. Dawson. We opened this book at random and read these lines referring to Dickens' 'Christmas Carol': 'The hardest man who reads it, even though he be a veritable Scrooge, cannot help asking himself who is his neighbour, and diligently inquiring until he finds a Tiny Tim in need of a Christmas dinner.' The absence of critical literary balance betrayed in this quotation, we are afraid, pervades the book generally, and renders it as a sober, trustworthy estimate of but poor value. But the crowd who desire to make acquaintance with superficial emotional aspects rather than solid attributes will without doubt find the book interesting.

From Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.—'The Guide to South Africa for the Use of Tourists, Sportsmen, Invalids, and Settlers,' edited annually by A. Samler Brown and G. Gordon Brown. So many year-books after achieving a signal amount of success fall off in their efforts that it would have been scarcely surprising if the thirteenth edition of this work had exhibited some evidence of slackness. But, so far from this being the case, the guide, we think, is better than ever. Certainly in no other direction could more reliable and useful information be procured regarding the character of the country, the opportunities it affords for sport, and its value as a settling ground for those who contemplate leaving the Old Country. To invalids suffering from pulmonary trouble, for whom the climate is well adapted, a timely warning is addressed, and it is pointed out that South Africa is not a suitable place for those who cannot to a certain extent shift for themselves. 'To send out sick people in the last stages of consumption on a fatiguing journey which leads to places where the unfortunate patient cannot procure proper attention is certainly wrong.' The numerous maps remain as heretofore a prominent and valuable feature of the book, and the extent of its information concerning mining, the area, population, and resources of the South African States, climatic conditions, clothing, coinage, hotel accommodation, education, railway regulations, routes of travel, and so forth, is certain to win the admiration and gratitude of readers.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—'The House of Mirth,' by Edith Wharton. This book gives a grim picture of the moneyed class in America, and one cannot help feeling that the author knows, that her characters are sketched from life, and that the Trenors, the George Dorsets, and the Van Osburghs are very unpleasantly real people. For these people nothing counts but the pursuit of pleasure, and everything, morals included, must be thrown aside if they stand in the way. The heroine, Lily Bart, in many ways a charming girl, is, by her bringing up, cast into this set. We may recognise that the troubles she has to suffer, the sordid tragedy of her life, are, in one sense, her own fault; she reaps what she sows, and we should like to be able to say that she deserves it, but this we cannot do. The author has handled her so skilfully that we are compelled to pity her, and to feel that only a little thing, a very little thing, stood between her and happiness. Here is the art of the thing. With a little more definite idea of life Lily Bart would have conquered at every point where she failed; throughout we expect her to conquer, and the end comes as rather a shock. The book is one to read, and must be given a conspicuous place among the novels which have appeared this season.

From Messrs. Milne & Stephen, The Caxton Press, Aberdeen.—'Lyrics of Childhood,' by Jessie Annie Anderson; 'Inner Lyrics,' by Alex. J. Grant. The worth of these two booklets of verse is not to be judged by their proportions. Miss Anderson has already shown that she possesses the true gift of the poet, and in the little work before us there is a charm and ease which are most attractive. The poems in the second volume are even slighter than in the first, but this is not to disparage them. Great value can be wrapped up in small compass, and Mr. Grant's work is certainly much above the average. The little books are daintily got up as Christmas souvenirs, and may be heartily recommended for this purpose.

From Mr. John Murray.—'The Book of the Rothamsted Experiments,' by A. D. Hall, M.A. This is a volume embodying the results of important researches into land cultivation that can scarcely fail to be of interest and value to the practical agriculturist. But it is usefully pointed out that the 'farmer who visits Rothamsted must not expect to see demonstrations of the most profitable means of growing this or that crop, but rather to obtain information as to its habits and requirements which on reflection he can make useful under his own conditions.' The object of these experiments, in other words, is to arrive at principles of general application which the farmer may adapt to his own special surroundings, utilising the information gained to the acquirement of pounds, shillings, and pence. The work—leaving the Biographical Introduction of Mr. R. Warington, principally referring to the part played by Sir John Lawes and Sir Joseph Gilbert in these investigations, out of the question—is divided into thirteen chapters, of which the principal treat of the experiments carried out upon wheat, barley, oats, root-crops grown continuously on the same land, the continuous growth of leguminous crops, grass land mown for hay every year, and crops grown in rotation; the nitrification and the composition of drainage waters; and the result of 'feeding' experiments. Numerous full-page plates, in addition to diagrams in the text, add to the serviceability of the volume.

From Mr. Everleigh Nash.—'The Web of the Past,' by the Countess of Cromartie. The stories in this volume are of a highly fanciful character, and are strongly pervaded by the superstitious belief so common in the north of Scotland. This the Countess of Cromartie has well brought out, though it can hardly be said she has displayed any particular merits of construction in her work.

From Messrs. Alston Rivers, Ltd.—'As Dust in the Balance,' by Mrs. H. H. Penrose. Of small account in her Irish home, where she is snubbed by her sisters, Rose Devenish marries John Warden, and is transplanted to a village in the neighbourhood of Aldershot. Left alone, the wife of a man altogether beneath contempt, and who quickly tires of her, she is suddenly thrown into the constant society of Edward Coventry. She had met him once in Ireland before her marriage, and that she falls in love with him now is hardly to be wondered at; hence disaster, though not disgrace, we imagine; we are left somewhat in doubt on this point. There is much pathos in the story, and many of the characters are well drawn, the women being handled with greater success than the men. About both Warden and Coventry there is something wanting to make them really alive; but there is ample compensation in Rose, who is a charming figure and little deserves the fate which is forced upon her. This is a much stronger novel than 'The Unequal Yoke,' by the same author.

From Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., we have received several volumes in 'Routledge's New Universal Library,' a handy, well-printed, and tastefully bound edition of standard works of literature taken from accurate texts, entirely unabridged, and, where necessary, annotated and indexed, besides being published at an extremely moderate price. Among these are 'Rasselas,' by Dr. Samuel Johnson; Leopardi's 'Essays, Dialogues, and Thoughts,' translated by James Thomson and edited by Bertram Dobell; 'Imaginary Conversations' (Classical), by Walter Savage Landor; 'Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents, together with Observations on a late Publication intituled "The Present State of the Nation,"' by Edmund Burke; and the first two volumes in an edition of six of the Spectator, with Introduction and notes by George A. Aitken.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—'A Golden Trust,' by Theo Douglas. Hidden treasure has always been a popular feature in fiction, and the complications to which it may lead admit of wonderful variety. In the present instance the treasure is the proceeds of wrongdoing, wealth obtained in earlier days by unscrupulous wreckers, and John Calderwood, the last of his race, is left with the responsibility of unearthing the treasure and making due distribution of its stores. But, unfortunately, his grandfather before dying has only been able to give him a faint idea of its whereabouts, and from this all the trouble proceeds. Moreover, there is an unprincipled person named Lawler who has an inkling of the concealed wealth, and is especially to be guarded against. He is supposed to be dead, but proves very much alive, since he makes his appearance in the disguise of a farm servant at the family homestead, and manages by his handsome appearance and insinuating manners to captivate John's widowed mother, whom he marries, thus securing his position on the scene where the treasure is hidden. Interwoven with the main plot of the story is a delicate love episode concerning Calderwood and a distant cousin who is half French; and ultimately, having nearly fallen victim to a murderous design of Lawler, John finds his way over to Paris to join her, and is a participator in some of the most exciting scenes of the Revolution. The charm of the story—of no inconsiderable kind—lies in the brisk narration, startling incidents, and romantic colouring. Occasionally there are attempts at characterisation, but these do not penetrate very deeply, though undeniably effective in the general picture.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'The Progress of Priscilla,' by Lucas Cleeve. We have often wondered when reading Lucas Cleeve's novels at the versatility of his style. It never in two succeeding works seems to be the same. In his present story he distinctly affects Henry James, with a strong flavouring of American methods generally. Nor is the plot particularly original. The idea of a man who takes upon himself the reputation of successful authorship without any claim to such distinction has frequently been used before—notably, by Anstey in 'The Giant's Robe.' On the other hand, it may readily be admitted Lucas Cleeve has employed his opportunities to effective purpose. Granted an ardent lover of no particular mental capacity who has unguardedly represented to the ambitious girl for whom he is a suitor that 'he has written something' and is delightedly called upon to reveal his anonymity, and thereupon seeks to shield himself under the reputation of a friend, a well-known writer, and the situation is replete with the most interesting possibilities. How matters right themselves in the long run we must leave readers to find out, but at least we can promise them a highly absorbing occupation in the quest.

From Messrs. Frederick Warne & Co.—'The Flaming Sword,' by Silas K. Hocking. Illustrated. There are some stories that attract attention from the outset; there are others that it is best to dive into when they have acquired the force of the narrative current. We have no hesitation in saying that the reader who makes acquaintance with Mr. Hocking in the middle of his story stands a better chance of being interested than he who has accompanied him from the beginning; for in this way he is more likely to fall under the influence of the plot and to escape the adverse impression created by the fearful superfluity of small talk to which Mr. Hocking is addicted. This same plot is replete with startling incidents rather crudely described. A young girl mysteriously disappears from her home and all attempts to trace her whereabouts, even when aided by a very remarkable police constable, are unsuccessful; the supposed son of a baronet, 'swarthy as a Spaniard with heavy jet black hair' (the badge, as every experienced fiction reader is aware, of deep-dyed villainy) on chiding the blacksmith's wife for picking up sticks in his father's preserves, is suddenly confronted with the statement 'I'm your mother!' which causes him to retort, with the true melodramatic hiss, 'I could strangle you for a farthing.' Later we are introduced to the upright, manly hero upon whom the Spanish rival in the affections of the disappearing girl fastens a hideous charge of house robbery; and there are numerous other original situations. Ultimately the mystery of the heroine's disappearance is cleared up, the villain meets with his due deserts, and when the virtuous, wrongly suspected hero leads his blushing bride to the altar there were not, we are told, two prouder or two happier people in all England.' Which is exactly as it should be, and will afford Mr. Hocking's many admirers, we are sure, the most intense satisfaction.

From Messrs. Watts & Co. we have received 'Jesus of Nazareth,' by Edward Clodd; and 'Ethical Religion,' by William Mackintire Salter. These two works, which are issued in a cheap form for the Ratutionalist Press Association, are brought within reach of the masses. Whether this is good for the masses or not is a matter of opinion. Difficult subjects made easy are always apt to be misleading, and for this reason popular religion, ethics, and science are not without their drawbacks and dangers. Now both these works are in their nature profound, however popularly they may be written, and since such subjects have engaged the greatest intellects of all ages, and opinions are still as conflicting as ever, it is hardly likely that those whose knowledge is, at the best, only of an elemental kind will have power to adequately grapple with such questions. This is not to criticise the works themselves. The Christian will not, of course, accept Mr. Clodd's work, and since his whole thought is diametrically opposed to Christianity, his criticism is likely to be wanting in justice; still, with an attempt to stand outside any controversy, we may well ask what is the actual result of such works as these being forced upon the consideration of the masses? They are certain to kill the tender faith of some, giving them nothing in return; are they likely to make others better men, or more reliable citizens? We very much doubt it.

From the same.—'The Agnostic Annual for 1906.' This volume contains some personal recollections of Herbert Spencer, by Professor W. H. Hudson, and amongst many other papers there is one on 'Freethought in Japan,' by John M. Robertson, which has some points of especial interest. The annual is in its twenty-third year of publication.

From the same.—'The Future Peace of the Anglo-Saxons,' by Major Stewart L. Murray. In its cheap edition it is to be hoped that this book will be widely read. The question of National Defence is a very important one to us, and it is not necessary to agree with all the author's conclusions to recognise that he has given us a very well considered and able book upon the subject. There is a preface by Earl Roberts on National Efficiency and Readiness for War.

From Messrs. F. V. White & Co., Ltd.—'Dick the Faithful,' by John Strange Winter. Mrs. Stannard's later novels have borne a strong family resemblance to one another, and what applies to one may with equal justice be said of the rest. 'Dick the Faithful' is brightly and vivaciously written; there is no substance in it and but slight attempt at characterisation, but it will pleasantly enliven the monotony of an unoccupied evening when the mind is disinclined for the effort that a novel of more solid character and deeper insight would entail. One may perhaps marvel under such conditions at the terrible amount of small talk, not to say gossip, indulged in by army officers, and raise the eyebrows slightly at the frequent bad language and evidences of bad taste; but on the whole we are thankful for the goods the gods provide us, and pleasantly pursue the adventures of 'Dick the Faithful' to the end. Dick was a very good fellow, and we really think he deserved a better wife than Kit Owen. But in this we can scarcely expect Mrs. Stannard to agree with us, for we suspect that in her estimation the Colonel's daughter was a very desirable little parti indeed.

From Messrs. Williams & Norgate.—'The Evolution of Religion,' by L. R. Farnell, M.A., D.Litt. We are quite in agreement with the author when he says that the study of comparative religion and its relations to anthropology is of growing importance. Rightly understood and applied, such study must tend towards enlightenment and a truer appreciation of religion; but it is, unfortunately, a fact that there are certain temperaments only capable of looking at a truth from one side, people who, having discovered that some Christian ritual bears a strong likeness to some Pagan rite, immediately assume that the former is merely a copy or amplification of the latter, and has therefore no deep meaning in it. From such a position it is an easy step to unbelief. But surely the very fact of this likeness, the very existence of these types, go far to prove the truth of what we believe, for the Christian religion in its highest sense did not commence with Christ, but with the God-made world, and there is nothing marvellous in the fact that ancient peoples should have in their religious observances types foreshadowing the higher manifestations of the truth. The surprise would be if they had not. The work before us, if not exhaustive, is a very able anthropological study; the problems which the consideration of the world's religions set before us, and the influence which the ancient conception of purity has had upon religion and society, is lucidly discussed; while the evolution of prayer from its lower to its higher forms is dealt with at some length. This is certainly a work which demands attention, but it is essentially one for the student and thinker rather than for those who, as stated above, are only able to see truth from one aspect.

New Editions, &c.—Messrs. Thomas Nelson & Sons have added Charles Dickens's 'Old Curiosity Shop,' and Mrs. Beecher Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' to their series of 'Sixpenny Classics.' Each volume has a frontispiece, and, considering the price, is a marvel of good production.—From Mr. John Lane we have received a copy of that absorbing novel 'Castle Richmond,' by Anthony Trollope, which he has issued in 'The New Pocket Library.' The necessary few words of introduction are contributed by Mr. Algar Thorold.—The latest volume in 'The Temple Classics,' published by Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co., consists of a selection of 'Indian Poetry,' adroitly rendered into English verse by Romesh Dutt, C.I.E., who has also revised the proofs and added the marginalia.—Lovers of good fiction whose means are moderate will welcome the sixpenny illustrated editions of Seton Merriman's 'Roden's Corner,' and Charles Garvice's 'Just a Girl,' published by Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd., we have received Part II. of John Morley's 'Life of William Ewart Gladstone.' The work is to be completed in fifteen sixpenny parts.

From Mr. John Lane we have received 'The Forbidden Fruit, or Shaddock, or Grape-Fruit: How to Serve and How to Eat it,' by Mrs. John Lane. The title sufficiently explains the pamphlet, which has a vein of humour in it.

Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co. have sent us a cheap edition of 'Facts about the Memory and its Use,' by Rev. J. D. Kilburn, which contains many hints which may prove useful, although it seems to us that for such memory as the author developed special gifts are required which no amount of study will give. It may be noted that the profits arising from the sale of this book are to be devoted to foreign mission work.

We have received a copy of David Christie Murray's 'Rainbow Gold,' which Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd., have added to their 'Sixpenny Novel' Series. The type is clear, and the work is illustrated.

From the 'Home Words' Publishing Office we have received a copy of the annual volume of this periodical. Under the control of the experienced editor the contents of this attractively bound book are well selected and sufficiently varied. Fiction is, of course, represented by illustrated serial stories from such capable novelists as Agnes Giberne and Mrs. L. T. Meade.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

NOW READY

THE DECEMBER

NUMBER OF

THE BOOK MONTHLY

AN ILLVSTRATED RECORD,
GVIDE AND MAGAZINE
FOR BOOKSELLERS,
LIBRARIANS & PVBLISHERS
FOR BOOKBVYERS,
READERS & WRITERS

If you do not take in the BOOK MONTHLY you are missing a useful and agreeable friend. It tells all about the books of the day, has well informed literary gossip, and contains singularly fresh articles on subjects of interest to all readers and writers.

Let us, in proof of this, mention two of the articles in the December number.

One consists of memories of literary celebrities and others by Mr. James Mills, who, for many years, was in the household of the late John Murray—John Murray III. Most interesting glimpses are given of the circle which was wont to meet under his hospitable roof at Albemarle Street—George Borrow, Richard Owen, the Eastlakes, Livingstone, and a dozen more.

The other article is an answer, by Mr. Hubert Bland, to the inquiry, Where are the ghosts which yesterday flourished in English fiction? His explanation of their disappearance is pretty convincing, although, indeed, it has probably not occurred to many people.

Then the December BOOK MONTHLY has a poem—a really charming poem—on the little books beautiful; it has many excellent illustrations as usual; and the practical man will find in it a capital catalogue of the November books, and full particulars of those coming out in December.

The publishers of the BOOK MONTHLY are SIMPKIN, MARSHALL & CO., 4 Stationers' Hall Court, London; its price 6d. net.

The Publishers' Circular

THE INTERNATIONAL BOOK TRADE.

MESSRS. ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO., LTD., have addressed a letter to the Times under the above heading, the cause of their complaint being that an Australian firm of booksellers had addressed a firm of American publishers, complaining that the latter had refused to supply them with certain American books, on the ground that they had made an arrangement with a London publisher—but expressing willingness to continue to do business with them—supposing they themselves were to open a house in London. They say they know 'what suits this market better than any English house does.' Very possibly. But surely they are dashing their heads against a brick wall—neither they nor Messrs. Constable seem to quite understand the position. If this rather rampant 'firm of Australian booksellers' wants to deal direct with the American publisher of a popular author, all they have to do is to outbid the English publisher, and then they can set the type or buy plates and publish the book to their heart's content. There is no law to prevent them, but evidently they are hardly ripe for that sort of business just yet. What they now expect an American publisher to do seems to amount to this—namely, that after the said American has obtained a valid copyright in England, and sold the same to an English publisher—who buys all rights as far as English copyright extends—that the said American should break his contract with England, in order to supply them in Australia with a special Australian edition. There is neither reason, justice, nor common sense in it—for certainly the English publisher will produce the book as quickly and as cheaply as the American publisher, and the copyright contract compels them to publish simultaneously. All things being equal, one can hardly see why this ardent Australian firm should not be willing to deal with the Mother-country rather than America for the same goods at the same price; it does not look much like the brotherhood implied in 'Imperial Federation.' Knowledge of the Australian market, either by the English or American publisher, has nothing to do with the matter. That is the Australian bookseller's affair. He will not buy any book unless he has a market for it. He does not seem to be aware that he already has the whole field of American literature to roam over and choose from, and no Englishman would dream of interfering with him. But when he finds that the good American publisher cannot be induced to break his contract already made with an English publisher, he rather spitefully threatens that he will pass all his other publications in the near future.

Messrs. Constable seem to put the boot on the wrong leg; they scold the Americans, not the Australian, and not on account of this Australian business at all—seeing that this particular action on the part of the American publisher is honourable to him—but on account, generally, of their past and present delinquencies, particularly as regards heavy import duties and type-setting for copyright — matters which have long since been discussed in these columns, one might almost say ad nauseam. There may come a time in the distant future when 'Imperial Federation' will throw off the small yoke which now binds it to the Mother-country, when it will write and publish its own books and books of the world in general, and supply all the world with its literature, but that time is not yet. The Australian bookseller who wrote that letter to the American publisher does not, I feel sure, at all represent the feeling of Australian booksellers in general towards the Mother-country. In fact, I find by a copy of the Publishers' Weekly just to hand that the highly respectable firm of Angus & Robertson, of Sydney, are starting a movement against the importation of American books under the circumstances described.

Since writing the foregoing I have seen a letter by Mr. A. G. Stephens in the Australian Daily Telegraph of October 5, 1905. Mr. Stephens argues sensibly enough, and apparently in reply to what had been previously urged by the editor, that 'even if the American Government had granted copyright ten years ago to Australian authors without the type-setting clause it would have been no good to them because books by Australian authors don't sell in America, and so,' he quaintly adds, 'as we have had nothing to lose, so we have lost nothing'; and the 'future,' he says, 'seems likely to repeat the past.' America is evidently no good for Australian authors, so they 'needna fuss about it.' On the other hand, American books are of use to Australian readers, as, he says, they can buy 1 dol. 50 cent novels at 3*s.* 6*d.*; therefore, to prevent their importation is a crime; 'it would benefit nobody but English publishers.' Mr. Stephens, however, does not put the case quite fairly or correcly. The dollar fifty cent novel he mentions can only be one that has already been copyrighted in England, because about all other American novels there is no question—he can import as many as he pleases; but of this particular one he cannot—the law prevents him—and it is doubtless this law that the Australians want to get rid of; but why it is not easy to see, for they lose nothing by it, because they can buy the English colonial editions at a much lower price than the American editions. Are the Australian readers so perverse that they will prefer to buy direct from America at higher price than from England at a lower? I doubt it. Australian booksellers cannot compete with English publishers for the purchase of the American rights—their market is too limited—but that is not a reason why they should object to American expensive editions being stopped in favour of the English legitimate reprint.

Mr. Stephens argues, however, chiefly as to the future of Australia. Some day or other, he thinks, Australia should be put on the same footing as Canada. Well, Canada was at one time at liberty to import from her next-door neighbour pirated editions of English authors on payment of a royalty to the author, a law that was constantly broken owing to the various Custom-houses along the immense frontier being quite unable, and not very vigilant at best, in stopping such invasions. It was not Canada's interest to be very vigilant. Then they passed a law, which received Imperial sanction, by which Canadian publishers could import plates from the English copyright-holder and pay him a royalty on his sales; then it became his interest to look after and stop pirated editions crossing the border.

Mr. Stephens thinks that a British author 'should be obliged as far as possible to print his books where he sells them,' and that Australia should not legislate to create industries in other countries. The time will come when Australia will be able to do all these things, and many more; even now, as we have already said, there is nothing to prevent Australian printers outbidding English publishers for both English and American authors, and so employ their native industries in the manufacture of these works at home. The only question for them is, Would it pay? One would be loth to think that our Australian friends really have the animus against the Mother-country which these occasional outbursts, these 'tempests in a teapot,' seem to foreshadow. E. M.

NOTES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. will publish on January 5, 1906, Mr. Winston Churchill's work on 'Lord Randolph Churchill.' The publishers feel that they are justified in calling attention to this book as the most interesting and important publication of the present season, both by reason of its remarkable literary qualities, and also as an adequate appreciation of the character and work of one of the most striking figures of the nineteenth century in English public life. The work occupies two octavo volumes, and contains several portraits of Lord Randolph at various periods of his life, two portraits of Lady Randolph Churchill, and some other illustrations, which include a facsimile reproduction of a letter from Queen Victoria.

The Nineteenth Century and After for December contains a most important and timely article by Prince Kropotkin on 'The Revolution in Russia.' Very few know the vast empire as the Prince does, and it is reassuring to find that the Russian people will, in his opinion, emerge from their troubles 'ready to march towards the higher goals of progress.'

In these days of light reading it is interesting to hear that the publishers of Dr. Smyth's 'How We Got Our Bible' have printed 90,000 copies of the shilling edition, and they now contemplate the early issue of a sixpenny edition, which will bring the number up to 114,000. It has also been decided by Messrs. Sampson Low & Co., Ltd., to continue Dr. Smyth's series on 'The Bible for the Young.'

A good old book, much quoted by writers on London, is about to appear in a modern dress. This is John Thomas Smith's 'Book for a Rainy Day, or Recollections of Events in the Last Sixty-Six Years' (1766–1832). The editor, Mr. Wilfred Whitten (well known as 'John o' London' in T.P.'s Weekly), has treated Smith's book in the spirit of its cheerful title, and, besides a biographical introduction, has written nearly five hundred notes, which aim to supplement as well as to elucidate much of Smith's gossip about London and the art world of a hundred years ago. This edition is illustrated with portraits and engravings chosen for their curious interest or their dash of caricature, and Messrs. Methuen will publish it in a few days.

With the December number The World's Work enters upon its fourth year. The birthday is celebrated by an issue containing an unusually large number of illustrations, an opening article describing how the magazine is produced, and a frontispiece portrait of the Editor, Mr. Henry Norman, M.P.

In connection with the centenary of Christian missions in China, a history of Chinese Protestant missions is being prepared by Dr. Arthur H. Smith, the author of 'Chinese Characteristics,' 'Village Life in China,' and other widely read books which are published in this country by Messrs. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier.

We understand that with the new year The Churchman will commence a new and enlarged series under the editorship of Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, of Wycliffe Hall.

Messrs. Alexander Moring & Co. have published an artistic Calendar, the headings showing the growth of the year from January to December—youth, maiden, and old man. Each month has a long page to itself divided into the days of the month with blank spaces for memorandum, so that one can see at a glance all the engagements one has made for the month—things to remember to do, &c. This Calendar is an improvement in many ways.

The last word on Lady Hamilton is to be published by Mr. W. G. Menzies on December 7 in the form of a handsome volume entitled 'Emma, Lady Hamilton, a Biographical Essay with a Catalogue of the Published Portraits,' by Mr. J. T. Herbert Baily, the editor of the well-known magazine, the Connoisseur. The plates are a distinguishing feature.

The 'Life of Christ,' by Principal Stewart, which he has written for Messrs. Dent's 'Temple' series of 'Bible Handbooks,' will be ready in a few days.

Messrs. Greening & Co., in announcing Mr. Max Baring's new novel, 'A Prophet of Wales,' of which the central figure is a young revivalist preacher, desire to call special attention to it as one not only dealing with a subject of the day, but as one having a strong human interest, and gradually leading up to a most dramatic close. The story centres round the mystic lights seen, or said to have been seen, at Egryu Chapel, near Barmouth. Of this building an illustration figures as a frontispiece. The plot is said to be original, and 'something new' in the way of fiction is to be placed before the reader.

'Punch Almanack for 1906' is even better than usual. A novelty is a double-page colour plate by Mr. Bernard Partridge, the first coloured picture ever issued in connection with the paper—Mr. Punch evidently thinks it is better late than never. The picture shows Mr. P. reviewing the fashions of his reign as far as ladies' dress is concerned. Mr. P. looks very much shocked, and as though he wondered, at the rate they are going, how long it will take the ladies to get back to the dress of Eve before the fall.

Messrs. Williams & Norgate announce for immediate publication a new volume in the Crown Theological Library, entitled 'History of Early Christian Literature, the Books of the New Testament,' by Baron von Soden, Professor of Theology in the University of Berlin.

The same publishers also announce for immediate publication a volume of lectures in defence of the Book of Daniel, entitled 'Daniel and His Prophecies,' by Dr. C. H. H. Wright, Bampton and Grinfield Lecturer, &c.

Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., have in the Press a new novel by Keighley Snowden, entitled 'Princess Joyce.' In this story the author once more places his characters in scenes with which he is well familiar—for the most part amongst the working people of Yorkshire.

Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode publish 'The Royal Bijou Diary for 1906,' with short poetical and other readings for every day, bound in leather with embossed silver front side. The silver mounting is done by Messrs. Comyns & Sons, of Beak Street.

Books always come in too late for our Christmas Number, which is at press at the moment of writing this note, and will, we hope, be ready on Thursday. Among books we should have liked to have included as very suitable for Christmas is 'The Crucian Year, Thoughts in Verse, of Love and Devotion, for Every Day throughout the Calendar Year,' by George Wells. 'All true Christians are Crucians,' says Luther, and unless they are very narrow-minded, as some good Christians certainly are, it seems to us that they will welcome this hopeful, helpful earnest little book; it is produced in Mr. Henry Frowde's usual good style, and at the price of 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

Messrs. Barnicott & Pearce, of the Athenæum Press, Taunton, send us an admirably arranged catalogue of the Newest Books of the Season in the chief branches of literature, with a classified index.

Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd., have added to their two sumptuous volumes of 'Angelo's Reminiscences,' published by them last year, a third volume in the shape of 'Angelo's Picnic.' Though the illustrations are not so numerous as in the case of the previous volumes, they do not fall behind in quality. As examples of colour printing from copperplates the prints of 'Mrs. Jordan' and 'Mrs. Hartley' are equal to the best eighteenth-century work, while the miniature of 'Dally the Tall' is a beautiful specimen of hand colouring. Bnt perhaps the most successful of the illustrations are the facsimiles of water colour and other drawings, the most remarkable being a sketch by Jack Bannister, the actor, of Rowlandson, the artist, and 'Rowlandson and his Fair Sitters,' by the artist himself.

When one speaks of a 'Game,' you begin to think of something that can be had for a shilling or half-a-crown, but the publishers of the 'Jane Naval War Game' —Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.—inform us that the price may be anything from three guineas up to fifty guineas, and that it is adopted by every Navy in the world, the Japanese being large buyers.

Additions to 'The Living Masters of Music' and 'The New Pocket Library' will be made on the same date—Mr. H. T. Finck's 'Edward Grieg' to the former, and a reprint of Captain Marryat's 'The Phantom Ship' to the latter. Mr. W. Clark Russell has written an Introduction to this new edition of 'The Phantom Ship.'

Mr. James Baker may claim to be a Bohemian. The Senate and Council of Prague have voted and sent to him through their Starosta, Dr. Srb, the great silver medal for merit of the city, with an illuminated diploma on vellum, for his literary work, numerous books, and articles on Bohemia written during the last twenty years. The medal is a fine example of the engraver's art.

Mr. John Lane will publish on December 8 a new edition of 'The Life of St. Mary Magdalen'—Miss Valentina Hawtrey's translation from the Italian of an unknown writer.

The publishers of the 'Sixpenny Cameo Classics' announce a new series of books for young folks similar in style and size, cloth bound, and illustrated in colour, which will be known as 'The Children's Classics,' and will also sell at sixpence net. The first four books are now ready, and comprise 'The Ice Maiden,' 'The Story of Jesus,' 'Robinson Crusoe,' and 'Sinbad the Sailor.' The series is to be continued at frequent intervals.

As the second volume in their series of 'Notable Scottish Trials,' Messrs. Sweet & Maxwell, Ltd., will publish early this month a 500-page volume on 'The Trial of the City of Glasgow Bank Directors,' edited by William Wallace, M.A., Sheriff Substitute, Campbeltown. The work will contain portraits of the prisoners, judges, and leading counsel.

The new edition of 'Patience Games,' by 'Tarbart,' published by Messrs. T. De La Rue & Co., is considerably larger than the first edition, containing, as it does, descriptions of 100 Patiences, which are described with a clearness and conciseness which make it a pleasure to learn new Patiences, and the book will prove a boon to many a Patience player. The get-up of the book is excellent in every way.

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., have just ready the 1905-6 edition of that admirable work, Brown's 'Guide to South Africa,' invaluable to tourists, sportsmen, invalids, and settlers. It has over 500 pages, and many excellent maps in colour.

Mr. H. J. Peach, of 37 Belvoir Street, Leicester, has some items under the headings 'Early Printing,' 'Elizabeth Broadside Ballads,' 'Defoe,' &c. in his No. 14 Catalogue,' also 'XIV.th to XVIII.th Century MSS.'

'Hymn-Tunes and their Story,' by James T. Lightwood, is announced by Mr. Charles H. Kelly, 2 Castle Street, City Road.

Messrs. Murray, Ltd., of 24 Loseby Lane, Leicester, have a copy of the rare third edition of Walton's 'Compleat Angler,' 1661, for sale in their No. 44 Catalogue, price £25. Walton steadily increases in value as regards editions published in his lifetime.

ENGLISH PUBLISHERS AND CANADA.

ANOTHER evidence of the growing importance of the Canadian field in the eyes of English publishers is the announcement that Messrs. Macmillan & Co., of London, are about to open a branch office in Toronto, through their New York office. This move, following on the steps of the opening of a Canadian office by Mr. Henry Frowde, of the Oxford Press, is most significant. To our minds it is the precursor of several more such moves.

For a long time it has been the habit of English publishers to disparage Canada, but the day when such disparagement is in keeping with conditions is long past. It can be shown on the best of evidence that Canadians spend more money per capita on books than the people of the United States. It is also abundantly evident that Canada's population is advancing by leaps and bounds. Consequently within a few years there will be a reading population in Canada that will have to be reckoned with.—Canadian Bookseller and Stationer.

A BOOK FOR PUBLISHERS.

'THE PUBLISHER'S REMEMBRANCER.'

MESSRS. A. P. TAYLER & Co., of 38 Clifton Street, Finsbury, send us a novelty in the shape of a Publisher's Remembrancer and Publication Book. It is a convenient quarto size; on each left-hand page are printed all or nearly all the various items which come into account on the production of a new book, with blank spaces or money columns to be filled in in ink. Some fifty entries in all may have to be made, but in most cases there will not be so many, and where an item not provided for has to be included it can easily be written in. Of course, most publishers have their own special methods of entering up charges for author, printer, papermaker, &c., &c., but we think those who have no printed remembrancer of this kind will find this book extremely useful. On the page opposite each entry for a first edition there is space for 'notes for subsequent editions,' libel actions, &c. We believe that the book can be had to order with any number of leaves, from fifty upwards, at a very moderate price. We are glad to see that there are ruled pages for alphabetical index printed in red and black at the commencement.

For all NEWSPAPERS, MAGAZINES, and PERIODICALS send your subscriptions to WM. DAWSON & SONS, LTD., Cannon House, Bream's Buildings, London (established 1809). Catalogue gratis.

DEATH OF M. GEORGES CHARPENTIER.

The Figaro announces the death of M. Georges Charpentier, the publisher, at the age of fifty-nine years. M. Charpentier was the son of the founder of the well-known publishing firm. Before carrying on the business himself he devoted several years to journalism, making many friends among literary men. The Bibliothèque Charpentier, which is now under the management of M. Eugène Fasquelle, published the works of the brothers Goncourt, Théophile Gautier, Flaubert, Zola, and Daudet, and M. Georges Charpentier himself played an important part in the history of French literature in the nineteenth century.

MESSRS. CASSELL & COMPANY, LTD.

Social Entertainment.

At the invitation of Mr. Arthur Spurgeon (General Manager of Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.) a large and representative gathering of the heads of departments and members of the literary, commercial, and publishing staff of the Company took place on Wednesday evening in the Gallery of the Royal Society of British Artists, Suffolk Street, Pall Mall.

Sir Clarence Smith, Chairman of Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd., and many ladies and gentlemen distinguished in the literary, artistic, and journalistic world were also present.

Among those who accepted the invitation to be present at the lecture were Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., Sir Ernest Clarke, Dr. Bowdler Sharpe, Messrs. F. Carruthers Gould, Edward Clodd, Herbert Cornish, G. B. Burgin, Bloundelle-Burton, G. Manville Fenn, Tom Gallon, Lionel Gowing, T. Heath Joyce, W. J. C. Lancaster, R. E. Leader, R. Leighton, Haldane MacFall, Algernon Rose, George Ricks, Joseph Shaylor, Keighley Snowden, Aaron Watson, R. B. Marston, Arnold Forster, jun., J. Reburn, H. Rountree, and a large number of gentlemen connected with the bookselling trade.

The Directors, Managers of Departments, and Editors present included Mr. Edwin Bale, R.I., Messrs. Cross, Lewer, Mellor, Hedger, Allen, Bex, Fidler, Bullen, Dippie, Hall, Hamer, Hutchings, David Williamson, Paul Hasluck, Wood Smith, Ernest Foster, and many others.

The guests, who were received by Mr. and Mrs. Spurgeon, numbered upwards of 400, and during the preliminary part of the proceedings had the privilege of inspecting the fine works of art which adorn the walls of the Gallery. Mr. Spurgeon welcomed the company in a short speech, and then introduced Mr. Richard Kearton, who delivered an admirable lecture on 'Wild Nature and her Ways.' Mr. Kearton delighted everyone with his eloquent, racy, and instructive description of bird, animal, and insect life, which he and his brother have so patiently investigated under all sorts and conditions for many years past. Mr. Kearton is a perfect enthusiast for wild nature at first hand. His lecture showed how much solid information can be acquired when the student of nature overcomes the difficulties that usually bar his progress to a knowledge of the deeper secrets of the woods and fields. That Mr. Kearton quickly transmitted his enthusiasm to his audience on Wednesday night was shown by the constant applause which greeted his remarks. The lantern slides also were received with great applause. These were about 100 in number—selected from 10,000 negatives taken during the past thirteen years —and were illustrative of almost every variety of bird life in this country, most of the photographs having been obtained in Westmorland, the Highlands, Surrey, and the Norfolk Broads, all prolific breeding places for the rarest of our British birds. The lecturer interspersed his comments with some remarkable and very faithful imitations of bird sounds.

At the close of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was proposed to Mr. Kearton by Sir Clarence Smith, who in a few well-chosen words spoke of the great enjoyment which the lecture had obviously given.

Mr. F. Carruthers Gould (who is a great authority on ornithology, as well as being the leading political cartoonist of the day), seconded the vote, and referred to the great amount of knowledge which can be acquired by the habit of close observation of bird life.

The vote of thanks was carried by acclamation, and Mr. Kearton responded. The company afterwards resolved itself into a social gathering, and partook of light refreshments. The music during the evening was supplied by an instrumental band.

'ABOUT PRINTING.'

'About Printing' is the title of a quarto illustrated brochure published by Messrs. Spottiswoode & Co., of New Street Square, E.C., which we can recommend to the attention of all who want artistic printing done, with suggestions and specimens of illustration work in half-tone, colour, &c.

A FREE BEGGING FREE LIBRARY.

It is all very well for free libraries to give the public free reading, but we really do not see why publishers should be expected to present free copies of their publications to free libraries. Here is a copy of a circular of which four or five copies were sent to one publishing house, all asking for free copies of different publications. In the interests of the publishers and booksellers we think it is time this free begging business ceased.

Borough of Stamford.

Public Free Library, Stamford:
November 25, 1905.

Dear Sir,—A public free library, under the management of a committee appointed by the Town Council, and supported by public rate, is in course of erection in this borough, and will shortly be opened for the use of the inhabitants.

Many publishers of newspapers, magazines, and books very generously assist the free-library movement by sending weekly, monthly, quarterly, or annual papers and periodicals for the use of readers.

The committee would be greatly indebted to you and very grateful if you could kindly present a copy of each issue of Classified Directory, as published, or any books, directories, and other publications for the reading room, reference library, or lending library. The income from the penny rate is only £137 a year, so that the amount available for th purchase of papers, magazines, and books, after payment of necessary working expenses, will be very limited.

The committee are anxious to begin with a good supply of all kinds of literature, and I should be obliged if you will kindly let me know whether you can make the above contribution; if so, I shall be pleased to receive it at my address as below at your early convenience—also cover or case for same, if any.

Yours faithfully,
Herbert Hart,
Chairman of Library Committee.
Barnhill House, Stamford.

P.S.—If sending, please enclose name of contributing book, paper, or publisher.

A NINETY-THREE-YEAR-OLD TRANSLATOR.

Mrs. Francis Alexander, of Florence, Italy, who has translated from the Italian the more than one hundred and twenty miracle stories and sacred legends which comprise the volume entitled 'Il Libro d' Oro,' is in her ninety-third year. She was a great friend of Ruskin during the latter's stay in Florence, and it was Ruskin who introduced to the world Mrs. Alexander's daughter, Miss Francesca Alexander, as the author of 'The Story of Ida.' Since his death Miss Alexander has published a volume of versified Italian legends under the title 'The Hidden Servants,' while her mother has been devoting part of her leisure to translating and engrossing the miracle stories and sacred legends written by fathers of the Church, and published in Italy in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Mrs. Alexander's painstaking handwriting is as legible as typewriting.

VARIETIES OF BOOK COLLECTORS.

Book collectors of the twentieth century fall naturally into these classes:

Bibliomane—An indiscriminate, emotional collector.

Bibliognoste—A learned collector, very expert in imprints, first editions, and the technicalities.

Bibliograph—A collector who writes about his collections.

Bibliotaphe—A cautious collector who keeps his books always under lock and key in glass cases.

Bibliophile—A real lover of books; one who buys books only for the pleasure of reading them.—Minneapolis Journal.

The following extracts are from a long and most interesting lecture by Mr. Richard Cameron, F.S.A.Scot., the well-known secondhand bookseller, of Edinburgh, who, despite the fact that he is over eighty-two years of age, delivered it in the most spirited manner. The occasion was the opening of the thirteenth session of the Edinburgh Booksellers' Assistants' Association on the evening of Thursday, October 26, in the Protestant Institute, George IV. Bridge, Edinburgh.

The First Newspapers in Scotland.

In early times the liberty of the Press was greatly hampered and hindered by parties in power. Even ballads and broadsides were with difficulty permitted to be printed and issued. For instance, so late as the year 1630 the municipal authorities of Edinburgh would appear to have had the supervision of the printing business. In the Town Council Records of that date, the following statute appears: 'That John Hart, printer in Edinburg, being about to bring out an edition of the Bible, the Town Council gave him formal permission to take a new apprentice for the advancement of the said wark, notwithstanding the time of three years be not past since he replaced an apprentice last: providing it sall not be lawful to him to tak and have ane other prentice before the expiry of six years.'

And, even so late as the year 1637, it is stated as an historical fact, 'That so little curiosity was felt in England, either in the Court or the Country, to know anything of Scotland, or what was doing there, that when the whole nation was solicitous to know what passed weekly in Germany, Poland, and other parts of Europe, no man ever enquired what was doing in Scotland, nor had that kingdom a place or mention in one page of any Gazette.'

And even down to the year 1657 there does not appear to have been any Scottish newspaper. In the month of September of that year it is recorded 'That the Magistrates of Glasgow, feeling the need of ane diurnal," that is newspaper, 'a luxury hitherto little known in Scotland, appoint John Fleming to write to his man wha lyes at London, to cause one to be sent for the town's use.' For a long period the magistrates of Glasgow had, as was then customary, been supplied with weekly intelligence by 'News-Letter,' through a legal agent at a distance. Such were really written newspapers, which were much in request when information was wanted as to what was going on.

Chap Books.

In those times the principal mental food provided for the population consisted of the Bible, the Catechism, and a few religious books. In course of years, however, another class of what may be called popular literature was brought into existence. This was what were known as chap books, or Penny Histories. These were so called because of their being carried about the country for sale by chapmen, or pedlars. Such chap books came to be in great demand, and, being in large variety, they became favourites with the country folks everywhere. Immense numbers of them were printed in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Paisley, Stirling, Falkirk, and other places. Many of the old chap books were full of humour, such as 'Wise Willie and Witty Eppy,' 'Leiper the Tailor,' 'The History of Haveral Wives,' 'Janet Clinker's Orations,' and many of a similar kind, besides quaint old ballads, songs, and heroic stories and tales, all of which were largely circulated. They were illustrated with rude woodcuts, and are now rare.

'HISTORIC ILLINOIS.'

Messrs. A. C. McClurg & Co., of Chicago, have just published Mr. Randall Parrish's long expected work, 'Historic Illinois: a Romance of the Early Days.' The scope of the work has developed much beyond the original plan, and it is now a large volume of some 500 pages, with over fifty illustrations. The work is a distinct contribution to the annals of the West, for no State of the Union surpasses Illinois in the romantic incidents of the early days. These are full of colour, action, and adventure, for above her peaceful plains and woods once waved the flags of four contending nations, while men of the white race and the red strove continually for mastery. Here came priest and soldier, honest settler and fleeing outlaw, noble and peasant, coureur de bois, and Canadian voyageur, each bearing his part in the great struggle of two centuries. The continual conflict with savagery, the conspiracy of Pontiac, the wars of the Revolution and of 1812, all had their fields of battle on Illinois soil; and there is scarcely a county in the great State without its romantic legends, its interesting traditions of the past.

MESSRS. CHARLES LETTS'S DIARIES, &c.

Aluminium must be getting very cheap, since Messrs. Charles Letts & Co. are able to make use of it as a substitute for the ordinary material of Christmas cards. They have added to their excellent diaries of all kinds a wall plaque of aluminium with an attractive coloured print on it and calendar for the year. We think the public will appreciate this useful novelty.

'RAILROADIANA.'

For 3½*d.* in stamps Mr. Edward Baker, 16 John Bright Street, Birmingham, will send his catalogue of books, time-tables, &c., connected with the Origin, Rise, and Development of Railways, including many scarce items. It has taken Mr. Baker over twenty years to get this collection together, and he says it includes many unique works.

Mention the 'P. C.'—Our Readers who order books, &c. they see mentioned or advertised in the Publishers' Circular will do us a great service if they will mention the fact to the Publishers and Wholesale Agents.

$1,000 FOR A LAW TEXT-BOOK.

The Emma Willard Association has decided to offer a prize of not less than $1,000 for the best text-book on law and business adapted to the needs of women and for use in girls' schools. A committee has been appointed to arrange the details of the contest, and is expected to report at an early date.

Letters to the Editor

RE TIMES BOOK CLUB.

Dear Sir,—Pro bono publico is certainly the keynote of the Times prospectus; but it seems to me that no public benefit is to be derived from it. The Times will obtain a number of fresh subscribers—an advantage from advertisers, among whom publishers are not an inconsiderable quantity. They have nothing to offer which cannot be derived already by the public through ordinary channels, except impetuosity; and it seems a big price to pay for this unmarketable article. Two not inconsiderable sections of the public will suffer severely, even if the scheme only lasts for twelve months—and it is good gingerbread the gilt has not been pulled off in that time. Publishers cannot afford to publish without the co-operation of the booksellers; and the booksellers cannot afford to stock books which will be sold at half-price within six months or little more. The Times cannot buy the individuality and knowledge of the booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland. Whether these are of public value will be quite apparent, either to the cost of the booksellers themselves or of the Times in particular, within a year. If the Times can give more unrequited time and attention to the public than individual booksellers do, they will succeed; but meantime it is quite apparent to any sane man that their success spells ruin to hundreds of poorly paid and hard-working men as well as those who depend upon their knowledge and efforts. Authors and publishers will do well to consider the end thereof before venturing to share in gigantic advertising speculations.

For my own part, neither as a publisher nor as a bookseller shall I have anything to do with such a scheme. I give honest thought and value to my customers, and they know it. My fellow-tradesmen can all do the same, and have the same reward. It matters not to me whether the Times ignores me or not. I have lived without the Times, and the Times can die without my help.

We booksellers are a long-suffering race; but I am always wary of the dog who does not bark—he means business.—I am, yours faithfully,

William J. Hay.

FLAT-BACK BOOKS.

Dear Sir,—Re flat-backed books, I notice the complaint of one of your correspondents, and also your statement that the flat backs came from America. If so it must have been a long time ago, as I have books bound half calf, with quite square flat backs, for my late father (who died at least twenty years ago) in 1826, and I have had scores of books through my hands—Penny Cyclopædia, Saturday Magazine, Penny Magazines, &c.—bound fifty or sixty years ago, with quite flat backs, with the label, 'Bound by John Ismay, Wigton,' and very well they stand. Even large 4to Bibles used to be bound in this style. Ismay was not the inventor of the style, which was quite common at the time I speak of.—Yours truly, T. McMechan.

Wigton, Cumberland.

[We think Mr. McMechan will find that we said the flat back is an American notion, or rather it grew into fashion there. It was the importation of American novels with flat backs which set the fashion for it here.—Ed.]

PUNCH AND JUDY.

Sir,—Will you please have the enclosed inserted in your next issue, and oblige

Robt. Riviere & Son.

29 Heddon Street, Regent Street, W.:
November 28.

Messrs. Riviere & Son would be obliged, should any bookseller be offered a copy of Punch and Judy in calf extra, or with the covers taken off, if they would communicate at once with them.

PHIL MAY'S ANNUAL.

Sir,—We beg to inform you that Phil May's Annual will not be published this year.—Yours faithfully,

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.—'Cassell's Magazine.' Yearly volume. This handsomely bound, bulky volume, delightfully serves two purposes: it provides varied and absorbing reading for those who are bookishly inclined, and it serves as a most interesting gallery of pictures for those who desire to be more superficially amused. For the former class there are serial stories by Max Pemberton and William Le Queux, plentiful supply of short fiction effectively appealing to the imagination, and numerous articles on social, dramatic, and art subjects, while for the latter the portraits of celebrities in various walks of life alone should prove an irresistible attraction. 'In the Arena,' a monthly feature of the magazine, portrays photographically all the men and women who for the time being are most prominently before the public, and there are also special articles on some of the more favoured few, such as Miss Marie Hall, Mr. E. A. Abbey, R.A., Mr. William Le Queux, Mr. Thomas Brock, R.A., Mr. W. Q. Orchardson, R.A., Mr. Martin Harvey, Mr. E. S. Willard, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., Mr. Tom Browne, and 'Cynicus.' To convey an adequate impression of all the good things, literary and pictorial, that the yearly volume of 'Cassell's Magazine' contains would be a sheer impossibility, and we can only say that the measure is generous, well pressed down and overflowing.

From Messrs. James Clarke & Co.—'The Debt of the Damerals,' by Bessie Marchant (Mrs. J. A. Comfort). We are afraid Mrs. Comfort has scarcely displayed to sufficient dramatic purpose the numerous incidents with which this story is packed, but its simple method of narration will doubtless have charms for many readers. The rescue of a sweet girl in distress at a railway station by an impressionable high-minded hero, is followed through a succession of happenings by the discovery that she is heiress to a large sum of money left by the hero's grandmother. He, on the other hand, is reduced to poverty, but as she marries him everything is made right. The book is suitably illustrated.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—'A History of Theatrical Art in Ancient and Modern Times,' by Karl Mantzius. Authorised translation by Louise von Cossel. Volume IV.—'Molière and his Times.' We have previously in these columns spoken of the great interest attaching to this work and of the care shown in its translation. The present instalment treats of the theatre in France during the seventeenth century, the predominant figure being Molière, and it includes a sketch of the life of that great dramatist, which the author is anxious should not be regarded as a biography properly so called, though it partakes of that character. 'It supplies more of the background of theatrical history and of the milieu in which the great actor-manager lived,' he points out, 'than is found in the ordinary biographies of Molière; whereas the reader who looks for detailed information about Molière as a poet, and desires an æsthetic appreciation of his works, will not find what he seeks in these chapters.' The words we have quoted very faithfully depict the character of the volume, and we need only add that it is attractively written and profusely illustrated.

From Messrs. Harmsworth, Carmelite House, E.C. — The 'Harmsworth Self-Educator,' Part 3, continues the good work so successfully inaugurated in the opening number, and is a wonderful storehouse of useful information, concisely imparted, clearly printed, and suitably illustrated.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton. — 'I.N.R.I.: a Prisoner's Story of the Cross,' by Peter Rosegger, translated by Elizabeth Lee. This is a very remarkable book, which no less by the character of its subject as the ability with which it is written should attract wide attention. It is 'the record of a prisoner condemned to death, who, with the vision of his mother and her teaching and of the Jesus she pictured becoming ever stronger with every night and waking dream, begins to write over again, and in his own language, the story of Jesus.' For six weeks he lies in prison feverishly awaiting the execution of his sentence, and then the efforts made on his behalf are found to have been successful, and he is pardoned. The conception of the narrative, and the beautiful simplicity with which it is unfolded, are bound to make a great impression on readers of a refined religious type. As may readily be foreseen, no little of the perfect success of such a work will depend upon the translation, and in this respect Miss Lee is to be warmly congratulated. She has discharged the duties of a very difficult task with great sympathy and skill. Only one slip do we perceive, and that is of so slight a description as scarcely to warrant mention. Konrad Fertleitner at the commencement of the book becomes Conrad Fertleitner at the end. Would it not have been as well to retain the same spelling throughout?

From Mr. T. Werner Laurie—'The Burlesque Napoleon: being the Story of the Life and the Kingship of Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, Brother of Napoleon the Great,' by Philip W. Sergeant, B.A. The present age, it seems almost pedantic to remark, so palpable is the fact, inclines more to light entertaining literature than to works of a substantial character, and in this respect Mr. Sergeant's work should prove exactly to the public taste. By comparison with his celebrated brother, Jerome Bonaparte of course takes a very subsidiary place, and yet the volatile worthless fellow, whose life was principally devoted to love intrigues, which he carried on from a very early age until he had reached the allotted span of man's earthly existence, presented many features of keen interest. In him the attributes of an inflexible determination, not to say obstinacy, which carried the great Napoleon to the highest pinnacle of fame, were devoted to an utterly unworthy object, yet were they there all the same; and for the student of character it forms an absorbing occupation to note the evidences of blood relationship between the two men. Mr. Sergeant in this volume has almost entirely confined himself to the frivolous side of Westphalian history. That 'Jerome the rake, Jerome the spendthrift, Jerome the designer of Court costumes, Jerome the inventor of baths of Bordeaux' (to say nothing of more potent liquids) should have ruled Wesphalia wisely for his distinguished brother he dismisses as an agreeable fiction of the apologists by whom no public man was ever unattended. However, whatever opinion may be held as to the subject of this volume, there can be no question that Mr. Sergeant has written an extremely entertaining work, the interest of which is enhanced by several illustrations. It is a book that will afford thoroughly enjoyable reading, piquantly tinged with a flavour of worldly insight.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—'St. Giles's of the Lepers,' by Edward C. W. Grey. This volume, in addition to its intrinsic value as an antiquarian record, possesses a melancholy interest, seeing that its author, who for thirty-four years worked continuously in the London parish of St. Giles's-in-the-Fields, has recently died. One can-but sorrowfully wonder now at the exceeding care with which he gathered together these interesting details, the result of his long and close acquaintanceship with the neighbourhood, and cherish the evidence that to him it was manifestly a labour of supreme attraction. The volume opens with an account of the Leper Hospital, founded so far back as the twelfth century, written in rather a tutorial style, which generally pervades the book and may be accounted for by the author's experience with pupils. He next shows how round the hospital a village arose, and so carries us in his history of the locality through the reigns of Elizabeth and succeeding sovereigns to the present day. The second part of the book is devoted to what the author terms 'Peripathetic and Gossip'—in other words, we accompany him in walks about the neighbourhood, and he tells us of the interesting historical features attaching to the various buildings; while in the third and concluding portion we are placed in possession of several personal reminiscences.

From the Leadenhall Press, Ltd.—'Mohammed Aben Alamar: a Legend,' by Stephen Syeds. Mohammed Aben Alamar was the first Moorish King of Granada. Not satisfied with Allah's wonderful gifts, he wished to penetrate into Paradise; his wish was granted, and Mohammed was taken up through the seven shining circles of Paradise into the presence of Allah. Rebuked for his discontent, his eyes were opened to the wonderful teachings of Nature. Mr. Syeds has taken this legend and made a poem out of it—a poem of forty-six six-line stanzas; this, by means of drawings, blank pages, notes, &c., is made into a volume of sixty pages. The verses are of mediocre quality, but the drawings of M. Alison Atkins show imagination and real feeling.

From Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son—'The Song of Ages,' by R. J. Campbell, M.A. Sermons rarely make attractive reading, and the present volume is no exception to the rule. Its contents seek to attract the reader's attention by what we consider rather doubtful methods, and there is a note of cocksureness in all of them which is exceedingly irritating. The inevitable photograph and facsimile autograph of the author are given as frontispiece; Mr. Campbell's hair is arranged very nicely, and he contrives to look very 'interesting.'

From Mr. Andrew Melrose.—'The Power of Play,' by George Hamilton Archibald. In discussing the place and power of play in child-culture, Mr. Archibald has, we think, struck the right note. Trained through the medium of play, a child is developed along his own lines, his nature unfolding itself gladly and yielding almost unconsciously to the hand of the cultivator. Self-reliance, courage, energy—the qualities which go to make real men and women—are impressed upon children in their play far more readily than they can be in the schoolroom. The section devoted to physical defects in children will be found specially useful to parents and teachers, although the whole book may recommended to them as grateful reading.

From Mr. John Murray.—'The Odyssey,' translated by J. W. Mackail. Books IX.-XVI. Mr. Mackail merits the warm praise both of those to whom Homer's great work is familiar in the original and of the much larger class who are only able to make acquaintance with the Odyssey through an interpreter. He has given us a translation of the epic which is scholarly in treatment, vigorous in tone, and of rare sympathy with the subject. In reading his stirring lines one realises to the full the strength and breadth of the Greek poet, his wonderful gifts of imagination and graphic pictures of manners. Did our space permit, we should like to quote several verses in verification of what we have said; but as it is, we can only strongly advise the lover of the classics to consult the book for himself. Mr. Mackail has also published a translation of the first eight books of the Odyssey, and we presume though nothing is said to this effect in the present work, the remainder of the poem will form the subject-matter of a third volume. When completed the translation should take a high place among standard works.

From Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.—'What Foods Feed Us,' by Eustace Miles. It is no doubt true that people have little knowledge of the constituents of the food they eat, and are chiefly influenced by considerations of weight and bulk. Who has not heard the big, burly man recommending his friend of less generous proportions to take a good beefsteak as a remedy for his physical ailments? Mr. Miles's book is not only interesting, but of distinct health advantage. For the most part he penetrates to the root of his subject.

From the same.—'Drawings of A. von Menzel.' Menzel as an artist can scarcely be said to be well known in this country, and most people, even among those generally well informed, would, on being interrogated, find it difficult to assign him his particular walk in life. Yet that he possessed remarkable talent the drawings in this volume, no less than the records of his life, present clear proof. In an interesting Introduction, Prof. H. W. Singer gives some particulars relating to the artist's life and evinces a keen appreciation of his work. For the all round production of the volume we have every praise.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner & Co., Ltd.—'The God of This World,' by John B. Middleton. This is a tale for the times, and the god is Mammon. The year is 1986, and England has become a strange land indeed. Gerard Staunch, a young priest, renouncing the creed of the Imperial city, throws in his lot with the down-trodden dwellers in Serphton, and the consequences are one long nightmare. Much of the interest centres round a strange figure, 'Father Cecil,' who is apparently intended for Lord Hugh Cecil, and who has managed to live through the upheaval which has entirely done away with the England that we know. As a story it is not without a certain interest, but as a sermon against social evils and inequalities we hardly think it successful. It is too far removed from probability to be taken seriously.

From Alston Rivers, Ltd.—'The Siege of the South Pole: the Story of Antarctic Exploration,' by Hugh Robert Mill, LL.D., D.Sc. Two prominent features are deserving of mention in connection with Dr. Mill's work. In the first place, the author has based this history of Antarctic exploration as far as possible on original narratives and on the conversation of the men who themselves took part in it; and secondly, in trying to elucidate the origin as well as to describe the events of the various expeditions, he has assumed that from the historical point of view the motive and the aim are as important as the resulting achievement or failure. Building up his volume, then, on this foundation, Dr. Mill, after two brief introductory chapters dealing with voyages which fell short of the Antarctic Circle, describes the various expeditions that were organised during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in search of the 'South Land,' writes at length about the exploits of Captain James Cook, has something to say as to the part played by the American sealers in the work of discovery, and in succession records the voyages of Bellingshausen, Weddell, Biscoe, and others. In this way he comes to the Victorian era, and his canvas becomes more crowded with notable figures. General Sir Edward Sabine, K.C.B., Baron von Humboldt, Admiral Dumont D'Urville, Lieut. Charles Wilkes, U.S.N., James Clark Ross, Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker, G.C.S.I., Sir John Franklin, Sir John Murray, and numerous others are treated of in turn, with the part they have played in Antarctic Exploration. The result is a volume of a very fascinating description, replete with the utmost interest for those fond either themselves of travelling or partial to listening to the adventures of others. Of most of the explorers we have mentioned portraits are given, and there are numerous other illustrations, with maps and diagrams.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—'French Nan,' by Agnes and Egerton Castle. These authors' refined fancy, distinguished by such a pretty artificiality and piquant expression, will no doubt go far, but we are disposed to think that in their present novel they have spread it over too unsubstantial a subject. 'French Nan' is simply the story of a young flighty, not over intellectually encumbered madam, who in the days of Queen Anne trifled with her honest husband's affections to the verge of complete rupture. Deserting him in his country home for the attractions of town life, she was placed through her insensate folly in many perilous positions, and was eventually brought by very practical experiences to recognise the foolishness of her conduct and the good attributes of her husband, who had followed her up to the giddy metropolis to protect her. Readers who valued the authors' previous works may be interested to know that Kitty Bellairs who then figured so largely, has a place, though necessarily a subsidiary one, in the present work. The illustrations are by F. H. Townsend.

From Messrs. Sweet & Maxwell, Ltd.—'Trial of Madeleine Smith,' edited by A. Duncan Smith, F.S.A. This is the first volume of a projected series of books dealing with notable Scottish trials, and for sheer mystery and psychological interest no better beginning could have been made than with the extraordinary case of Madeleine Smith. The case was tried in Edinburgh half a century ago, but it is still studied with ardent interest by students of law and human nature. Mr. Duncan Smith's edition is of greater interest than that of Irvine, published many years ago. It contains thirteen Appendices, all of considerable importance. An introductory essay puts the uninformed reader in possession of the main facts of the case—sufficient, indeed, for the verbatim report to be thoroughly understood. Six illustrations are included, one of them being a facsimile of Madeleine Smith's handwriting, and another a reproduction of the handwriting of L'Angelier, for the alleged poisoning of whom Miss Smith was tried. The book is well edited, but there are, we think, two directions in which it might have been improved. Madeleine Smith's letters have been expurgated of several 'indelicate' passages; these passages were read at the trial, and if they were necessary then for a true understanding of the case they are equally necessary now. In any case to all earnest students of psychology they would have been of the greatest interest and value. Secondly, we regret the omission of any account of Miss Smith's career after her acquittal. The present writer remembers being told that Mr. Minnock kept to his engagement and married her, but his informant had forgotten the source from which he had obtained his information.

From Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.—'The Interpreters: a Story of Cross Purposes,' by Margaretta Byrde. This might well have been called a story of cross currents rather than purposes, for its pathway is so threaded across with numerous interests as to become almost indistinguishable. Miss Byrde has yet to learn that it is best to have a clear and definite aim when constructing fiction, and to so arrange matters that all else shall be subsidiary to the main purpose and yet shall intensify the general effect. To write disconnectedly, introducing numerous characters whose doings are enlarged upon out of all proportion to the picture, is simply to render matters blurred and indistinct. We start fairly enough in her story on the trail of the trust bequeathed to Arthur Dyne by his dead brother, and our interests are strongly elicited in Agnes Vandeleur, the rather exceptional music-hall artiste; but presently we find ourselves in such an entanglement of superfluous matter that our hold on the story slackens, and eventually, to use the phraseology of a popular song, we hardly know where we are. We willingly admit the cleverness of many of Miss Byrde's character sketches; the unfortunate part is that she has allowed them to get out of hand and to overbalance the narrative. The interest with which we started on the book is hopelessly swamped before a third of it has been read.

New Editions, Reprints, &c.—Messrs. Macmillan & Co. have added to their uniform edition of Mr. F. Marion Crawford's novels 'Marietta, a Maid of Venice,' and 'Cecilia, a Story of Modern Rome,' works which, if they do not exactly exhibit their author at his very best, are yet highly characteristic of his undoubted powers and may be pronounced interesting from cover to cover. Volumes emanating from Messrs. Macmillan are so certain of high-class production that to make any comment on this side of the series would be superfluous.—From Messrs. Alexander Moring, Ltd., we have received a new edition of 'All about Ships and Shipping,' a handbook of popular nautical information, with numerous diagrams, plans, and illustrations. The work of revision has been performed by Commander R. Dowling, R.N.R., master-mariner English and Japanese Mercantile Marine, who has also made many additions and generally brought the little book up to date. A short Preface is contributed by Lieut. W. G. Ramsay-Fairfax, R.N.—Messrs. Ralph, Holland & Co. have issued a useful little volume containing a reprint of the questions set at Certificate Examinations, 1902, 1903, 1904, with answers and hints to arithmetic, mensuration, and algebra by J. Lightfoot, D.Sc., M.A., an acknowledged authority on educational matters.—A copy of the second edition of 'An Analysis of Taswell-Langmead's English Constitutional History,' a very capable work by Mr. A. M. Wilshire, LL.B., has reached us from Messrs. Stevens & Haynes, the law publishers. — Mr. Thomas Law sends us a copy of 'Gipsy Smith: his Life and Work,' a picturesquely written volume which has now reached its fifty-fifth thousand. It is well and copiously illustrated, and is issued at a very cheap price.—Another cheap and very readable book is 'Critics or Christ?' by Hugh D. Brown, M.A. It is published by Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co., and is now in its third edition.

From Mr. Wm. Heinemann we have received two further volumes of his 'Favourite Classics,' containing the 'Essays of Elia,' by Charles Lamb, with an Introduction by Arthur Waugh, and a portrait frontispiece to each volume.

From the Gresham Publishing Company we have received Vol. III. of the 'World of To-day,' by A. R. Hope Moncrieff, dealing with Africa. The first two vols., which covered Asia, we have already noticed, and this volume maintains the interest already aroused; when complete, this series will be of the greatest value in every reference library.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack we have received two more volumes of the 'Told to the Children' series. These are entitled 'Stories from the Old Testament' and 'Stories from the Life of Christ.' Both are in the same dainty and charming get-up as the previous volumes, and this ought to have a very large sale for the Christmas season; there is nothing better in the market for children.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE WEEK.

WITH AN INDEX OF AUTHORS, TITLES, AND SUBJECTS OF BOOKS IN ONE ALPHABET.

All books are in cloth when not otherwise described. When the word 'net' is printed against the price of a book it means that there is not the usual trade allowance. The words of the Index which are printed in italics refer to the name under which the title of a work appears in larger type. Publishers who observe the omission of a book from the list will confer a favour by sending a copy of the title to the office for insertion in the next number.

⁂ In addition to the names of book sizes, such as cr. 8vo., royal 8vo., &c., the sizes are also given where possible in inches: inch = $2\frac{1}{2}$ centimètres.
